PICTURES OF MEMORY.

Among the beautiful pictures,
That hang on memory's walls
Is one of a dim old forest,
That seemeth best of all;
Not for its gnarled oaks olden,
Dark with the mistletoe;
Not for the violets golden
That sprinkle the vale below;
Not for the milk-white lilies
That lead from the fragrant hedge,
Coquetting all day with the sunbeams,
And stealing their golden edge;
Not for the vines on the upland
Where the bright red berries rest,
Nor the pinks, nor the pale sweet cowslip,
It seemeth to me the best.

I once had a little brother,
With eyes that were dark and deep—
In the lap of that dim old forest
He lieth in peace asleep;
Light as the down of the thistle,
Free from the winds that blow,
We rove there the beautiful summers,
The summers of long ago;
But his feet on the hills grew weary,
And, one of the autumn eves,
I made for my little brother
A bed of the yellow leaves.

Sweetly his pale arms folded
My neck in a meek embrace,
As the light of immortal beauty
Silently covered his face;
And when the arrows of sunset
Lodged in the tree-tops bright,
He fell, in his saint-like beauty,
Asleep by the gates of light.
Therefore, of all the pictures
That hang on memory's wall,
The one of the dim old forest
Seemeth the best of all.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

ONLY JONES.

The officers of Her Majesty's Twenty-fourth and Eighty-fourth infantry were sitting round their mess-table in Castletown, the capital of the Isle of Man, one evening more than thirty-years ago—that is, all of them except one; but then that one was only Jones. Nobody missed Jones; even his peculiarities had begun to be an old subject for "chaffing," and, indeed, he had such small attention to their chaffing that they had come to find it little pleasure, and, after some weeks of discomfort, Lieutenant Jones had been allowed to choose his own pleasures without much interference. These were not extravagant—a favorite book, a long walk in all kinds of weather, and a sail when the weather was favorable. He would not drink—he said it hurt his health; he would not shoot—he said it hurt his feelings; he would not gamble—he said it hurt his conscience; and he did not care to flirt or visit the belles of the capital—he said it hurt his affections. Once Captain de Renzy lispingly wondered if it was possible to "hurt his honor," and Jones calmly answered that "it was not possible for Captain de Renzy to do so." Indeed, Jones constantly violated all the gentlemen's ideas of proper behavior but for some reason or other no one brought him to account for it. It was easier for them to shrug their shoulders and call him "queer," or say "it was only Jones," or even quietly to assert his cowardice.

One evening Colonel Underwood was discussing a hunting party for the next day.—Jones walked into the room, and was immediately accosted:

"Something new, lieutenant. I find there are plenty of hares on the island, and we mean to give puss a run to-morrow. I have heard that you were a good rider. Will you join with us?"

"You must excuse me, colonel; such a thing is neither in my way of duty nor my pleasure."

"You forget the honor the colonel does you, Jones," says young Ensign Powell.

"I thank the colonel for his courtesy, but I can see no good reason for accepting it. I am very sure my horse would not approve of it, and I am sure the hare will not like it; and I am not a good rider; therefore I should not enjoy it."

"You need not be afraid," said the colonel, rather sneeringly, "the country is quite open, and these low Manx walls are easily taken."

"Excuse me, colonel, I'm afraid. If I should be hurt it would cause my mother and sisters very great alarm and anxiety. I am very much afraid of doing this."

What was to be done with a man so obtuse regarding conventionalities, and who boldly asserts his own cowardice? The colonel turned away, half contemptuously, and Ensign Powell took Jones' place.

The morning proved to be a very bad one, with the prospect of a rising storm, and as the party gathered in the barracks yard, Jones said earnestly to his colonel:

"I am afraid, sir, you will meet with a severe storm."

"I think so, lieutenant; but we promise to dine at Gwynne Hall, and we shall get that far at any rate."

So they rode rather gloomily away in the rain. Jones attended to the military duties assigned to him, and then, about noon, walked seaward. It was hard work by this time to keep his footing on the quay, but amid the blinding spray and mist he saw quite a crowd of men going rapidly toward the great Scarlet Rock, a mile beyond the town. He stopped an old sailor, and asked:

"Is anything wrong?"

"A little steamer, sir, off Calf of Man; she is driving this way; an, intent, I fear she will be on ta rocks afore to-night."

Jones stood still a moment, and then followed the crowd as fast as the storm would let him. When he joined them they were gathered on the summit of a huge cliff watching the doomed craft. She was now within sight, and it was evident that her seamen had lost all control of her. She would ere long be flung by the waves upon the jagged and frightful rocks toward which she was driving. In the lull of the wind, not only the booming of the minute gun, but also the shouts of the imperiled crew, could be heard.

"What can be done?" said Jones to an old man whose face betrayed the strongest emotion.

"Nothing, sir, I am afraid. If she'd managed to round ta rocks she would have gone to pieces on ta sand, and there are plenty of men who would have risked their life to save life. But how are we to reach them from this height?"

"How far are we above water?"

"This rock goes down like a wall forty fathoms, sir."

"What depth of water at the foot?"

"Thirty feet or more."

"Good. Have you plenty of light, long rope?"

"Much as you want, sir; but let me tell you, sir, you can't live ten minutes down there! Ta first wave will throw you on ta rocks and dash you ta pieces. Plenty of us would put you down, but you can't swim if you get down."

"Do you know, old mate, what surf swimming is? I have dived through the surf at Honolulu."

"God bless you, sir. I thought no white man could do the same."

While this conversation was going on, Jones was divesting himself of all superfluous clothing and [illegible]

"The thick sleeves will prevent the rope cutting my body, you see."

"Ay, ay, sir; I see now what you are doing."

"Now, men, I have only one request: Give me plenty of rope as fast as I draw on you. When I get on board—you know how to make a cradle, I suppose?"

"Ay, ay, sir, but how are you going to reach the water?"

"I am going to plunge down. I have dived from the main yard of the Ajax before this. It was a high leap."

He passed a double coil of rope around his waist, examining it carefully to see that there was plenty to start with, and saying:

"Now, friends, stand out of the way and let me have a clean start," raised his bare head one moment toward heaven, and, taking a short run, leaped as from the spring board of a plunge bath.

Such an anxious crowd as followed that leap. Great numbers, in spite of the dangerous wind, lay flat on their breasts and watched him. He struck the water at least twenty-five feet beyond the cliff, and disappeared in its dark, foamy depths.

When he rose to the surface he saw just before him a gigantic wave, but he had time to breathe, and before it reached him dived below its centre. It broke in passionate fury upon the rocks, but Jones was far beyond it. A mighty cheer from the men on shore reached him and now he began in good earnest to put his Pacific experience into practice.

Drawing continually on the men for more rope—which they paid out with deafening cheers—he met wave after wave in the same manner, diving under them like an otter and getting nearer the wreck with every wave, really advancing, however, more below the water than above it.

Suddenly the despairing men on board heard a clear, hopeful voice:

"Help at hand, captain; throw me a buoy."

And in another minute or two Jones was on the deck, and the cheers from the little steamer were echoed by the cheers of the crowd on the land. There was not a moment to be lost; she was breaking up fast; but it took but a few moments to fasten a strong cable to the small rope and draw it on board and then a second cable, and the communication was complete.

"There is a lady here, sir," said the captain. "We must rig up a chair for her, she can never walk that dangerous rope."

"But we have not a moment to spare, or we may all be lost; is she very heavy?"

"A slight little thing—half a child, sir."

"Bring her here."

This was no time for economy. Without a word, save a few sentences of direction and encouragement, he took her under his left arm and, steadying himself with the upper cable, walked on the lower one with his burden safely to the shore. The crew rapidly followed, for in such moments of extremity the soul masters the body and all things become possible.

There was plenty of help waiting for the seamen, and the lady, her father and the captain had been put in the carriage of Braddon, and driven rapidly to the hospital hall.

Jones, amid the confusion, disappeared.—He had picked up an oil-skin coat, and when every one turned to thank their deliverer he was gone. No one knew him; the sailors said they believed him to be "one of the military guests by his rigging," but the individuality of the hero troubled no one until the danger was over. In an hour the steamer was driven on the rocks and went to pieces, and it being by this time quite dark, every one went home.

The next day the hunting party returned from Gwynne hall, the storm having compelled them to stop all night, and at the supper that evening, the wreck and the hero of it were the theme of everyone's conversation.

"Such a plucky fellow," said Ensign Powell. "I wonder who he was? Gwynne says he was a stranger; perhaps one of that crowd staying at the bay."

"Perhaps," said Captain Marks, "it was Jones."

"Oh, Jones would be too afraid of his mother."

Jones made a little bow, and said pleasantly, "Perhaps it was Powell," at which Powell laughed and said, "Not if he knew it."

In a week the event had been pretty well exhausted, especially as there was to be a great dinner and ball at Braddon, and the officers had invitations. The ball had a peculiar interest, for the young lady who had been saved from the wreck would be present and rumors of her riches and beauty had been rife for several days. It was told that the little steamer was her father's private yacht, and that he was a man of rank and influence.

Jones said he would not go to the dinner, and either he or Seville must remain for evening drill, and that Seville loved a good dinner, while he cared very little about it.—Seville could return in time to let him ride over about ten o'clock and see the dancing. Seville rather wondered why Jones did not take his place all the evening, and felt half injured at his default. But Jones had a curiosity about the girl he had saved. To the truth, he was nearer in love with her than he had ever been with any woman, and he wished, in calm blood, to see if she was as beautiful as his fancy had painted her during those few awful minutes that he had held her high above the waves.

She was exceedingly lovely; just the fresh, innocent girl he had known she would be.—He had watched her dancing with his brother officers, or talking to her father, or leaning on Braddon's arm, and every time he saw her she looked fairer and sweeter. Yet he had not the courage to ask for an introduction, and in the busy ball-room no one seemed at leisure to give one. He kept his post against the conservatory door quite undisturbed for a long time. Presently he saw 'Squire Braddon with the beauty on his arm approaching him. As he passed the 'Squire remembered he had not been to dinner, and stopped to say a few courteous words, and introduced his companion.

"Miss Conyers—Lieutenant Jones."

But no sooner did Miss Conyers hear Lieutenant Jones' voice than she gave a joyful cry, and clapping her hands together, said:

"I have found him! Papa! Papa! I have found him!"

Never was there such an interruption to a ball. The company gathered in excited groups; and papa knew the lieutenant's voice, and the captain knew it, and poor Jones, unwilling enough, had to acknowledge the deed and be made a hero of.

It was wonderful, after this night, what a change took place in Jones' quiet ways. His books and boats seemed to have lost their charms, and for his walks, they were all in one direction, and ended at Braddon hall. In about a month Miss Conyers went away, and then Jones began to haunt the post-office, and to get pretty little letters which always seemed to take a great deal of answering.

Before the end of winter he had an invitation to Conyers' to spend a month; and a furlough being granted, he [illegible] good-bye for Kent. Jones [illegible] in the Eighty-fourth. He [illegible] diplomatic [illegible] under the [illegible] Thomas Conyers.

Here is the Hon. Thomas Jones and his lovely bride! We are going to India, gentlemen, next month, and I am sorry the Eighty-fourth has lost Lieutenant Jones; I have no doubt, whatever that he would storm a fort as bravely as he boarded a wreck."

MAMMOTH TREES OF CALIFORNIA.

BY REV. ISLAH W. BROWN.

Among the many wonders which the tourist finds in the "Sunset Land" are the big trees, called by the botanist "Sequoia Gigantea," the first title from the name of a celebrated Cherokee Indian, the last from their size, which is truly gigantic. There are some seven or eight different groves found along the sides of the Sierra Nevadas, the most celebrated of which are the Calaveras and the Mariposa. The Calaveras was the first discovered, is the best known, and most frequently visited. It contains, within an area of fifty acres, over one hundred trees. The Mariposa grove, which is the one selected by Congress for preservation, contains six hundred trees. At first, as in visiting Niagara, Yosemite, the Pyramids, or St. Peters at Rome, you are disappointed in your impressions of the size of these trees. One needs a long look and much measuring and comparing, to take in all their giant proportions; but they seem to grow as you look at them, until disappointment gives way to amazement. Surrounding the "big trees" are great pines over two hundred feet high, and having a diameter of from eight to eleven feet; but they are insignificant dwarfs compared with the monster Sequoias.

The larger of these giants of the forest range in height from two hundred to three hundred and fifty feet, though some of the prostrate monarchs must have reached an altitude of four hundred, or four hundred and fifty feet. They vary in circumference from forty to one hundred feet. Probably one fourth of all are twenty-five feet in diameter, many are thirty, and some are from thirty to forty feet across the base.—Some of the limbs are full six feet in diameter. "The Mother of the Forest," in the Calaveras Grove, now dead, but still standing, is three hundred and twenty seven feet high. Some years since the bark was stripped from this tree for one hundred and sixteen feet, carried to England, and there placed on exhibition. Your correspondent saw it in the London Crystal Palace in 1867. "The Father of the Forest," whose huge prostrate form now lies in the same grove, has a diameter of thirty seven feet, and measures one hundred and twelve feet in circumference at the base. The top was broken off three hundred feet from its roots by falling against another tree, and it was found to be sixteen feet in diameter at the break. Through the trunk, which has been hollowed out by fire, one can ride on horse-back for seventy-five feet, and then, if he feels like it, "crawl through a knot-hole." The lumber of this tree would build quite a number of good-sized houses, or its trunk, hollowed out, would make the hull of an ocean steamer.

One, and only one, of these gigantic trees has been felled by the hand of man. In this work five men were employed twenty-five days, not chopping, but with long augers boring it down. This tree was found to be over three hundred feet long, ninety-two feet in circumference at the base, and sound to the very heart. It is said that after the surface of the stump was smoothed off a Fourth of July party of thirty-two persons danced four sets of cotillions on it at once, leaving room at the same time for musicians and spectators. On this stump there now stands a good-sized circular house, which, according to an estimate made by our lamented Bishop Kingsley, contains room enough in square feet for a parlor twelve by sixteen feet, a dining room ten by fifteen, a kitchen ten by twelve, two bedrooms ten feet square, a pantry four by eight feet, two clothes presses four feet wide and one and a half feet deep, and still have one square foot to spare.

The bark is of a dark yellow color, light and soft, and from six to twenty inches in thickness. The wood is soft and elastic, and of a light red color, resembling cedar. The cones, in size and shape, resemble hens' eggs. The trees bear two sets of leaves, the one is a small, narrow, bright evergreen, less than an inch in length; the others are like those of the spruce or hemlock. The seeds are as small and thin as those of the parsnip plant.

A SCOTCH EFFORT AT YARNING.

Concerning the long-bow no American effort can surpass the one that comes to us from Scotland, and printed in the current number of Harper's Magazine. We give the English of it:

Colonel Andrew McDowall, when he returned from the war, was one day walking along by the river, when he came on an old man sitting on a stone at the roadside, crying. When he came up, the old man rose and took off his hat, and said,

"Ye're welcome home again, my lord."

"Thank you," said the colonel; adding after a pause, "I should surely know your face. Aren't you Nathan McCulloch?"

"Ye're right, deed," says Nathan; "it's just me my lord."

"You must be a good age now, Nathan," says the colonel.

"I'm not very old yet, my lord," was the reply; "I've just turned a hundred."

"A hundred!" says the colonel, musing; "well, you must be all that. But the idea of a man of a hundred sitting blubbering that way! What ever could you get to cry about?"

"It was my father lashed me, sir," said Nathan, blubbering again; "and he put me out, so he did."

"Your father!" said the colonel; "is your father alive yet?"

"Living! aye," replied Nathan; "I know that to-day to my sorrow."

"Where is he?" says the colonel. "What an age he must be! I would like to see him."

"Oh, he's up in the barn there," says Nathan, "and not in a horrid good humor, either."

They went up to the barn together, and found the father busy threshing the barley with the big flail, and tearing on fearful. Seeing Nathan and the laird coming in, he stopped and saluted the colonel, who, after inquiring how he was, asked him what he had struck Nathan for.

"The young rascal," says the father, "there's no doing with him; he's never out of mischief. I had to lick him this morning for throwing stones at his grandfather!"

HOW SHE READ HER HUSBAND'S LETTERS.

A middle-aged woman had a letter handed her at the general delivery in the post office the other day, and she sat down on a window-sill to read it. Her interest was intense from the start, and she spoke up and said:

"He calls me his little darling! That's good!"

After reading a few lines more, she said:

"And he misses my society so much!"

Half way down the page she spoke again:

"And he calls me his sunbeam—his guardian angel!"

She climbed up on the sill a little further, turned the letter over, and mused:

"And he's lost three pounds of flesh worrying about my health! He's just a dear, loving old darling—that's what he is!"

She reached the top of the fourth page, and exclaimed:

"What! going East, eh?"

Further down she growled:

"And he met that red-headed Widow Kershaw on the cars, eh? I'll see about that! He probably didn't tell her he was married!"

She got down to the "P. S.," glanced over a couple of lines, and then yelled right out:

"Not coming home until next week! Trains not running! Great press of business! I'll see whether he isn't coming! Boy? where's the telegraph office?"

And she ran across the street, and sent her husband a dispatch which made the operator's hair stand up as he received and read it.

WHITHER ARE WE DRIFTING.

He was a singular-looking customer, and in a crowd of a thousand you would not have picked him out for a millionaire. He passed through the market with his thumbs thrust through the armholes of his vest, and when he reached a fruit stand he surprised the owner by observing:

"You may measure me five quarts of your choicest strawberries."

"Haven't any strawberries," replied the attendant, "been out of season four months."

"H'm," mused the man, "no strawberries! Well, I'll leave my address, and you may send me a basket of the best peaches you have."

"No peaches in the market," explained the fruiter. "The season's over."

"No peaches, either!" said the strange customer, with a surprised look. "The whole country voting for hard, honest money, and I can't purchase a few strawberries or peaches! In the language of the immortal Shakespeare, 'whither are we drifting?'"

Five minutes later he had drifted up to a meat stall and was trying to "Jew down" ten cents on a calf's liver.—Nor. Herald.

TO THE COMMON COUNCIL ELECT.

GENTLEMEN:—

Having heard that you have been invited to one or two parlor entertainments, to be advised as to your duty in the conduct of the city's affairs during the coming year, I feel that I shall not be more presumptious than others have been, if I venture, thus publicly, to treat you to an expression of my sentiments. I have before me the call of the meeting which nominated you; which meeting "all citizens interested in securing an upright and non-partisan administration of city affairs were earnestly requested to attend." This call furnishes the chart by which you are to sail; and I venture to predict that you will heed it; and that, however we may differ as to your acts, we may safely trust you to be "upright and non partisan."

The first matter that will claim your attention is your organization. In my opinion, any effort to organize with reference to the politics of your number will not be "non-partizan." It is to be hoped that your President will be chosen solely with reference to his fitness to be your presiding officer; and that he, in turn, will constitute the Committees upon the same principle. One of your number I consider the handsomest man in the city, with a well-balanced mind, and I believe he would give great grace and dignity to the office. Through the spectacles of a second beams the light of a great good nature, and the fire of a strong will, qualities that would, I think, admirably fit him for the position. And there is a third, whose face has been wreathed with smiles ever since the result of the election was declared, (though it did look a little serious with apprehension at one time while the voting was going on) whose oft expressed wish to "please everybody" might fit him for the place, were it not that the effort to please everybody generally results in pleasing nobody. These are all Republicans. Amongst the Democrats there is one whose Aldermanic proportions would certainly enable him to "fill the Chair," and then—"Uncle John" is in reserve.

You have no doubt heard of what is known as "The liquor question." I think few intelligent lovers of their fellow men will disagree with me, that "prohibition" would be desirable if it were only practicable; but the twenty years' experience of the State of Massachusetts has, I think, demonstrated that it is not practicable to prevent the sale of liquor. I know of but one person in the city who does not think that some sort of regulation is necessary. His election, it is said, would have "saved us half our School taxes," but somehow or other we're to be taxed as usual. It is a fundamental principle of free Government that all laws should be of uniform operation, and bear with equal effect upon every citizen. Any departure from this principle is tyranny. Therefore, in my judgment, we must either prohibit the sale of liquor, or any citizen, who complies with the law regulating its sale, is entitled to sell it. To say that "A," a citizen reputable enough to be authorized to sell, may do so; while "B," an equally reputable person, shall not, is, in my opinion, contrary to the fundamental principle above stated. I have heard, since your election, several parties claim to have been the main instruments of the success of the Citizens' movement. Our friends, who believe in prohibition, agree with Mr. Harper's opponent (what was his name?) that they secured the victory. Those who agree with the principle of regulation above stated, claim to have done it; and I heard one—otherwise intelligent and sane—person declare, the other night, that the thing that pleased him most about the late city election was that it was a "great victory for the Greenbackers." So you see how we have unwittingly succeeded in restoring life to that dead body. And now, gentlemen, just go quietly to work, as the "upright and non-partisan" City Fathers, we all believe you to be; and if we don't like your work, why—next December is only a twelve-month off, and there'll be another city election then.

Yours,

J. P.

Cut this out—It May Save your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderous cures astonishes every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggists, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents.

L. M. FRENCH, the carriage manufacturer, has some elegant sleighs and cutters which he will dispose of at very low figures. See his advertisement.

THE merry jingle of the sleigh-bells are now heard on the streets, the fall of some four inches of snow on Jan. 1st and 2nd making very fair sleighing.

JULIAN SCOTT, the artist, has just completed a life-like portrait of Mr. Edward P. Thorn. He is also at work on the portraits of several other prominent citizens.

THE country editor who takes all his advertisements out in trade will be gratified to learn that a new pill, just patented, will keep a man alive without eating. All he wants now is to make him happy is a liver syrup that will make one suit of clothes last.

THE practice of "making calls" was indulged in to considerable extent in Plainfield on New Year's Day. The invariable salutation received from the hostess of the house to the caller was, "Happy New Year. How many calls have you made?" But little intoxication was observed during the day.

AN Ohio woman who died recently willed her local paper $125. That woman's chances of heaven are very good, but if a person wishes to make a sure thing of a happy hereafter, the amount he or she leaves to a newspaper should not be less than $10,000. Now is the time to make up ch— that is wills for this paper.

DOCTORS Ward and Wilson, of the Newark Medical and Surgical Infirmary, announce in another column a Free Lecture at Laing's Hall, Monday evening, Jan. 6th. Subject —"Human Life." The lecture is spoken highly of by the press, and all should not fail hearing it, as it may be the means of saving them hundreds of dollars.

MISS SCOTT-SIDDONS, the well-known Reader, will give an entertainment in Plainfield in the course of a couple of weeks. It was her intention to give Readings in the Congregational Church next week, but in consequence of it being the Week of Prayer it was deemed unadvisable to give the entertainment then, hence the postponement.

PREVIOUS to the present snow fall, skating was excellent, and the various ponds in and about the city, were covered night and day with merry skaters. A noticeable feature of the skating carnival this season is the absence of the female sex who formerly participated in and enjoyed this exhilarating exercise; but few lady skaters were to be seen on the ice.

THE HON. Neal Dow, author of the "Maine Law," will deliver an address in the Rev. Dr. Fordley's (Pres.) Church, Washington St., Newark, N. J., on Wednesday evening, Jan. 15th, 1879, at 7 o'clock. The eloquent Dr. Tiffany will speak in the same place on the next evening at 7:30. A great State Convention will be held through both days. All interested in Temperance are invited. A very strong programme has been prepared. The gathering promises to be one of the most influential.

THE advertisement of Messrs. Ebell & Price, dealers in Dry and Fancy Goods, which appears in another column, contains some special announcements, and our readers, who wish to secure bargains will do well to examine it carefully. We are glad to learn that this enterprising firm, who have so recently come to our city, are making rapid progress and are already established as one of our permanent institutions. All such acquisitions to our growing city are for its general good and prosperity. May they continue to prosper.

AT the "Star Theatre," of which Master J. H. Cuthbert is manager, a select entertainment was given on the afternoon of Thursday last. It consisted of a play in two acts, and reflected credit on its youthful manager. Master Fred. Cuthbert, as "Baldy's" wife, was especially good, and Master Daniel as Biddy was not inferior. With the exception of a few waste giving away, whiskers dropping, &c., the entertainment was very enjoyable. The cast was—J. H. Cuthbert, Landlord; Fred. Cuthbert, Paddy; I. W. Daniel, Biddy; Robt. Rushmore, Man Servant.

LAST Friday afternoon a number of our citizens visited Steinway Hall, N. Y. City, to hear the Oratorio Society, render "The Messiah" in its Second Public Rehearsal. The soloists on that occasion were Miss Minnie Hauk, soprano, Miss Anna Drasdil, contralto, Mr. George Simpson, tenor, Mr. M. W. Whitney, basso. The Society was aided also by the orchestra of Dr. Leopold Damrosch, and the entire affair was under the leadership of that gentleman. The music was simply grand, and indeed that monosyllable is hardly strong enough to express the feelings awakened by it. Plainfield people were to be seen scattered here and there in that great audience of [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] of approval show that they are capable of appreciating music that [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

MR. P. M. DEMAREST and wife celebrated the 21st Anniversary of their marriage on Wednesday last at their residence on Front Street, this city, the same occasion being the birth-day anniversary of Mrs. D. A large number of friends and acquaintances called upon them during the day and accepted their generous hospitality, tendering congratulations in return.

OUR ice merchants have been actively engaged in harvesting the season's crop of this useful commodity during the past three days. They are cutting fine ice, nine and ten inches thick from "Tier's Lake." The Messrs. Coddington Bros. are harvesting from the Green Valley pond. Several parties are filling their ice houses with fine ice cut from Hyde's pond above Richmond Street. There is no danger now but that a full supply will be secured for the next summer's use.

ON Tuesday morning last, in the Court of Special Sessions, at Elizabeth, on motion of Prosecutor Fay, the attention of the Court was directed to the case of William Igo, who was arrested at the 21 district on the day of the City election for illegally voting in Plainfield. The prisoner was arranged and plead guilty. The complaint charged him with voting in the 21 district after having voted in the 1st district. The Prosecutor stated that Igo had no right to vote in either district, as he was not a resident of the city, and that it is further intimated that to the crime of illegally voting, he added the crime of perjury by swearing his vote in. Judge McCormick sentenced the prisoner to one year in State Prison.

ON New Year's Eve, the Plainfield Saengerbund gave their second sociable at Heyder's Hall in very fine style. The members of the Society, their families, friends and sweethearts, in many cases, being surprised, by receiving a present.—President Maas, on behalf of the Society, presented Mr. Geo Braun with a handsome gold ring, as a token of esteem and showing that the society appreciates his services as Musical Director. The Committee, Messrs. Chas. Maas, Geo. Braun, John Hostger, Wm. Feifel and John Brunner, deserve great credit for the successful management of the affair. Longhorne, the photographer, and several merchants sent presents to the Society which were put up at 25 cents a chance and drawn for. Altogether the affair was a success. Flamm furnished the music.

A Generous Present.

Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, A. F & A. M., is the recipient of a munificent gift from one of its oldest members, Mr. Henry Latimer, who presents the members of the lodge with a large organ for their new lodge rooms, now being completed in Vandeventer's new building on Front Street. The cost of the organ is $1,350, although Mr. Reuben Midmer, the builder, in consideration of himself being a member of the fraternity, agrees to furnish the instrument for $1,200. It will have 500 pipes and two manuals and pedals. The case is to be an open front executed in black walnut. This generous gift of Mr. Latimer is warmly appreciated by the brethren.

Personalia.

Mr. S. C. Ryder has the sympathy of his numerous friends in his misfortune of having a painful wound on one of his hands, in consequence of running a large splinter under the thumb nail.

The Junior has again been in luck. That time friend Wm. Shotwell "forced" a fine turkey upon him. The Senior still lives. "Billy" is noted for his generosity, especially toward the printer.

Col. Wm. Stirling, of this city, aide on the Governor's staff, was one of the notables present at Gov. McClellan's residence on New Year's Day, where a fine reception was given. A large number of persons called on the Governor during the day.

Re-opening of the Public Schools.

The bell of the Public Schools began its New Year's calls promptly yesterday, (Thursday) morning, and soon the groups of school children in the streets gave proof that "resumption" at school at least was about to become an established fact. The storm kept some away as usual, but most of the class rooms were well filled, and after the usual opening exercises, the regular work of the school was entered upon as systematically and with as little delay as though the schools had closed only the night before. The reports for the month of December will be made up and given to the pupils on Tuesday night. The number of candidates for the Star Roll of Honor is about three times larger than it was at this time last year.

FIRE MATTERS.

The funeral of George T. Yatman, the fireman who met a frightful death at a fire in Newark on Christmas morning, took place on Sunday last from the North Baptist Church, Newark. The church was crowded to overflowing, the firemen of Newark and the Common Council being present in a body. The casket was imbedded in floral tributes. Conspicuous among the latter was a beautiful representation of a truck with ladders and a fireman's hat over all. Rev. [illegible] Burroughs officiated and delivered an exceedingly impressive discourse, in the course of which he paid an eloquent tribute to the worth and character of the true fireman who, like George Yatman, was ever ready to sacrifice even his life for his fellow men. The interment took place in the firemen's lot, at Mount Pleasant Cemetery, and was attended by a large concourse of people.

"Good [illegible] steamer, No. 1, was taken out for a wash on New Year's Day, and found to be in perfect working order.

The common Council of Rahway have passed an ordinance to re-organize the Fire Department of that City, the same having become demoralized in consequence of turbulent spirits creeping in as members. Sunday School Festivities.

The Christmas Festivals this year have been particularly noticeable, for their simplicity, nothing as elaborate as in former years has distinguished any one of them.—The season was ushered in on Christmas night by who entertained their little folks in a way calculated to make it an evening of entire enjoyment. By way of novelty, instead of being lighted with gas, the school room had a great number of Chinese lanterns, which made a light, not brilliant, but still very general. Miss Annie Titsworth, Kenilworth, sang several selections in her usual easy and sweet manner, while little Dollie Maxson effectually covered herself with glory in her role. Messrs. Thomas Stillman and Geo. Babcock performed some interesting and at the same time instructive experiments, relative to the use of "Fire." Mrs. Utter then sang a very pretty solo, after which the entire assemblage experimented with some refreshments. This last, we understand, was thoroughly appreciated and no very serious consequences have been mentioned. The night of the 27th was "a night of it," no less than six Sunday Schools finding it convenient to celebrate that evening.

THE FIRST BAPTIST

Sunday School assembled in the lecture room of that Church and at 7:45 o'clock marched up stairs to the music of a Christmas March, composed by Mr. Edwards and dedicated to the Sunday School. Mr. Edwards has added another bright spot to his already brilliant reputation as a composer, and the beautiful way in which he performed his part on the organ, and Mr. L. H. Moore on the cornet fully brought out all the composition's fine points. The singing of this School was up to the usual enviable standard and a semi-chorus of young ladies sang very sweetly and effectively. Miss Hewlett, of Brooklyn, sang a solo, "Christmas," by Gounod. Misses Anna Woodland and Minnie Bird recited appropriate selections in a creditable manner, and Mr. L. V. F. Randolph gave information in regard to "Pete's Christmas Tree." A regular, jolly, easy-going Christmas talk was indulged in by Mr. Isaac Davis, of Elizabeth, and as a fitting end to so much pleasantness, the school adjourned to the room below, and there satisfied themselves with the sweets of the land.

WARREN MISSION.

The Chapel of the Warren Union Mission blazed with light, echoed with music, and was the scene of as much happiness as could be crowded into a place of its size, at the festival on Thursday evening last. The Superintendent's platform had been arranged with fire-place and furniture to represent a family sitting room on Christmas Eve. The old clock ticked on the mantel-piece, and the pictures on the wall were wreathed with evergreen and holly. At one side the Christmas tree spread its branches, glistening with lighted tapers and loaded with goodies that made the young eyes snap and mouths to water. The exercises of the evening were brief and exceedingly appropriate. There was an address by Rev. K. P. Ketcham, a Christmas story admirably read by Mrs. E. St. John, and Christmas hymns and carols by the school. Sandwiches, cakes and goblets of milk were freely distributed and taken with a relish that can only be appreciated by those who have witnessed a supper at the Mission. The distribution of gifts closed the evening's entertainment, and included handsome presents from the teachers to the Superintendent, from the Scholars to the Superintendent, from various classes to their teachers—notably, a very beautiful book to Mr. D. M. Moore from the young ladies' class, and finally, gifts to each and every scholar in the school. Additional interest was given to this occasion by the retirement from the Superintendency of Mr. J. R. Perrine, who has held the position for six years, and who is beloved by every one connected with the Mission. Since his connection with the institution it has grown from a few small classes who met in the upper room of the old public school building, to a society with over 200 pupils, owning the beautiful chapel in which they meet, and doing a great Christian work. Mr. E. St. John succeeds Mr. Perrine.

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

This school, probably, had the most elaborate entertainment of all this year, if that is a proper term to use in connection with Sunday School festivals. The singing of the school was excellent, showing careful and thoughtful training. Miss Stella Bryant introduced "Pete" with his wonderful Christmas tree, and we have heard that the little gentleman showed a decided tendency to believe himself in the hands of a young lady. The "Old Woman who Lived in a Shoe" made her appearance with her multitudinous family, and Santa Klaus found in them an excuse for his arrival. After this the ever reliable box of candy made the intimate acquaintance of all the children. We have not heard whether paregoric or peppermint was present, but it is probable that they were used as a sort of after-[illegible]. The celebrated the occasion with old time warmth, and the occasion was one that will be a bright one in the memories of the scholars. Prizes were distributed among those who had not been absent a single Sabbath during the year. Rev. Dr. Lowry made a few pertinent remarks upon the time and occasion, after which ice cream and cake made their appearance and were quietly disposed of.

CENTRAL BAPTIST

THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN'S

festival was signalized by its simplicity and thorough enjoyment. Miss Hattie Smith read two or three selections, while Miss McKeage and Miss Jessie Smith sang a couple of solos in a creditable way. Ice cream, cake and candy made the hearts of the little ones glad. The

CRESCENT AVE

Presbyterian's entertainment was very plain. The singing by the school was good, and the "grub" in the minds of the small boys was better.

THE FRIENDS

School made merry with their friends Christmas day. The regular hospitable way in which these people usually welcome Christmas Day was by no means dispensed with on this occasion. Refreshments in the shape of cake and candy was distributed around and partaken of in a right jolly spirit. Friday evening last the

GRACE EPISCOPAL

Sabbath School had their little "time." Appropriate remarks were made by Dean Rodman, and the usual refreshments were made way with by the scholars.

THE HOLY CROSS

made use of Saturday afternoon for their "Christmasing." Rev. Mr. Murphy and Wm. J. Leonard talked a while in regard to the occasion, after which a beautiful shower made by the teeth, on the instruments known as confectionery, occupied the time of all present until the time of dismissal. On Monday, Dec. 30th,

THE C. [illegible] [illegible] S. S. [illegible] [illegible]

This S. S. has heretofore taken the lead at Christmas times, but this year, owing to the embarrassed condition of the church, it was thought advisable to have a plainer entertainment. A "jolly good time" was the pronounced opinion of all. The singing of the school, we think, has taken the lead of all the others, and this fact is owing almost entirely to the indefatigable efforts of Mrs. Wm. A. Freeman, the organist of the church. This lady may justly take to herself the credit of having made the school sing as it never before sang at any festival. Prof. L. H. Moore with his cornet, added another agreeable feature, and Rev. Dr. Lowry made a few amusing and highly [illegible] remarks. Miss [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Great credit is due to Mrs. Collier who so kindly took the place of the soprano of the church, Mrs. Stewart, who absent as her [illegible] was prostrated by a fit of sickness. Mrs. C. was fully able to meet the demands of the occasion, and her excellent ability in thus filling so important a place is highly commendable. The little ones marched merrily to their heart's content, and went home very tired, but thoroughly satisfied. New Year's night the wound up the season with their rejoicings. As far as we can learn the principal and most interesting feature to the infant class was, candy.

Candy to right of them.
Candy inside of them—
On! how they wondered.
On! how the peanuts flew;
'Twas good to see them chew,
Chew, chew, chew, chew, chew, chew,
As lips upon candy fed.

GERMAN CHURCH.

The little German church on 5th St., held their Christmas festival on Sunday eve, Dec. 29th, beginning at 6 p. m. The Christmas tree, under the auspices of Miss Schipper, presented a very pretty appearance—loaded with goodies and toys for the children. The following program was well carried out, the little ones reciting all the appropriation that was accorded them. [illegible] [illegible] Lied—"The kindlein [illegible]" [illegible] [illegible] tions by Mathilde [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Emilie Lang; [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Vortrag—Herr P[illegible] [illegible]. The tree was then quickly stripped of its varied burden, and distributed by the young lady assistants to the eager and happy little ones. Oranges, apples, cake and candies were then passed to all, old and young, and after the presentation of a very handsome and serviceable contribution basket by Mr. Schipper, the pastor, Herr Bauer, addressed the company in English, and closed with a hearty German benediction. This little church, though comparatively unknown, is slowly and surely coming forward, the debt having been raised through the kindness of several ladies and gentlemen of this city, and after a long struggle is now free. It is doing a good work among the Germans of our town, and needs only to be encouraged to become a recognized need in this community.

SCOTCH PLAINS BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Although the Scotch Plains Baptist Church has been without a pastor ever since the resignation of Rev. J. C. Buchanan in August last, yet a very flourishing Sabbath School is maintained. Its sessions are held in the lecture room of the Church every Sunday afternoon, rain or shine, at 3 p. m. It is under the management of the following named officers: L. H. K. Smalley, Sup't.; O. M. Putnam, Ass't. Sup't.; R. C. Treadwell, Sec; Wm. Van Valkenburg, Treas.; John Thyes, Librarian; Nelson B. Dunn, Assistant Librarian; Frank Wiley, Musical Director; Misses Hannah D. Hayes and Lizzie Nicholl, Organists. The teachers are L. H. K. Smalley, Miss E. S. Coles, Jno. I. Brower, Miss Mary Dunn, Miss Hannah D. Hayes, Miss Kate Stout, Miss Frank Allen, Miss Lizzie Nicholl, Wm. Van Valkenburg and Samuel Chappell. The average attendance of Scholars during the past year exceeds three quarters of the whole number. Last Monday evening was the occasion of their Christmas Anniversary, which was well gotten up and carried out, and largely attended. The following order of exercises was observed on that occasion. Organ Voluntary, by Prof. Everitt, of Plainfield. Hymn—"Sweet Christmas Bells"—School. Scripture Reading—Superintendent. Prayer, Rev. Mr. Quigley, M. E. Church. Hymn—"Ring out ye Bells"—School. Reading—"Archie Dean"—Miss Nettie Gere. Hymn—"O Jesus, Star of the Morning"—School. Address—Rev. G. A. Harris, Westfield. Hymn—"Ring the Christmas Bells"—School. Recitation—"A Yankee in Love"—F. B. Wiley. Hymn—"Christ, the Lord has Come"—School. Secretary's report—R. C. Treadwell. Hymn—"We are going down the Valley"—School. Recitation—"Willie and Annie's Christmas Prayers"—Miss Victoria Hand. Hymn—"Song of Ages Everlasting"—School. After the above program was gone through with a "Christmas Sociable" was held in the Church during which tables heavily loaded with Christmas viands and delicacies were relieved of much of their weight. The singing was excellent. The reading by Miss Nettie Gere and the recitation by Mr. F. B. Wiley were exceedingly well rendered. The address of the evening by Rev. G. A. Harris, was highly humorous and received rounds of applause. The beautiful recitation by Miss Vic. Hand, which is a gem within itself, could not have been excelled. The beautiful Hymn, "We are going down the Valley," was softly and sweetly sang, in memory of little Josie Noble, one of the Scholars who died suddenly during the last autumn.

The Music Committee on S. S. entertainment at Congregational Church desire to express their gratitude and thanks to Mrs. Belle Pagels-Collier for valuable assistance rendered at the Christmas entertainment Monday evening Dec. 30.

MRS. WM. A. FREEMAN,
Chairman.

Perseverance Lodge No. 74, Knights of Pythias, had an unusually large meeting Thursday evening, the 19th. Delegations were present from Somerville, Bound Brook, Scotch Plains and Elizabeth, and Elizabeth, and among the visitors were Grand Vice Chancellor Kidder, of Jersey City. The 1st and 2d ranks were worked. The new rank which has been added to the Knights of Pythias—we refer to the Endowment or Insurance Rank—is building up the order, and we understand it is the purpose of the lodge here to have a section in Plainfield. At the next special meeting, which will be held on Friday evening, Jan. 3d, Grand Chancellor Corey and Staff will pay them an official visit, when the 2d and 3d Ranks will be conferred and the new officer installed for the ensuing term.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

[Under the above head we shall endeavor each week to give items and news of interest to the lovers of fishing, gunning, trotting, athletic and other sports. We shall be pleased to receive contributions or items for this column from all interested in such matters.]

A coon weighing 21 pounds was recently captured in Ash Swamp by Messrs. Henry Craft and Dan Terry.—The animal made a fierce fight against three dogs, whipping them all.

Mr. Percy C. Ohl saw four English snipe on his premises, (known as "Willow Lake") just on the outskirts of the city on Friday last. He bagged three of them. Rather late for these birds in this section.

Now let every one enforce the game laws by prosecuting every one found violating the same.

Plainfield contains some good pigeon shots, and friend Geo. Lewis is not one of the poorest, judging from the score he made on Monday last, when he grassed 13 out of 17 at 21 yards rise, killing ten of them straight. George should join the Gun club.

The existing game laws of the State of New Jersey prohibit the killing, exposing for sale, or having unlawfully in possession, by any person in this State, any Raffed Grouse, Quail, Woodduck, Rabbit or Squirrel after the 1st day of Jan. until Nov. 1st, Woodcock from Jan. 1st to July 4th.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Henry Manning, our Ice Man, commenced cutting ice on Saturday last.—It is about 7 inches thick.

Our young folks are taking advantage of the good skating and the pond has been crowded with them during the last week.

A daring thief entered the barn of Mr. Lawrence on Dudley Ave., on Saturday evening and stole from there almost all the wearing apparel of Vincent Kuldoshes the hired man. While the man at about 6 o'clock went into the kitchen to pump some water he heard the dog bark and opening the door and looking out and not seeing any one he continued to pump for a few moments longer. When he came out to the barn his "store-clothes" were non est. A watch and chain, $20 in money gone. The thief shed his "best" in the woods near by.

Linus Hetfield, living about 1½ miles from town, had a not very pleasant surprise on the evening of Dec 26th. While taking his ease after supper, at about 7 o'clock, a knock came to the door. His wife opened the door and three men entered. Inquiring whether this was Linus Hetfield's and being answered in the affirmative, they told Mr. H. that they were Internal Revenue Officers and were ordered to search his premises for a hidden still and destroy the same and arrest Mr. H. Mr. H. politely requested them to produce their authority and that being shown, he invited them down into his cellar and showed them all over his premises, visiting "Levi's best," (over 3 years old) and finding nothing "crooked" they left, after "smilin'."

On Thursday last, at the funeral of the late Squire Pierson, a hack driver from Elizabeth, came very near meeting with a fatal accident, while returning from the Cemetery. Driving rather fast and when coming down the hill near the old Clark homestead, the bolt broke and the shafts falling on the horses, heels, upset the coach, threw the man off his seat, but luckily not hurting him.

The W. V. T. entertainment was not a success financially, the boys just about paying expenses.

"Who stole Long's Turkey?" is a question that receives a "I don't know" answer.

Wm. M. Towsley, Esq., was out hunting with some friends; while crossing a fence, his weight falling on one foot, he had to be carried home.

Messrs. Hosford, Miller and Bates and a few more of our prominent citizens have leased Æolian Hall for the next 5 years. It will be fitted up with a fine stage and a meeting room for citizens to discuss what can be done for the better improvement of the town.

Under an old resolution of the Common Council Mr. Greenwood claimed $50 for each conviction and his claim now against the city aggregates $3,200. Monday, while one of his suits was being tried, his two spies, Moses S. Meeker and Wm. H. House, both residents of New York, were arrested on a charge of conspiracy. A warrant was also issued for the arrest of Mr. Greenwood, but he could not be found.

BIJAH ENGAGED

Just as the old man was getting his parlor in order for visitors he received notice that his presence was desirable at the Central Station. Making his way down town he was kindly greeted by His Honor, who tossed the remains of a State fair eggplant out of the window and said:

"There are four or five cases here which seem to concern you more or less. There is, for one, a female in the corridor who says she is engaged to you. If such is the case, I don't want to send her up, of course."

"Engaged to me! Great heavens! but I was never engaged in my life!" exclaimed the seemingly astonished Bijah.

"Well, that's what she says. I don't know anything about your love affairs, though I've had many hints that you were about to take a wife."

"Let me see the demoness who dares to make affidavy that I am going to build fires for her this winter!" demanded the old janitor, his eyes as wild as those of a runaway horse, and he was shown into the corridor.

She was there. She sat on an inverted bushel basket belonging to the City Sealer of weights and measures. She looked about forty years old, and she had banged hair, a thin nose, and a chin sticking out like a bay window. She knew him at sight, and she rose up and called out:

"Darling, I knew you would come."

Bijah stood before her without a word. The wobble of his knees was plainly heard by the audience and he breathed like a boy running out of a melon patch with four dogs after him.

"Don't you recognize me, Bijah?" plaintively inquired the woman.

"Never, never!" he shouted, dancing about on his toes. "I never saw you before—I don't know you—I won't know you!"

"My love, have you been drinking?" she softly asked.

"Don't call me your love—don't put on them 'ere grins for my benefit! You are an old impostoress, a jackaless, a swindleress, a deceitess, and if you do not own up that you've been lyin', I'll sue you for slander!"

"And only last night he called me his silver-plated coal stove!" she said, turning to the reporters with a gesture of despair.

"I never did! I'll make oath on the Bible that I don't even know her name."

"Boy, beware!" she hissed, as she pointed her slender finger at her nose, "if you turn my love to hate it will be the worse for you."

"Let 'er turn! Let 'er turn! I say you are a——"

She clawed out for him, and she just reached him. Four of her finger nails raked his nose from bridge to end, and the other hand would have gathered up all the hair on the top of his head if he hadn't been bald.

"Serpent!" she hissed through her clenched teeth, "when I get out I'll meet you on the street and throw snuff in your villainous eyes!"

"You'll never get out—not for one thousand years!" he called back, one hand holding his nose and the other keeping her off. She was then sent up for six months on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct, when he went up and inquired:

"Mary Ann, why did you try to play that on me?" she yelled back:

"Wait till I come out!"—Free Press.

REFORMATION OF DRUNKARDS.

Harper's "Easy Chair," descanting on drunkenness, and the possibility that the temperance movement in this country has been too exclusively a moral appeal, inasmuch as the addresses are largely descriptive of the effects of drinking, queries "What is drunkenness?" and explains that it is in its origin the perversion of a natural taste for social enjoyment, and it is most prevalent among those who have the least opportunity for such enjoyment. When it has fixed itself upon its victim, it is largely dependent upon physical conditions. The usual temperance appeal to him is by the mere main strength of his moral will to break up the habit. His home is bare and desolate, and the preacher urges him to prefer it to the cozy and warm and social "saloon." His system, enfeebled by excess, craves the stimulant, and the exhortation is simply not to take it. He needs especially every kind of support and assistance and diversion, and he is told to help himself. This is a relief which forgets the nature of the disease. That of itself suggests the remedy. The drunkard seeks social enjoyment illicitly. Supply it to him lawfully, show him that he can gratify his natural tastes without shame to himself or harm to his family or society. Give to the weak system which craves "a little something," a little something that will cheer and not inebriate. The drunkard knows the misery that drunkenness produces, for he is its victim. He does not wish to hear of that. The incipient drunkard knows it also. What they want is something to take the place of drunkenness, something that will help them to help themselves. If all the money that is yearly given to support talking upon the subject were devoted to doing something in the way suggested, the "liquor interest" would be confronted with something that it would fear. "Holly-Tree" inns upon a great and general scale, "public coffee houses" like those in Liverpool, neighborhood clubs which would develop and illustrate the neighborly sympathy which is now not suspected, and the supposed absence of which is most mischievous—all those and similar enterprises would be a temperance movement which would aid the moral appeal and the auxiliary argument with those social sympathies and supports which are indispensable to the prosperity of the work.

"What news to-day?" said a man about to his friend lately. "What news?" said the other. [illegible]

POETRY.

For "The Constitutionalist."

NELLIE NORTH.

BY "CACHINUS."

[Respectfully Dedicated to "Viola."]

When the sun sinks in the mighty west,
And purple tints the sky,
When Luna shows her beauteous form
O'er the hilltops standing by;
When night its shadowy arms puts forth,
And nature looks so grand,
'Tis then myself and Nellie North
Have wandered hand in hand.

Her hair was like the raven's wing,
Her eyes the brightest blue;
Her smile was most the prettiest thing
That mortal ever knew;
Her thoughts were ever just as pure,
As angels in the sky,
And many a pang would I endure
For Nellie North so shy.

But e'er the time had come for me
To make dear Nell my bride,
Death's angels came from o'er the sea
And ta'en her o'er the tide.
And now no more in shady lanes,
Where pretty flowers grow,
No, never more through sugar-canes
With Nellie shall I go.

GALLOWSES.

BY ISABELLA T. HOPKINS.

"Hush, Liz! Don't stir the fire! It'll last as long as she does. Let her rest!"

Liz left the chimney and crept back to her place beside the almshouse keeper's wife. The faint spark of life they had been watching since the dull winter night closed in was flickering still, though the old steeple clock had just tolled one, and the wood on the queer black andirons had dropped into embers on the hearth.

"It's slow work," whispered the keeper's wife. "We might slip down stairs for a cup of something warm while she sleeps, and never be missed," and the two stole noiselessly from the room. The dull crackling of a brand as it broke and fell on the hearth was the only sound left behind them; but the eyes the keeper's wife had said were sleeping, slowly unclosed—soft brown eyes and a fair young face—how had they ever come into such a place? A slender hand busied itself tremblingly at a ribbon that had escaped the sleepy watcher's eyes—a ribbon with something hanging from it that gleamed in the flicker from the hearth, and a voice called softly, "Phil!"

A child stirred in its sleep, then rose and came quickly to her side.

"My darling! Kiss me good-night once more! It is the last time, and be quick," for the kitchen door below creaked again—the keeper's wife and Liz were coming back. "Good-night, my darling!" and the trembling fingers fastened the ribbon round his neck, "and remember! Be always good and brave for my sake, and for the dear Christ's."

"They've neither of 'em stirred," whispered the keeper's wife. "We might have had another cup and no one the wiser."

* * * * *

One by one the dark winter days slipped away; grass and violets began to appear; every one felt like beginning life over again, and so did Miss Judith Pophurst, with the rest. It took a good deal to stir Miss Judith to such a point, but when she once did make up her mind to anything, she was ready for it; and she marched with a firm step to her bureau drawer. There were queer things in that bureau; it seemed to have the same taste for old ways as Miss Judy herself, and out came a long, yellow straw bonnet that poked a hand's length over her face, a round silk mantilla that reached just to her waist, a peaked, green parasol and a pair of black lace mitts. There was something else, too, that glittered as she lifted the mantilla, and Miss Tophurst shut the drawer very quickly when she saw that. That was Tom's sword. How proud she had thought all her life was going to be with Tom—just the same as a son to her; but when at last that endless war was over, his colonel sent his sword home to Miss Pophurst, and that was all.

Miss Judith was a quick walker, and that yellow straw and peaked parasol flashed along the sidewalk like the turn of a kaleidoscope till the rap of the sharp knuckles gave the almshouse keeper's wife a start.

"I heard you had a boy here," announced Miss Pophurst, grimly.

"The land's sake, yes; and have had, as you might say, for some months past."

"Did you want him?" asked Miss Pophurst, crisply, with a snap of her black eyes.

"Well, I don't know."

"Then I do," said Miss Pophurst stepping in with one foot. "I want somebody to take care of my cow, and"—a glitter from the hastily shut drawer seemed to tremble before Miss Judith's eyes as she added—"and to love."

The next day was a busy one with Miss Judith Pophurst; she had made up her mind again.

"That child's going to have decent clothes to his back! Ridiculous toggery he's got on!" And the boards on the attic floor creaked, as with lips drawn very tight she marched over them to a trunk that had not been opened since Tom went to the war.—Her fingers trembled, but what she had to do she would do quickly, and almost before the creak had died away she was seated in her rocking chair again with one of Tom's full-grown suits in her lap, and a paper pattern she had used for him twenty years before in her hand.

She shook a thread of bright golden hair out of her scissors and began to rip; for sensible clothes and curls did not go together, and she had been shearing them off until only a bristling thickness of tawny white was left in their place. She drew her chair softly a little nearer to the bureau drawer; it was so hard to see anything that had been Tom's falling into bits; but some things the keeper's wife had said seemed keeping time with her scissors as they went.

"You see, ma'am, it's what might be called a providential accident, the snow storm coming on and the stage going no farther, and so that young thing being thrown on our hands that night. She was looking for her own folks, that was plain; for she kept whispering to herself, 'I must see him tomorrow, for my child's sake!' and her very last breath was to cry out entreating like and sudden, 'Father!' But this being an inconvenient world, altogether not the best, why you see by daylight she had taken a journey quite another way."

Summer days are long, but they slip away after all, and the evenings came when Miss Pophurst's precious cow came home with a twig of crimson maple leaves hanging from her mouth, and the next day the Elm Tree School mustered its denizens and began again.

"It is just as well," mused Miss Judith, standing at the window with a broom in her hand and proud satisfaction in her heart, as she watched her new charge hurrying toward the school, the boy has such an uncommon hankering to find some company of his age. That always was a handsome pattern for pants, too, so good and close to the seat and square at the ankles—if I could only once see at that [illegible] at [illegible] here, though."

[illegible] ranks and were just ready for a third, though for once it did not seem quite certain who would come out first best. "Sets up to be a little extra," laughed Sam Hebberton, the tallest and stoutest rebel of last year, but there was only an uneasy echo of his laugh. The new master had been staying a week at 'Squire Phillip's Venetian-blinded, porticoed house that not one out of ten of the boys had ever seen the inside of; and the 'Squire was a trustee into the bargain.

"Yes," added another tall rebel, Hal Phillips himself, "and he told my father he intended to stay in that school-room, and that if any one left, it would be the first boy that didn't behave himself."

There was another uncomfortable pause and Sam turned from the stump he was kicking. "And what did the Squire say to that? 'You get out!' I suppose," he returned with a half-laugh.

Hal's eyes flashed. Everybody knew the Squire had been a sea-captain for half a life-time before coming back to take the old homestead and family title together, and that few quarter-decks had seen a hotter temper or heard hotter words than his. But there was a reason that the Squire had seen trouble in his day. His wife and a daughter who was the idol of his heart were gone, and some mysterious change had come over him with it all.

"It's a hard tussle, though," said Deacon Bayberry one day. "He's the proudest, high steppin'est man we ever had in our place; but I've seen him fifty times, when a thing riled him, wait full five minutes to get a fair hold of himself and then out comes that terrible 'scape valve of his'n, 'You get out!'" And the Deacon laughed a satisfied little laugh; he should see the Squire fairly in the kingdom yet.

But as Sam spoke, there was a new sensation in the crowd. A slight figure walked toward them, giving an uncomfortable pull at the waist-band of some very "slack" trousers with one hand, while the other was struggling to keep a loose hat steady on a smooth-shaven, slippery little head.

"Hello! what's your name, youngster? Oh, he's Miss Judy's boy! Judy, where's the baby, Judy?"

A hot flush crept up to the brim of the loose hat, but a sharp, quick ring of the school-bell sent the boys swarming in like bees into a hive, and the hum of the first day's work began. The hum went on pretty quietly for a week; the boys were taking the gauge of the new master's eye and hand, and, and were too busy for much notice of the new comer excepting that pull at the waist-band that Miss Judy's boy couldn't seem to do without. "Hitch," Hal Phillips had whispered, with an imitation such as only he could give, and that was the signal for the rest. Miss Judy's boy couldn't raise his eyes or speak to anybody but there it was. Was this the fun of going to school?

Could the whisper have reached Miss Judy's ears? At any rate, she stalked grimly to the village store that night and came back with a very small parcel in her hand, and the next morning the shrinking little face under the slippery hat shone proud and triumphant for once.

"Feel a little extra this morning; eh?" said Hal, as a pair of brown eyes flashed up at him with a quiver at the heart they belonged to. It had had a good many quivers since school began, but this was a new variety, a joyful one, and could not be kept back.

"I've got some gallowses!"

"Hello! Gallowses! Gallowses! He's got some gallowses! Now we've got a name for him!" shouted Hal; and the cry went round. Miss Judy's boy was named. For an instant the wide pants and loose hat shrank away as if from a slap, but they were out again and doing their share in the game, when their turn came.

There was another quiver, that went pretty deep, as Gallowses crept into Tom's forsaken bed that evening, after Miss Judy's crisp good-night.

"Are the boys going to call me that dreadful name forever? But I will bear it! I am to be good and brave for her sake, and for—but oh, why couldn't I have gone with her? It is so terrible here all the time!" and Gallowses' trembling fingers drew out a little glistening something hidden at his neck, and with one long, passionate kiss, he laid his cheek against it without another word.

An hour later Miss Judith stalked noiselessly in, those foolish store suspenders had a rip already to be sewed. The little figure lying in Tom's bed gave her a strange thrill. She hesitated—there was no one to see her—and Miss Pophurst stooped quickly and kissed the cheek on the pillow. But the cheek was wet; there was something blue around the neck, and Miss Judith's black eyes shot piercingly under the other cheek. "Good land of our fathers! where did the child get that?"

The next few weeks were pretty dull times, the boys thought. The bullies made several advances on the master, and retreated well scared to their places; Gallowses' white hair attempted to come out in crispy little yellow curls, was snipped back by Miss Judy's scissors, and that was all.—"Look here, boys," said Hal Phillips at last; "they'll be calling us spoonies, and serve us right, if this thing goes on much longer! I tell you we've just got to hang together in some move, and let the master have it when he can't tell where it comes from. Do you say agreed?"

"Agreed!" went up in chorus. "Give us a programme, that's all."

"Well, there's that old donkey of Deacon Bayberry's; what if he should be found strayed into the master's desk some morning with the master's cap on his head, and one of those law-books he's always fooling with at intermission, under his nose? How would that do, just for a feeler, you know?"

A shout rose for an answer, and Hal went on. "Shake hands, then! A pull all together, you know, and then nobody is to blame!" and one by one the boys marched up and gave Hal a hand. "Now Gallowses! You're the last!" but the wide trousers stood motionless, and Gallowses shook his close-cropped head.

"What! You're afraid! Fellow, we'll tell Miss Judy we did it."

"No, you needn't," said Gallowses, "but I can't help you."

"What, you little sneak!" said Sam, pouncing on him and seizing him by the collar. "You won't peach, will you?"

"No, I won't peach, Sam Hebberton, nor do anything else that's mean, I hope. Let go of my collar, please; you've no right to it!"

"Will you lend us a hand, then?"

Gallowses' head shook again. "Not on the donkey—I can't."

"Coward! coward! Gallowses is a coward!" rose up the shout; and Sam tightened his grip with a growl that meant mischief, but a sudden thought struck Hal.

"Hold on!" he said. "Somebody's got to open the school-room door for us. What's the harm if Gallowses slips through the ventilators and down on the [illegible], and just draws the bolt of that back door. There's no other boy small enough, and what's that to do with the donkey, or with us?"

"Will you do it?" asked Sam with a threatening pull, but Gallowses shook his head.

"I can't, I tell you. It wouldn't be good or brave, and I won't!"

"It wouldn't, eh?" [illegible] rung again, and Sam had found out that it wasn't best to be late in his seat. "I'll settle you!" he muttered, with a scowl that glowered more and more fiercely toward Gallowses' desk for the rest of the afternoon. "I'll thrash you within an inch of your life!"

Why shouldn't he? Wasn't he three times as big as the coward Gallowses, and a hero of the school into the bargain?

Two weeks passed, and the curb-bit of the Elm Tree School still held steady and strong; but outside winter had been marching merrily on till it swept suddenly down one Friday night and locked up everything, Deacon Bayberry's mill pond included, in prison walls of ice. And the next day, a Saturday, with blue skies, air like wine, and the ring of the skates on that pond starting the deacon up to the liveliest psalm-tune he knew. From Miss Pophurst's kitchen window a pair of eager brown eyes had watched every boy of the school scurrying past, and the jingle of their skate-irons were like the trumpet to a war-horse's ear; but what is a war-horse without bridle or spurs, and ——Gallowses had no skates. And what fun was there in going to look on? Miss Judith grew a little nervous at last, watching the little figure with elbows on the table, and a shorn head in its hands, pouring over a lesson for next week.

"Why don't you follow the rest of the boys, wherever they are? The kitchen's no place for a Saturday!"

Miss Pophurst had turned the scale, and once astir, the war-horse seemed to have wings.

"Hallo! There's Gallowses! Come on! Let's see what he can do," was the cry on the pond. Gallowses felt finger-tips tingle; the skate-irons rang circles, squares and pigeon wings. Deacon Bayberry was setting up another psalm-tune down in the mill, and oh—why couldn't he go on with the rest?

At last a sudden curve brought a small skater, glowing and breathless, close to the bank where he stood.

"Hallo, Gallowses, why don't you come on? Where are your skates?"

"I haven't any;" and then could he? should he? Yes he would. "Couldn't you lend me yours for five minutes or so?"

"Couldn't do it!" and with another curve and shout, Bob Aymer was out of sight.

"Didn't you find the boys?" asked Miss Pophurst, as the latch lifted slowly under Gallowses' hand. "Skating on the pond, eh? There's been more than one boy drowned there before to-day!"

Monday morning came again; but the sport of Saturday seemed to have fallen like sparks in tinder on the heroic spirits thirsting for a fray. "Now, boys," said the 'Squire's son, "It's time we settled a few things. Are we Elm Tree boys going under or are we going skating again this afternoon?"

A shout of applause followed and Hal went on. The master always sat absorbed in law-books through the intermission, the keys could be turned on the outside in a flash, the heavy wooden shutters pushed over the windows, and there would be an afternoon for the ice, and one for the master to learn lessons in the dark! Hand-pledging began again, but there was once more a goat to the lion; the slack trousers stood motionless again! Sam's eyes blazed, but Hal slowly unrolled a bundle and held something glittering and dangling before Gallowses' face. With a great bound Gallowses' heart leaped up, and the brown eyes shone like stars. "For me?" but Hal drew the prize away. "Hold on! Just give us your hand that you won't meddle with our lockup, first!"

Miss Judy's boy started back. Was this quick, sharp-shooting pain what people call disappointment? He hadn't been used to expecting things, and he had not known!

"Don't Hal! Don't show them to me! I can't promise! You know I can't."

"Look here, Gallowses, don't be a fool! Didn't Sam let you have enough the other time?"

The Elm Tree School sat that morning with flashes and mutterings like a suppressed volcano, and Miss Pophurst swayed in her chair with short, crisp little creaks. She had been thinking about something ever since Saturday afternoon, and at last she sprang suddenly up.

"What difference does it make to Tom? Perhaps he'll be glad!" and once more the attic boards creaked, and when Miss Judith took her seat again, she laid a little bundle softly by her side. The old clock ticked slowly on, but the latch lifted at last, and Miss Judith raised the bundle from the floor.

"See if those skates will fit you; they might as well be worn as to rust, I suppose," she said.

That visit to the trunk haunted Miss Pophurst after Gallowses was asleep, and at last she stole silently into his room, but before she reached the bedside, she stood transfixed. "Good land! if the child ain't hugging close to Tom's skates, yet! And that other thing under his cheek again, and I do believe he's been crying. Why, what ails the boy? And the snow's coming down now at a rate that'll put that mill pond out of sight for one while!"

And so it did, and the life went out of skater and the lock up plan together; the heroic spirits drooped, and quiet settled in upon the school-room for the next two weeks. The holidays were coming so near that perhaps it was as well to let them come peacefully, after all. Thanksgiving day astonished every one with an unprecedented thaw, and a rain that turned the snow-covered pond into an oozy surface, black as ink; and though Miss Pophurst had a chicken and a little ball of plum-pudding for dinner, there was no getting out, and still less of the merry-making and gay company Gallowses had heard all the boys promise themselves; and he hid away in bed at last, thankful that the day was done; how should he ever live through a whole week like that when Christmas came?

But before Christmas came the world seemed to be in altogether another mood. The sunset skies turned yellow as gold, and the purple hills stood sharp and almost black against them in the frosty air; the nights grew stinging and clear, and at last as Christmas Eve itself set in, a north wind whirled down on the glistening pond, and when morning dawned, as Deacon Bayberry assured the boys, 'Pharaoh and all his host might feel free to march across.'

Whither had all sorrowful memories fled away, that wild, joyful, Christmas afternoon? Faster and faster flowed the warm, eager blood through his veins; had he ever been miserable? had he ever sobbed himself to sleep in a world where skates and skating grounds were found?

On flew the hours; what did make cutting letters so very hard? Over and over the 'F' he was determined to cut, Gallowses went, too busy to notice that one by one the boys slipped away toward the more [illegible] shore, for fresh ice; for the black face of the pond was scarred and white at last. Another fifteen minutes, and suddenly there was a wild cry behind him—"Sam Hebberton and Hal are in the water! I am going for help!" and with marble face Bob Aymer plunged off the ice. Were those Squire Phillip's gray sleigh-robes and muffled gray horses dashing past?

"You get out!" [illegible] the Squire, and [illegible] and then with a swoop, round to a motionless, black group, huddled on the ice.

And what did the 'Squire do then? What had any of them done all this time, standing motionless, in dumb, freezing terror, as the ice, crumbling from the hands that clutched it, brought the black, open circle nearer to their feet.

"They can't hold out their much longer," muttered one big fellow at last, desperately pushing out a stick. Hal grasped wildly for it; it was too short.

But hark! There was another skate-ring! A little figure in wide trousers, was coming up! "Help! Gallowses!" gasped Sam.—The brown eyes took one sweep over the black, widening gulf, and then, jacket in hand, Gallowses crept toward it. One long vicious crack rang across the ice; Miss Judy's boy stooped, and holding the jacket by one wrist, flung out the other toward Sam. But an arm's length still lay between!

Then something else came flashing off Gallowses' shoulders—long, red, white and dangling. "His gallowses! His gallowses! He's tying them to his sleeve!" and the huddled figures held their breath, but at last, a shout rose up.

"Coming! Coming! He'll fetch him! Hurrah!" and half-frozen, trembling and livid with fright, Sam came crawling on firm ice.

But another piercing cry broke in, and Hal's eyes met the shouters' in an agony of appeal.

"He's losing hold! Save my boy too!" groaned the 'Squire; as Gallowses took one more sweeping look at Hal's corner of the hungry-looking hole. How thin and black the ice was! How the current underneath dragged at anything it carried through.—But once more he crawled swiftly toward the treacherous edge. He was near enough to throw to Hal, but the thin ice snarled and bent. It would never hold them both.

"Throw me a line from the sleigh."—Trembling hands obeyed. Tying one end to what he held, he flung back the other toward thicker ice.

"Catch it, some of you," and then he threw a jacket sleeve to Hal. He grasped stiffly at it: could he hold it? Yes; and with one desperate struggle for life, he gained the ice. It bent and snapped, but they were dragging at the other end—dragging bravely now. He was safe—but another cry rose up. The thin shelf of ice that broke as Hal climbed up, was all that had held Gallowses from the hungry, rushing stream, and Miss Judy's boy was out of sight.

"Why, what upon airth?" said Deacon Bayberry peeping through the mill window as the cry rose. "Oho! Mischief, and the Squire after 'em!" and the Deacon laughed softly to himself, set up another psalm-tune and then peeped through the window again. What was that yellow, gleaming thing, just taking the smooth leap downward over the dam? Miss Pophurst had not thought about short hair, of late, and Gallowses' hat had been fitting tight over crispy, golden curls.

"Ginger!" exclaimed the Deacon, and in one instant he was in the water, ready to meet what he had seen shining as it came.

When Squire Phillips saw it, a few minutes later, lying before Deacon Bayberry's little "settin'-room fire," his start would have electrified the Deacon, if thoughts, hands, and hot blankets had not been busy with Gallowses. It seemed the very same delicate, clear cut face, the same golden head, he used to stand worshipfully over years ago. "Who is this child?" he asked, almost fiercely.

"Gallowses, answered Bob Aymer.

"You——!" began the Squire, but the Deacon interrupted: "Here, take that gewgaw off; it henders," and the Squire drew a blue ribbon from Gallowses' neck. What was that bright thing hanging from it? A locket? Had not the Squire seen that locket before? He had it open at last; a fair face looked yearningly forth, and the Squire gave a great cry, that made the Deacon drop everything this time. "Nelly! my own lost Nelly. I knew I had lost her, but have I killed her too?" The Deacon turned to the bed again. The Lord was working on the Squire—Hallelujah—but his business was with Gallowses; and in another hour the brown eyes were peacefully following him as he went in and out, finishing the psalm-tune begun in the mill. Suddenly the Deacon shot a look back into them again.

"Did you think that these corn-husk thickness of ice was going to hold you and Hal at the same mortal minute of time?" he asked.

A faint smile passed over Gallowses' face.

"That was nothing, and I was to be good and brave for her sake."

"For whose sake? Whose child are you? What is your name?" broke in the 'Squire.

"For her's! And my name is Phil; that was my grandfather's; Philip Phillips was his name, but he was lost long ago."

"You—!" began the 'Squire again, and then snatching the little figure out of the Deacon's blankets and shawls, he held it in his strong arms, sobbing like a baby with his face laid softly against Gallowses' face.

Miss Pophurst's door was locked that afternoon, for she had gone three miles away; but when she returned, with a little dive into her pocket for the key, there stood the 'Squire, pacing the doorstep with his quarter-deck tread. "Miss Pophurst! I must have that boy of yours! He's mine!" but Miss Judith's eyes flashed lightning.

"Never! When the Lord said that, I gave him Tom; but do you think you—!"

"No," said the 'Squire, in a voice that made Miss Pophurst start; it was so strangely gentle and low, and yet she felt it ruling her like a rod of iron. "Come up to my house and live, if you will; it needs you; but there the boy must be!"—From Sunday Afternoon.

A darkey who was stooping to wash his hands in a creek, didn't notice the peculiar actions of a goat directly behind him; so, when he scrambled out of the water, and was asked how it happened, he answered: "I dunno, jist 'zactly, but it 'peared as if de shore kinder histed up and frowed me in."

An elderly darkey was inquiring of a policeman if he knew anything of his son Pete. The policeman replied that there was a young darkey in the lock-up for breaking up a prayer meeting with an axe-handle.—"Dat's him!" exclaimed the overjoyed parent; "told me he was gwine to 'ligion himself."

"How old did you say this company was?" inquired an inquisitive female, while witnessing the Ancient and Honorables' parade on the Common, the other day. "Two hundred and thirty-nine years, ma'am," was the reply. "My soul!" said the surprised dame: "you wouldn't think it to look at them, would you now?"

"In my early days," remarked an old man, as he chuckled and [illegible] the school-house bin, "they didn't use any tool to keep us young [illegible], I tell you."—"What did they use?" asked a boy near by. A sob, [illegible] the old man's face [illegible] "Birch—birch!"

COUNTY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The Democratic Executive Committee of Union county held their first meeting yesterday, which was very well attended. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Chairman, Thos. B. Budd; Treasurer, J. Williams Crane; Secretary, Charles A. Ryan; Sergeant At Arms, Jacob D. E. Ritter.

UNION COUNTY COURTS.

The January term of the Union County Courts opened on Tuesday morning last, with Judges McCormick, Van Syckel and Mulford on the bench. The following named Grand Jurors were sworn in by Clerk Platt: Job S. Crane, foreman, Richard Frobwein, William A. Morrell, Frederick Clauss, Jonathan B. Drake, John E. Voorhes, Thomas B. Budd, John Carmichael, William McD. Coriell, William B. Stewart, George W. F. Randolph, William C. Stansbury, James L. Miller, William B. Biglow, Thomas B. Clarkson, John C. Coddington, Wesley W. Jones, Charles Babel, William Clark, Ferdinand Blancke, Jonathan Bonnell, Amos Potter, Frank Stable, Ezekiel B. Woodruff. The following named are the petit jurors from Plainfield—Thos. W. Moore and James R. Perine.

THE WARREN COUNTY FRAUDS.

The trial of the indicted ex-members of the Board of Freeholders of Warren county was begun on Thursday at Belvidere, and is exciting a great deal of interest. The first one of the accused, Dr. John V. Mattison, ex-clerk, was first upon the stand, and the jury rendered a verdict of guilty without leaving their seats. There were twelve other indictments against Dr. Mattison and on Friday he was arraigned upon three of these for forgery and pleaded guilty. The other indictments against him were not moved. The next case was that of Charles S. Strader, ex-director of the Board, against whom there are fifteen indictments for forgery. He was acquitted upon the first indictment but found guilty upon the next. On Monday the case of ex-freeholder Henry M. Cox, ex-director Strader and John B. Sliker, a contractor, charged with drawing money on two fraudulent bills for building a county bridge, was commenced.

The Washington Star says:—Just now, when the day of judgment seems to be successfully rising upon the hosts of our lamented County officials, it does seem altogether too hard that any rascality, any further jugglery, should turn up to add to the turpitude of their crimes; yet such seems to be the case. About one week ago, Mr. D. F. Beatty, of this place, received a letter from a New York broker, asking for information about "seven per cent. Warren County bonds," of which he claimed to have on hand some $18,000. No such bonds are in existence. If any broker has such bonds, they are of course bogus.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

The outgoing Council of 1878 have reason to point with pride to the results of their official actions since they were inducted into office. Taking their seats under trying circumstances, with no money in the Treasury to their credit, and the vexed question of License before them, they leave their labors with a fine financial record and a police report showing fewer arrests for crime and drunkenness than the year previous when but four licenses were granted. They have had many difficulties to overcome, but have surmounted them all. Our streets have been well lighted, the roads kept in fair repair, (as far as the means would allow) while law and order has reigned throughout the city. Of course, their action in granting licenses to saloons has not been in accord with the sentiments of radicals and extremeists, but we believe has met with the approbation of a large majority of our citizens. The fact that they have succeeded in collecting a large amount of back taxes and paid off a large proportion of the city's indebtedness, is highly gratifying to the community at large. A commodious and safe station house has been secured, and the tramp nuisance abated through their efforts. What more could be asked or expected of them.

Their successors, the Council of 1879, is composed of gentlemen of intelligence and business qualifications. They take their seats under far more favorable circumstances than their predecessors. True, there is but a small amount of funds in the bank to their credit, but then they have less indebtedness to care for and pay off than any previous Council in years. They are a fine looking body of men, and if their looks do not belie them, they will administer the affairs of the city with wisdom and discretion. The address of Mayor Harper is a carefully prepared document with many suggestions. His suggestion regarding the matter of license being placed in the hands of an Excise Board is a good one, and coincides with our own views regarding this subject. The new City Fathers may rely upon the co-operation of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST in all their efforts to fairly and impartially carry out the laws enacted by them, or by their predecessors.

Mrs. Dr. S. P. F. [illegible] has kindly donated a bell to the Baptist Church, to be used in the place of their church bell that was broken on the 4th day of July last. The mercantile firms of the village, among which may be named Baker & Mead, dry goods and groceries; Thy's & Flannery, groceries; Dean & Chappell, dry goods and groceries; John R. The Baptist Church have not as yet selected a pastor. Preaching is maintained every Sabbath at 10.30 and 7:30 o'clock. Last Sunday those who were in attendance had the benefit of extraordinary good sermons, well delivered by the Rev. J. Breckinridge English, of Salem, N. J. Next Lord's Day the Rev. Fred. P. Sutherland, of Otsego Co., N. Y., a young man of rare personal piety, sound theological scholarship, and fine social qualities will supply the pulpit. The Rev. Mr. S. preached in this church some months ago, and all who heard him then will desire to hear him again.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

The remarkable fact appears from the annual report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that the receipts fell off the last year over eight million dollars. This is ascribed to the general depression and the consequent diminution in the use of luxuries. Illinois leads the list of tax-paying States by four millions and, three-quarters over New York, which stand next on the roll. Between New York and Ohio there is only a difference of some hundred and fifty-four thousand dollars. New York, New Jersey, Ohio, and Illinois together return nearly half of the entire internal revenue.

The sixteen Southern States pay together twenty-six and one-third millions, or say about one-fourth of the revenue, which corresponds nearly with their relative population in the expected aggregate of the next census.

The six New England States aggregate $3,594,652.39, or about one-half of the revenue which Kentucky and Virginia respectively pay, or a little more than one-fourth that of New York.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS. EDITORS:

The Common Council of 1878 has closed its career with a most excellent record. Never before in the history of our city has a Council done so much for the city's best interests and advanced its material prosperity so eminently. Their financial report (which I presume you publish in this issue of your paper) will prove the correctness of what I here state to all unprejudiced, unbiased, and fair-minded citizens. It was only about eighteen months ago, during the reign of the so-called "Abler and more Thoughtful" Council, that the question of bonding the city to the amount of $6,000, to pay off the judgments and floating debts then existing, was before that august body; and the measure was warmly advocated by several members of the Council, who retired to private life, very much against their will, at the end of 1877, but the scheme was defeated and now there is no need of such "relief," as there is but $700 debt remaining against the city, and that could have been paid by the Council of 1878.

And now a word on the momentous question of licenses, and so-called "blood money;" the Council of 1878 granted 17 licenses, including Hotels, saloons and Grocers, and received therefrom $4,600. It has been claimed by some temperance people, that this, so-called "blood money," is of no benefit to the city, as the taxpayers (they say) have to put their hands in their pockets and bleed in the way of taxation for the support of paupers made by the sale of liquor; the facts do not support the assertion, as the following figures will demonstrate: The Council of 1877 granted four Hotel licenses, and received therefrom $800. They expended for the support of the Poor about $3,500 and contracted besides, for the same purpose, debts to the amount of $800, which debts were paid by the Council of 1878 and there was no relief granted in 1877 beyond the 1st of November. The Council of 1878 received from licenses (as above stated) the sum of $4,600 and expended for the support of the poor only about $3,000, which sum is $500 less than the appropriation for that purpose, and relief has been granted, and all that was needed, every month in the year. It has also been claimed that by the granting of licenses crime is increased in our city, here again the facts fail to support the theory. The records of our City Court will show that, during the year 1878, there were far less arrests than in 1877, and less crimes of all kinds were committed, and the fewer number (by a large percentage) of arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct in 1878, is particularly noticeable.

There is still another point to which I desire to call your attention, viz:—The Council of 1878 collected more delinquent taxes than has ever before been collected by any of its predecessors, the amount being (city and poor) over $4,000. This was accomplished by sheer perseverance. The Council of 1878 has left, as a legacy to the new Council, the following legitimate claims as a recourse:

Delinquent taxes, prior to 1878, about	$9,500
Unpaid taxes of 1878 about	3,000
Park Avenue assessment, just confirmed,	2,900
Total,	$15,400

As regards the latter item I would say, that the amount ($2,900) has been paid by the city, and is now due from the property owners along the Avenue.

Now, Messrs. Editors, facts are stubborn things, and I leave the consideration of the subject matter herein contained to the people, for them to draw their own conclusions therefrom.

AU REVOIR.

PLAINFIELD, Jan. 9, 1879.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

I notice in to-day's Central Times a misrepresentation (and there has been many of them in that paper during the past year in regard to Council matters) of the proceedings of the late Common Council at their meeting last Saturday night, in relation to the granting of a license to Mr. Jas. Conneely. The Times in its report of said proceedings says: "The Clerk read a communication from the License Committee refusing to grant license to Jas. Conneely, &c. Now, the above is false and the editor knows he published a downright untruth when he had the above inserted in his sheet. But it is in keeping with the malignant spirit of said paper.

The facts in regard to the matter are these: Mr. Conneelly's petition for a license had been before the Council for about three weeks. Last Saturday night the license committee reported on the same that it "conformed to the license ordinance and all its requirements, but had no recommendation to make," the above are the exact words of the report as any one may see by referring to said report on file in the office of the City Clerk. The Council granted the license as they saw no reason why they should not, the law being fully complied with in the application, and there was no remonstrance against it.

3. The place of redemption is at the office of the Assistant Treasurer of the United States, in the city of New York.

4. The redemption will be either in gold or silver, as the holders of the legal tenders desire, subject to the option of the Government to pay in either metal.

5. The amount of these legal tenders is now $346,681,016.

7. The redemption act does not apply to the circulation of the national banks. Their notes are still redeemable in United States notes at the [illegible].

Report of the Finance Committee of the Common Council.

TO THE HONORABLE THE COMMON COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF PLAINFIELD:

GENTLEMEN:

Your Finance Committee would respectfully submit the following report of the city's financial condition:

That they have carefully prepared the accompanying statement, and believe the same to be correct in every detail. Commencing with a balance of $314.24, and adding receipts of taxes of the years of 1873-4-5-6-7, amounting to $8,967.29, making a total of $9,281.53, there has been paid bills, judgments, etc., of 1877 and previous years to the amount of $3,946.95. All bills contracted during the present year and amounting to the sum of $11,-286.86, have been paid, leaving a balance in the treasury of $622.75. Receiving from license the sum of $4,600 has enabled us to give to the citizens all they have asked for in improvements, such as crosswalks, lamps, street grading, etc., excepting in a few cases where applications were put in late in the year. The Poor Fund, under the judicious management of the able and efficient Alms Committee, shows a balance to the credit of $110.05.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN B. BROWN,
S. C. BAKER,
Finance Committee.

The Salem Standard says: "The poll tax law should either be wiped from the statute books, or a supplement passed, making it necessary for every man to have paid it before being allowed to vote. As it is, a man may or may not pay his tax, just as he pleases. The impecunious hanger-on, who makes it a business to defraud the county of its dues, has the same voice at the polls as the honest citizen who pays his tax regularly. There is no justice in thus making 'fish of one and fowl of another.' Either the one should be made to pay the tax before he is permitted to vote, or the other should be released from his obligation."

Cleanliness.

The public are blissfully ignorant of the filthiness in the preparation of many so-called remedies. Workers in laboratories should be thoroughly taught that cleanliness is a valuable essential. This lesson has been well learned by Peter Moller in his preparation of COD-LIVER OIL. It is a pure and palatable article, suiting the most fastidious, and has taken the Medal as such at every World's Fair.

Cut this out—It May Save your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderous cures astonishes every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggists, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents.

W. H. EGBERT, being about to leave our city, offers an inducement to any one wanting a buggy wagon. See advertisement in another column.

FRESH fish of every variety may always be obtained at the Branch of Fulton Market, just below the Post Office. Good and fresh goods at low prices.

THE ladies of the Congregational Church, of this city, propose to give a Dickens' Reception, full particulars of which will be given in our next issue.

THE tall gentleman observed on our streets the past few days, wearing a broad brim hat, is Mr. Albert Tusch, the Clothier, who bought out J. H. French.

READ the police report in Councilmanic proceedings. From it appears that there were many less cases of arrest for drunkenness during the year 1878 than in 1877.

MR. C. E. Austin, Madison Ave., near Front St., has just completed an apparatus for grinding Skates, and all wishing to have their skates ground in first-class style, should give him a call.

BUT few tramps were entertained at the Station House during the year 1878. The decided steps taken by the Police Board in refusing them lodgings has made them give Plainfield the go-by.

ENGINEER R. A. Gibbs, of "Gazelle," No. 1, celebrated his twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on Saturday last. A number of his firemen friends called upon and congratulated him at his residence.

MR. JAMES CONNELLY, having received his license, will open his place of business, the "Madison Avenue House," on Monday evening next, when he will be glad to receive calls from his friends.

THE trial between Charles Hand and Moynahan, on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretences, comes off at the City Hall Court House, N. Y., (Chamber's Street side) on Friday, Jan. 17th.

WE have heard of several miraculous escapes from bursting ranges in this city during the recent cold snap. Housekeepers should be sure their water pipes are not frozen before they start a fire.

WE congratulate City Clerk, Wm. B. Smith upon his re appointment. Mr. Smith has made a capable and efficient officer during the past year, and the Council have acted with discretion in re appointing him.

THE Messrs. Van Name Bros., Oyster Dealers, of this city, on Monday last filled an order for a customer on Crescent Avenue, for 100 oysters, which weighed 95 lbs, in the shell. One on the half shell will satisfy us.

MR. L. B. Boice, Collector, again calls the attention of those who have not yet paid their taxes, to call and settle the same at once and thus save the extra cost. He says he has at least a corn-basket full waiting for owners.

WE hide our blushes behind a copy of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST after reading the resolution of the last Council, complimentary to that journal. To Mr. T. A. Sofield, who reports our Council Proceedings, is due their correctness.

MAYOR Harper presented and delivered his message to the Common Council in person, on Monday evening last. It is a sensible and straight to the point document, and will be found in full in our report of proceedings of Council.

IN consequence of the extreme cold on Friday last, the children in the classes in the Primary Department of the Public School were dismissed in the morning, the heating apparatus of the School building being insufficient to warm the rooms.

JOHN MARSHALL, aged 89 years, an uncle to ex-Councilman D. J. Marshall, was buried from his late residence near New Providence, where he has resided for some 60 years past, on Tuesday last. He was familiarly known as "Gov," and was unusually esteemed as a good citizen.

J. H. FRENCH, formerly of 19 Cherry St., Plainfield, N. J., is now engaged in business N. Y. City. Albert Tusch, of New York, has taken the store formerly occupied by him, and will keep a large lot of the latest styles of clothing on hand, which he will sell at the lowest New York prices. If you don't believe call and see. Custom work at low prices. Mr. T. has a first-class cutter from New York.

MR. GEORGE B. DE REVERE, present proprietor of the City Hotel, has leased the "Park House" from the 1st of next April, when he will take possession. The House, in the meantime, will be thoroughly renovated. The rumor that Mr. E. P. Thorn has leased the City Hotel, is entirely without foundation, although he is strongly urged to do so by his many friends, who know his capability to run a hotel.

WE often hear the habitual grumbler who is unfriendly to the Printer, affirm that it is that individual who makes the most money out of the city. The financial report of the last Council, however, does not seem to substantiate his words. Look at it. The whole amount paid to two newspapers for advertising the last year was only $140.05. Why, we have paid more than double our share of that $140.05 for reporters' fees the last year. And then talk about starting a daily paper.

EVER since Thanksgiving Day last, the wife of Mr. Geo. Townley, residing in North Plainfield, has shown signs of insanity, at times attacking her children and striking them. A few nights since she was found wandering about the streets, thinly clad and barefoot. She became so bad that it was at last deemed advisable to send her to the lunatic asylum at Morris Plains, whither she was conveyed on Tuesday last. She leaves five children behind her. Mr. Townley has the sympathy of the public in his misfortune and bereavement.

THE Annual Meeting of the N. J. State Rifle Association was held at their rooms, No. 10 Arcade Building, Elizabeth, last evening, 9th inst. Business of importance was transacted referring to the Spring meeting at Brinton Range. The annual report of the General Inspector of Rifle practice is now in the hands of the printer, and advance sheets are daily expected. The report shows an encouraging improvement in the rifle practice of the National Guard of this State, 116 having qualified as marksmen. The marksmen's badges are now being issued to those who have qualified.

CLEAN your sidewalks.

The Oldest Skater.

Mr. Peter M. Boice, of Piscataway, aged 81 years, visited the New Market Pond a few days since with a pair of skates under his arm. The boys began to chaff him, but when "Uncle Peter" had securely fastened his skates on his feet, and challenged them to watch him as he skimmed over the ice, they found they had their hands full. After enjoying himself for about two hours on the ice, the old gentleman retired feeling "as young as he used to be."

Work for the Plumbers.

The recent cold snap made business brisk with the plumbers in consequence of the freezing up of water pipes. Berry & Thorn alone, had over one hundred cases to attend to, and their workmen are kept busy night and day attending to the same. This firm have recently put in heaters for three dwellings at Bergen Point and one at Elizabeth, which evidences that their fame for superior work and price is extending. Mr. Addis, the plumber, also had over fifty orders on his slate on Friday morning to attend to.

The Mendelssohn Quintette Club,

of Boston, will give the next entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. Course, at the Congregational Church, Tuesday Evening, Jan. 14. This Club has a reputation that is National, having been organized twenty nine years. The programme for next Tuesday evening is of an exceedingly choice character, and sure to please all lovers of good music. The Club made its first appearance in our City last winter and was received with great enthusiasm by the audience present on that occasion. Reserved seats may be procured at Reynolds' Drug Store.

Week of Prayer.

This is the week of Prayer, and interesting religious services have been held in the various churches. This Friday evening in the Seventh Day Baptist church, the subject will be—The press; for a blessing on publishers, editors and authors; the cause of temperance and other social reforms. Saturday, January 11th, in the 1st Presbyterian Church—Home and foreign missions and the conversion of the world. On Sunday evening, January 12th, in the Congregational and Crescent Ave. churches, public union meetings will be held for prayer and praise.

Presentation.

Past Master Wm. Addis, Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, A. F. & A. M., was presented with a beautiful P. M's jewel, on Tuesday evening last, by members of his Lodge. The presentation was made by P. M. Wm. H. Maxson, who, in a few brief and fitting remarks, alluded to the efficient manner in which brother Addis had discharged his duties during his term of office, alluding, in the course of the same, to the fact that during the three years of his holding the position of Master of Jerusalem, No. 26, Mr. A. had been absent from his post but three communications, and then unavoidably. The jewel is a handsome one of gold with silver facings, and is suitably inscribed.

On the Road.

Quite a number of owners of fast horse flesh took advantage of the pretty fair sleighing on macadamized Park Avenue on Saturday last, and tested the speed of their flyers in friendly contests with one another. Among them our reporter noticed Ed. Thorn, accompanied by his wife, driving his favorite mare, "Pet," who contested inch by inch with the renowned "White Squall," driven by Johnny Osborn, who knows how to handle the ribbons. S. F. Dunn was out, too, with his handsome sorrel; and was ready for a brush with any one. Mrs. Dan Berry dexterously threaded her way through the throng with her new and stylish black horse, "Ned." R. S. Little and wife rode behind their fast and stylish team "Duke" and "Bell."

Personalia.

Ex-Councilman Knowland has been confined to his home for several days in consequence of hemorrhage through the nose, caused by the bursting of a blood vessel at the base of the same on New Year's Day. He was in the act of drinking a cup of coffee, when he was attacked by a violent fit of coughing which caused the rupture. We are glad to learn that he is once more able to attend to his regular business.

And now the many friends of Billy Dunn, who keeps the "Avon Park House," are congratulating him upon an heir to his vast estates. His babyship is a bouncing boy and greeted his happy parents for the first time on Sunday morning last.

Our young lawyer friend, Samuel E. Perry, son of the late Commodore Perry, of Hunterdon County, who is defending Mellick Staats, a former resident of this place, accused of killing Joseph Doll, at Bloomsbury, a short time since, is, we are glad to learn, likely to receive the complimentary nomination for Clerk of the Lower House, by the Democratic members of that branch of the Legislature.

Friend Geo. W. Rockfellow was on Sunday last elected Superintendent of the Congregational Sunday School. He will make a most efficient one.

Our fellow-townsman, Dr. Stillman, Jr., has lately become associated with Prof. Delafield, of N. Y., in the production of a very handsome and elaborately illustrated medical text book treating mainly of the Heart and Lungs. Its title page reads—"A Manual of Physical Diagnosis by Francis Delafield, M. D. and Chas. F. Stillman, M. D." The work is published by Wm. Wood & Co., of Great Jones St. Dr. Delafield is Professor of the Practice of Medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, N. Y., the medical department of Columbia College.

On Monday last George P. Soydam and John H. Jackson were admitted as Attorneys, Counsellors and Proctors of the United States District Court, and Attorneys and Counsellors of the United States Circuit Court.

Fatal Accident.

Mr. Wm. E. Palmer, residing on Sherman Avenue, this city, arose at an early hour on Friday morning last and built a fire in the range of his dwelling, unconscious that the water pipes leading thereto were frozen up in consequence of the severe cold. He was in the act of adding fresh fuel to the fire, when the water-back to the range exploded with a loud report and terrific force. Mr. Palmer was blown across the room, his clothing set on fire and the doors and woodwork about the room demolished. Neighbors, who heard the report, rushed in and extinguished the flames which had communicated to the furniture and carpets, and assisted Mrs. Palmer in dragging Mr. P. to a place of safety, he being in an unconscious condition. Drs. Hart and Burlingham were hastily summoned, who found that the unfortunate gentleman's legs were both broken and the bones shattered below the knee, and that he was also suffering from some severe contusions about the head, besides being dreadfully burned. The wounds were dressed and it was determined to amputate both limbs to save the sufferer's life should he rally sufficient to undergo the operation. That was not to be, however, as Mr. Palmer remained unconscious until within a short time of his death, which occurred on Monday following the accident, at about 9 o'clock, A. M. Mr. Palmer was universally esteemed as a good citizen by all who knew him. It will be remembered that the same gentleman was so unfortunate as to fall on the icy pavement in front of his store at Evona, one bitter cold night some three years since, and break one of his legs, suffering untold agony for hours until found by his family, he being unable to raise or drag himself to his door in consequence of the accident. He was 45 years of age at the time of his death, and leaves a wife and three children.

Got His Money.

Council last Saturday evening ordered paid Gershom Frazee's bill of $12.50 for services rendered in the prosecution of druggist Shaw last Summer for selling liquor without a proper license. Mr. Shaw having paid the fine of $25, imposed by Judge Good, as ordered so to do by the Supreme Court. That settled the whole matter and "Gep" is happy. Requiescat in Pace.

A Narrow Escape.

On Tuesday morning last, about ten o'clock, a loud report in the vicinity of Front and Cherry Streets, startled the residents of our city within several blocks of that locality. A large crowd quickly gathered at the scene of the explosion, which was at the mouth of the sewer on the corner of Front and Cherry Sts., next to Reynolds' Drug Store. It seems that the mouth of the sewer being frozen, some person emptied the contents of a benzine can on the frozen entrance and set fire to it. The result was a terrific explosion, probably from ignition of gases in the sewer. The heavy iron plates at the entrance to the sewer were blown upward and fell back unbroken. No one was injured by the explosion, though somebody was pretty well frightened.

Who They Are.

As many of our citizens are not acquainted with our City Fathers for the year 1879, we have taken the pains to ascertain their places of business and residences, with the following result:

Mayor Nathan Harper resides at No. 62 East Second Street. He is Secretary of the Amity Insurance Company, N. Y. Democrat.

Wm. McDowell Coriell is engaged in the hatting business, this city. Republican.

Edward H. Depew is in the employ of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co., No. 6 Broad Street, N. Y.; resides at 97 East Front Street. Democrat.

Edward L. Finch is a member of the firm of L. R. Finch & Sons, Flour merchants, 15 State Street, N. Y.; residence in this city, No. 10 Second Place. Republican.

Washington Lithgow resides at No. 8 Second Place. He is engaged in the shipping business, N. Y. city. Republican.

Gilford Mayer is in the Insurance business, N. Y. City. He resides on Park Ave. below Ninth Street. Republican.

William R. Potts is a dealer in coal at 110 Broadway, N. Y.; he resides corner of Plainfield Avenue and Seventh Streets. Mr. Potts is a brother of ex-Congressman F. A. Potts, of the Fourth District. Republican.

Henry Redfield is Secretary of the N. Y. Belting and Packing Company, 38 Park Row, N. Y. City. He resides at No. 11 Crescent Avenue. Republican.

Isaac W. Rushmore is engaged in the milk business, Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. He resides corner of Seventh Street and Grant Avenue. Republican.

John Simpson is a retired farmer, residing corner of Second and Washington Streets. Democrat.

Walter E. Stewart is engaged in business at 63 Pine Street, N. Y. City. His residence is Seventh Street, near Plainfield Avenue. Democrat.

Rowland M. Stover is a compiler of Law Books, No. 137 Broadway, N. Y. His residence is Park Place, near Broadway. Democrat.

The Ice War.

The annual "ice war" between Mr. J. H. Tier and the heirs of the Boice estate, has again assumed a new phase. It will be remembered by those who have heard of the difficulty, that the land lying under the surface of the body of water known as "Tier's Lake" belongs in part to Mr. Tier and the heirs of the Boice estate, while Mr. P. M. French has the right to the waters flowing over the same for mill privileges. Mr. Tier has annually paid Mr. French a rental for the privilege of cutting the ice on the pond, and until within three years past, filled the ice house of the Boice heirs, free of charge, Mr. French guaranteeing Mr. Tier protection from interference in cutting the ice by any and all parties. About three years since, Mr. Tier, desiring to test the matter in a legal way as to who was the owner of the ice, refused to pay either Mr. French or to fill the ice house on the Boice estate. Mr. French then brought suit against him, and the lawyers decided that Mr. French had the right to dispose of the ice. Thereupon Mr. Tier renewed his lease with him and each year pays the stipend asked, $30. Last week Mr. Tier commenced cutting the ice over the portion of the pond belonging to him, and was notified by the heirs of the Boice estate that he must not cut from over their land. They procured a surveyor, had their lines staked out, posts driven through the ice to the bottom of the pond, and a wire drawn around the same. They also announced that they had sold the ice over their land to ice dealers in the city. One party came with an ice plow to begin operations on Monday, but was warned against cutting by Mr. Tier, and the project was abandoned. The wire fence was removed by Mr. T. and he has cut the ice on the Boice side of the pond and is storing the same away. The heirs have consulted ex Chancellor Williamson, and will at once begin a suit to test the ownership of the ice, retaining Wm. Magie, Esq., of Elizabeth, as their counsel. All parties are on friendly terms, and desire that the matter shall be thus legally settled.

PLAINFIELD, Jan. 4, 1879.

TO THE COMMON COUNCIL:

Gentlemen:

The Board of Police beg leave to submit the following supplementary comparative report, in relation to "tramps" harbored in the Station House, for the last three years.

In the year 1876 there were lodged 5,367.
" " " 1877 " " " 5,794.
" " " 1878 " " " 228.

The reason there were so few in 1878 is, the city authorities refused to entertain the tourists, and they were compelled to seek quarters elsewhere, hence the absence in our city of one of the greatest banes of modern civilization—the tramp.

Respectfully, &c.,
E. L. MORRIS, Sec.

On motion report received and placed on file.

Mr. Morris presented the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That a vote of thanks be and is hereby given to President Geo. P. Carman of this Council, for the impartial and just manner in which he has presided over the deliberations of this body since he has been its President.

Resolved, That this Council do hereby extend to Wm. B. Smith, City Clerk, a vote of thanks for the able manner in which he has discharged his official duties during the past year, and for the courtesy he has always shown to the members of this Board.

Resolved, That this Council hereby tender to Jeremiah VanWinkle, its unqualified thanks for his efficient and competent services as City Treasurer, and for the prompt, uniform and affable manner in which he has ever responded to the requests of this Board.

Resolved, That a vote of thanks be and is hereby given to J. Oakley Nodyne (Janitor of this Chamber) for his faithfulness and urbanity in the discharge of his official duties during the term of office of this body.

Resolved, That this Council hereby extend to "THE CONSTITUTIONALIST," its hearty, undivided and sincere thanks, for the honorable and just manner in which it has commented on the acts of this Council, and for the correct reports it has published of the proceedings thereof, during the past year.

Mr. Morris moved that a certified copy of the resolution be forwarded to City Treasurer, Jeremiah VanWinkle. Adopted.

At this stage of the proceedings, 11 p. m., the President made a few brief remarks relative to the doings of the present Council in comparison with the "more able and thoughtful body" of 1877, &c., &c.

Remarks were also made by Councilmen Morris, Brown, Simpson and Baker, and upon the whole, the doings of this Honorable Body might be compared to an old-fashioned "love feast." All were happy and felt proud of their doings for the year just closed—1878.

Mr. Brown stated that the Finance Com. had examined the books of the City Treasurer and found them correct.

Mr. Morris moved that this Council now adjourn sine die. So declared.

Meeting of the New Council.

MONDAY EVENING, JAN. 6th, 1879.

At precisely 8 o'clock the Council was called to order by Clerk Wm. B. Smith.—Upon the roll being called the newly-elected Councilmen responded as follows: [illegible] Edward L. Finch, Washington Lithgow, Gilford Mayer, Walter E. Stewart, Isaac W. Rushmore, Rowland M. Stover.

The Clerk then stated that the first thing in order would be the nomination and election of a Pres't.

Mr. Depew nominated Mr. William R. Potts. No further nominations appearing, Mr. Potts, on motion, was unanimously elected as Pres't.

Mr. Potts, upon taking the Chair, thanked the Council for the honor conferred upon him, and the Council then proceeded to business.

Mr. Stover stated that the election of a City Clerk was next in order and offered the following Res.:

Resolved, That Wm. B. Smith be and he is hereby appointed City Clerk.

Upon the roll being called all answered in the affirmative.

Mr. Finch offered the following:

Resolved, That J. Oakley Nodyne be and he is hereby appointed Janitor of the Council Chamber.

Unanimously adopted upon a ballot being taken.

The Pres't. stated that His Honor, Mayor Harper being present, they would be pleased to hear from him.

Mayor Harper then addressed the Council as follows:

TO THE COMMON COUNCIL.—

Gentlemen:—The sovereign voice of the people of Plainfield having called me to the honorable position of Mayor, I assume its responsibilities, not unmindful of their magnitude and my own want of ability properly to discharge them, but with the firm resolve to devote every energy I possess, and all the power lawfully at my command, to the faithful performance of official duty and the advancement of our city's best interests; and allow me, gentlemen, to express the gratification I feel at knowing that a like avowed purpose animates you, the legislative branch of the Municipality. We were not elected to register partisan decrees, but to obey the nobler behests of patriotism; not to specially benefit individuals, but to promote the welfare of all. Let us, therefore, moving harmoniously forward, keep that constantly in view as the guiding star of action, and seek to earn popular approval by fearlessly doing what we believe to be right and for the general good alone.

It would be inappropriate for me on this occasion to venture more than a cursory review of public matters, leaving details for future comments as expediency may suggest. Plainfield is a young and growing city whose permanent prosperity depends greatly upon a local government swayed by virtuous principles, prudent liberality and practical utility. Her wants are comparatively few, yet they are vitally important, and chief among them the following may be enumerated:

Good conditioned highways.
Well regulated street lights.
Efficient police protection and the observance of law, order and morality.
Preservation of health and removal of obstacles thereto.
Judicious oversight of the poor.

To meet these and other requirements as they should be met, and as increasing population urgently demands, it must, I think, be obvious to all impartial citizens that the very limited tax revenue now allowed by Charter for current expenses is inadequate, and yearly becoming more so, but facts cannot be ignored, and until public sentiment sanctions the raising of a larger annual sum, the only course to be pursued, keeping strictly within the bounds of income, is to equitably distribute available means and make them go as far as possible along the different channels of necessary expenditure. In this connection, I entertain the hope that the present year's resources will warrant more being done for our public thoroughfares, some of which need attention at the earliest practicable date.

I cannot here avoid congratulating you upon the high vantage ground occupied by the City of Plainfield in her freedom from bonded debt. The value of such good fortune in these days of financial difficulty and depression, when so many other cities, both large and small, are struggling beneath the crushing weight of obligations, is beyond estimate, and justice bids me thus publicly declare, that those of our citizens who a few years ago resolutely opposed the issue of bonds, notwithstanding so many others then honestly differed with them in judgment, served the community well and earned the reward of thanks.

The duty will devolve upon you of deciding whether licenses for the sale of liquor shall or shall not be granted. The question is of serious moment and no doubt will be wisely handled. It is needless for me to recite the terrible effects produced by use of intoxicating drink, the misery, destitution, depravity and crime engendered by that enemy of domestic peace and public prosperity, as they are truths admitted and deplored by all just thinking men, but a sense of right prompts me to utter the desire that you will give each application for license the most searching investigation, and if not found satisfactory in every particular, unhesitatingly reject it, holding all to the strict letter of law, aiming to curtail if you do not prohibit, and making mere pecuniary gain subservient to the manifold blessings of sobriety.

Regarding the present License Ordinance, I would invite inquiry on your part as to the propriety of so amending it, that the sale of liquor may be restricted within certain specified hours, and all licenses made to expire at one given date.

Public opinion evidently favors the removal of the license question entirely from the Common Council and its lodgment with a Board of Excise Commissioners, to be chosen by the people. Believing such proposed change fraught with advantage, I trust steps will be taken to procure its legal enactment at the coming session of the Legislature.

Systematic efforts for the relief of the poor being unquestionably proper, to the end that imposition may be avoided, and the deserving receive assistance and encouragement, I take pleasure in recommending that co-operation with the "Plainfield Relief Association," a most worthy organization, be continued as inaugurated by your immediate predecessors.

The functions of the Police being to aid the Executive in enforcing law and maintaining order, I would submit for your consideration the advisability of placing our small force more directly under the control of the Mayor.

As the use of the Council Chamber by the Mayor for official business one evening in each week may be desirable, I respectfully ask such permission.

In conclusion, gentlemen, accept the assurance of my readiness to join heartily with you in whatever promises to enhance the material and moral prosperity of our beautiful city.

NATHAN HARPER,
Jan. 6th, 1879. Mayor.

On motion, ordered filed.

Mr. Redfield then offered the following Res.:

MRS. McWIGGEN JUDGES FROM APPEARANCES.

[Breakfast Table.]

Two women had stopped in market to exchange a little gossip, and stood chatting with the roofs of their sunbonnets touching each other.

"I suppose there's nothing new in your part of the town, Mrs. McWiggen?" said one of them.

"An' isn't there, though? Fa'th an' that's where you are moightily mistaken, Mrs. Dempsey. An' is it tellin' me ye haven't heard about the Whalens, ye are?"

"Dear me, no! You don't mean to say that little Micky has went and fell out of the window, just as I said he would? Too bad! Poor woman! I pity her, but Mike ought to put some slats across, as I told him to. Well—well! And he was such a bright child, too."

"There ye go agin wid the crazy tongue of ye, an' the b'y as sound as a garne watheremelon at this minute. The bent's all right, ma'am, but it's the devil's own time they'll be havin' soon, sure. But is it sayin' ye are that ye wasn't knowin about the weddin' that is to be?"

"Gracious no! Wedding? And whose, do tell?"

"An' who could it be but Mary Whalen herself, the sweet gurrel? An' isn't she the pretty one—an' fax but he's the handsome lad, too, that same, barrin' the wicked scar on the cheek of him from the cut at Donnelly's party.

"Well, now, is that so? And who is the young man? I never heard a breath of it."

"Troth an' he's a foine one, that same ma'am, wid a fhist like a maul, and a foot like a coal hod. Only twinty last Michaelmas, an' tin of his taath gone a'riddy. He's the lively lad, an' always riddy for a bit of diversion wid his fist. It's the pattern of a husband he'll be makin' to her, ma'am. There'll be no gettin lonesome wid a mon always waitin' to fight at the twisht of an eye."

"But you haven't told me who he is."

"Arrah, thin, an' didn't I thought? Wasn't it just sayin' I was that a foiner mon ye couldn't mate in a day's walk than that same Dennis Cassidy himsilf, that worruked on the same ladder wid me own Pat the two months past?"

"But Mary hasn't known him long?"

"Divil the bit has she, an' the betther for her, too, I'm tellin' ye's. 'Twas on the Tourth, I believe, he wint wid her to a frolic on the hill beyant—the Lookout, I'm thinkin'—an' come home wid the loveliest black eye an' another tooth missin', an' hasn't he been there twisht or three times since a'riddy. It's engaged they are, ma'am, as sure as St. Patrick was a gintleman."

"But how do you know? Did Mrs. Whalen tell you so?"

"Not oncsht she didn't—the sly one. But isn't it eyes I have, an' don't I see wid' em? Trusht me for that."

"But what have you seen to make you think so?"

"Hisht! I'm tellin' ye as me own sister, but to go no farther. 'Twas Thursday night that old Mike himself took the jug an' brought it home filled to the neck wid the besht in the tap—for the lad had been there the night before, moind—and they had the divil's own jollification till near mornin, an' ivery blessed soul of 'em was blind wid de light, an' the cook stove was so much scrap iron an' divil the chair stand on more than three legs. Fax, an' it was good for heart trouble to look at 'em, hear the swearin' an' watch the skillets and dishes fly, an' see old Mike tumblin' about, wackin' the nose of him an' yellin' wid j'y, while Bridget was takin' out handfuls of his red hair, and Mary was slashin' it to him wid the besht end of the broom. Sure Pat an' mesilf, we watched thim from the windy till the jug was broke an' the clock at the corner beyant was sounding too, an' thin wint to bed, but not to slape, for the n'ise of their hilarity got louder an' louder till the pape o' day, an' a sorry night we had of it, and sure, but wasn't they just as good as back in the ould country ivery blessed minute of the time, alack!"

"But I don't see what that has to do with Mary being engaged," said Mrs. Dempsey, in a disappointed tone.

"An' don't ye, darlint? Bad cess to the clumsy moind of ye, an' is it supposin' ye are, that ould Mike would bring in a full jug an' stand the expinse of a spree that was hiven on earth to the pack of thim an' that, too, in the middle of the wake, if there wasn't news in the shanty that must be rej'iced over in an illgant manner, wid the very besht that money could purchase, an' plinty of it, too! Not a bit of it, he wouldn't, Mrs. Dempsey. They'll be married before the muskethoes bites 'em or I don't know good whisky when I taste it."

One reason why Noah did not have more people in the ark was because he did not advertise.

Shall men sit by women, asks an exchange. So long as the women don't object, our advice is, by all means do it.

An old lady being asked to subscribe to a newspaper, declined, on the ground that when she wanted news she manufactured it herself.

A Baltimore paper hears a rumor that Weston, the alleged pedestrian, has been engaged by a restaurant firm in Paris to pursue and lasso snails.

The "Church of the Eight-spot of Diamonds" is found in Denver, Col. The wicked give it this name on account of the resemblance of its fancy colored slate roof to the card designated.

A sewing machine agent, says the Cincinnati Saturday Night, who was very ill, being told that he must prepare to pay the debt of nature, wanted to know if it couldn't be paid on the monthly installment plan.

An aristocratic papa, on being requested by a rich and vulgar young [illegible] for permission to "marry one of his girls," gave this rather crushing reply: "Certainly, which would you prefer, the waitress or the cook?"

USEFUL TO THE HOUSEWIFE.

It seems that twenty-nine bushels to the acre is the average wheat yield of England for 1878.

An English paper avers positively that onions, whether cooked or raw, give great relief in chronic rheumatism. A remedy certainly worth a trial.

Persons should not breathe through the mouth. Air should not enter the lungs at a much lower temperature than the blood. Breathing through the mouth in cold weather is very bad.

Clean lead pipes leading from wash bowls by pouring down them a strong solution of potash dissolved in hot water. Don't get the mixture on the hands or clothing. It destroys all animal matter, hair, etc., and saves employing a plumber.

The most effectual means of ridding birds of lice is to spread over the cage, at night, a fine bleached cotton cloth. In the morning, when the cloth is removed, dark specks will be found upon it, almost infinitesimal to the keenest eyesight, but, nevertheless, when crushed with a finger, it will be found that blood from your bird was secreted there.

Turnips may be fed to milking cows without danger of flavoring the milk disagreeably, by giving them immediately after milking. A root-cutter or some other method of reducing the roots to thin slices or pulp, is worth the cost as a preventive of choking, if for nothing else. A few cut turnips or carrots occasionally are beneficial to horses.

A pretty mode of using autumn leaves is on the lamp shades. Cut the shade the proper shape in stiff white paper, when the leaves, which have been previously dried and pressed, are arranged on it in a wreath and fastened securely by gum. The whole is then covered with a very coarse net, and the edges bound with gilt or colored paper. The effect of the light shining through this shade is exceedingly pretty, and it is one of the cheap decorations which all persons, possessed of a little taste and ordinarily skillful fingers, may make for themselves.

Where circular saws are in use, not of sufficient diameter to divide large trunks, it is asserted that trees partly sawn through may be neatly split with powder, or split even without any sawing. If a hole be bored in the wood of one inch diameter, and in depth a little more than half the thickness of the trunk, about one-third the length of the log from the butt end, and as near as possible to the centre, powder and fuse put in, and the hole filled up with sand, a single blast is sufficient to split a log of considerable length, which it does generally, almost as clean as the saw. Beech and ash have been successfully experimented upon, but with oak and some other timbers it is not so successful.

THE KITCHEN.

Yankee Doughnuts—A large cup of butter, two cups of sugar, one pint of light sponge, four eggs, one pint of milk, one teaspoonful soda, some nutmeg. Let the dough rise twice.

Corn Bread.—One pint each of sour milk, flour and meal, half teacup of sweet milk, two-thirds of a cup of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, four level teaspoonsful of soda; steam one hour and a half, bake one hour; to be eaten warm.

To Boil a Turkey.—Stuff a young turkey, weighing six or seven pounds, with bread, butter, salt, pepper and minced parsley; skewer up the legs and wings as if to roast; flour a cloth, and pin around it. Boil it fifteen minutes, then set off the kettle, and let it stand, close covered, half an hour more. The steam will cook it sufficiently. To be eaten with drawn butter and stewed oysters.

English Plum Pudding.—One pound raisins when stemmed and stoned; one pound currants, when washed and dried; one pound suet, chopped to a powder, one half pound citron, cut in thin slices; one-quarter pound candied orange, cut in thin slices, one-half pound flour, when sifted, one-half pound of bread crumbs, one-half pound brown sugar, one pint of milk, one-half pint best brandy; six eggs well beaten, two nutmegs grated, one teaspoonful ground ginger, one teaspoonful ground cloves, one teaspoonful ground mace, tie loosely in a well floured bag, and boil steady for six hours; this receipt was used by my mother for forty years without failure.

GROOMING CATTLE.

The question often arises in the mind of the farmer or stock-raiser whether it pays to groom his animals or allow them a run-way liberally supplied with rubbing posts. It would appear, if we view animals in the light of physiology, that the question, in point of economy, to say nothing of the increased comfort of the animals, had been satisfactorily settled in the affirmative years ago.—There is no question in our mind that grooming or carding cattle is as necessary and even profitable as with horses. A successful breeder is as particular that one should be groomed as the other, and says that he knows it pays. Keeping the skin clear and the pores open, must be as beneficial to the dumb animals as to the human species, and for ourselves we well know that if we keep the body in health it is necessary to keep the skin clean. The question has been solved by breeders of thoroughbreds and they use this means to promote the health as well as increase the size and weight of their animals. They all take great pains to keep them clean, and they are successful in making rapid growth. What will apply to thoroughbreds will apply with equal force to cattle of any or no breed. The practice is not, as many suppose, an expensive one. When the skin is once freed from impurities, two minutes a day spent in currying will keep it so. It pays if in nothing more than keeping the coat slick and glossy.

A resident of Washington, Ky., took a vow that if ever he got drunk again he would whip himself all the way home from the tavern. He got drunk and fulfilled his vow with such vigor that he could not sit out of bed for two weeks.

POETRY.

DON'T STOP MY PAPER.

Don't stop my paper, printer,
Don't strike my name off;
You know the times are stringent,
And dollars hard to get;
But tug a little harder
Is what I mean to do,
And scrape the dimes together,
Enough for me and you.

I can't afford to drop it;
I find it doesn't pay
To do without a paper,
However others may.
I hate to ask my neighbors
To give me theirs on loan;
They don't just say, but mean it,
Why don't you have your own?

You can't tell how we miss it,
If it, by any fate,
Should happen not to reach us,
Or comes a little late;
Then all is in a hubbub,
And things go all awry,
And, printer, if you're married
You know the reason why.

I cannot do without it,
It is no use to try,
For other people take it,
And, printer, so must I.
I, too, must keep me posted,
And know what is going on,
Or feel, and be accounted
A fogy simpleton.

Then, take it kindly, printer,
If pay be somewhat slow,
For cash is not so plenty,
And wants not few, you know.
But I must have my paper,
Cost what it may to me,
I'd rather dock my sugar,
And do without my tea.

So, printer, don't you stop it,
Unless you want my frown,
For here's the year's subscription,
And credit it right down,
And send the paper promptly
And regularly on,
And let it bring us weekly
Its welcomed benison.

THROUGH FLOOD AND FIRE.

"I assure you, my dear boy, I am extremely sorry to appear unkind in this matter; but, believe me, I am acting for the best."

"But surely I may see Rosie as usual?" I asked.

"I am afraid not," replied Mr. Temple. "It would be very injudicious. You are both too young and too romantic at present. Besides your means are utterly inadequate to maintain a wife."

"May I not bid Rosie good-bye, then?" I persisted. "One more meeting cannot hurt either of us."

"Rosie is not at home," replied her father gently, almost sympathetically, as he shook me by the hand. "She went to stay with some friends yesterday. Good-night, and hope for better days."

"Good-night," I replied. "I suppose you don't mean to be unkind, Mr. Temple, but you have made me very miserable."

"My dear young friend," he replied, putting his hand kindly on my shoulder, "were you in a position to maintain a wife, I would sanction your engagement in time; but now such a course, though painful for us all, is the only one Mrs. Temple and I can in justice adopt. We shall be pleased to see you again after our return from the continent. Good-night."

I made no reply—indeed, I could not have spoken just then. My throat was choked with sobs, and big tears welled slowly from my eyes as I walked away across the open space facing the house. This was to be the determination of our engagement then! Rosie Temple and I had flattered ourselves that a series of dances, picnics and charade parties, with a very good knowledge of lawn tennis and croquet constituted housekeeping. We had only £300 a year between us, and dear Rose always spent £50 at least on her dress annually. She had lately been very economical in the matter of gloves, and had made herself a bonnet which was in every sense becoming; still we were not much nearer to matrimony then; and now—

So I pursued my way across the common, and I do not mind confessing that I shed tears as I walked in that dark evening beneath the trees and into the gloomy and desolate high road, caring for nothing and for nobody except Rosie, my pretty piquant Rosie; wondering whether she had gone—or had she really gone. Was it not a pardonable subterfuge on the part of Mr. Temple to induce me to leave the neighborhood.

At that time I had, unfortunately, no occupation. I had been a clerk in a banking-house, but the "bad times" had necessitated a reduction in the "staff," and I was one of those sent away at a month's notice and a month's salary. True, I had a small income derivable from a legacy; but this was scarcely enough to keep me in bread and cheese and clothing.

It will therefore be seen that Mr. Temple was quite right. Matrimony was a luxury I could not afford. I acknowledged it even then as I went home desponding.

When I reached my lodging I found two letters awaiting me. One was from my brother who was commanding a detachment of his regiment in Ireland, the other was from my late father's solicitor. I opened the "official" note first.

It contained only a few lines, requesting me to call on him in London in a day or two, as perhaps I might be able to do some work for the good-natured lawyer.

The other letter was most cheerful, and bore a warm invitation to share my brother's country quarters for a fortnight, "or longer if I liked," next month.

Before I went to bed I replied to both my kind correspondents, accepting both invitations.

Next day I went up to London, and in the afternoon I called upon the solicitor nervously.

His business was simple. Did I know French? I did. Was I acquainted with book-keeping? I was.

"Well, then," said he, "will you go to Geneva, and transact this business, particulars of which I will give you to-morrow?—You shall be paid as my clerk, and have your expenses and something besides."

"Agreed," I said gladly; "I will go. When am I to set out?"

"As soon as you can get ready. If you do this well I think I can help you to something better."

I wrung his hand and left him, took the first train home, packed up, and next morning at 11 o'clock was at the office in London again. I wrote to my brother telling him the facts, mastered my instructions, and next morning I was in Paris.

I found the business at Geneva much more complicated than I expected. It was a liquidation case. Day after day passed; the days ran into weeks, and at last, after six weeks hard work and a run to Chamouni, I was on my way home again.

"Well done!" was the verdict passed upon my efforts, and was very welcome, accompanied, as it was, with a check for fifty guineas."

"Call on me when I return to town," said my friend, "in about two weeks' time I will [illegible] you something I think you will be glad [illegible]"

[illegible] but now I was idle again I felt even more dejected than ever. Liquidation cases are not romantic.

I was now at liberty to join my brother. I telegraphed at once, and at 11 o'clock that evening I was rapped up to take in the reply.

It was short and to the point. It ran thus: "Come along old fellow; stay as long as you like."

I went. I lived with the detachment; and what fun we had! Fishing in a fine river close by, cricket, a little shooting, for September was upon us now; rowing up and down the stream, and dining with the hospitable Irish residents, made up the total of our days after parade or inspection.

One guest night—for we had our little social parties occasionally, we were sitting at the open windows, when the sub of the party exclaimed:

"What a glare there is yonder! It is a fire I believe."

"Bedad, you're right!" said one of our guests. "It is down by Sir John's; he has a house-full. I hope it is not the house itself."

"Shall I turn out the picket?" asked my brother. "Why, look, it is increasing; they may want assistance."

As he spoke the flames mounted up, and the lurid smoke rose high into the glare above.

"Sound the fire-call and turn out the pickets, Hambly," said my brother. "Take the men down at the double. We'll drive over. Come along. Look sharp!"

I hurried out for a coat to cover my dress clothes. Of course being in a hurry, I was delayed. In the dark I groped unsuccessfully, and at length when I emerged from my room I found that the others had driven off in the cars our guests had come over in.

The sentry at the gate civilly "shouldered" his rifle as I passed, and in reply to my question, told me that the captain and the whole party had gone, leaving word for me to follow, if I liked.

"Yes; but how?" "They have taken all the cars, sentry."

"Yes, sir; but there's the gig, sir."

"Whose gig?"

"The boat, sir. You can scull down almost as quick as they'll drive, your honor."

"Good!" I would pull down. It was not far; the moon was still bright. I knew the river pretty well.

No sooner thought than done. A soldier from the guard-room came across and helped me to launch the gig.

"That's a big fire, sir; they do say it's the Hall below. Poor creatures! I hope they will all escape. All right, sir!"

I replied in the affirmative. He let go the painter, and with two vigorous strokes of the light sculls I was in the stream. Fortunately I knew almost every turn and bend of the fine river, or I should have more than once had a narrow escape, if I had not been quickly upset. Urged by a reckless daring I sculled rapidly on alone.

Alone, all but for the company of two good planks. Whence came they, and whither they were bound, I did not think; but I noticed they kept close to me—now swirling away, now in the dim light meeting, then dividing, turning round, separating themselves, and soon inclosing my sculls, so as to impede my way and endanger my safety. They hugged me so closely at last that I lay on my oars, and, clutching the intrusive boards, pulled them into the boat, where, under the thwarts, they exchanged dripping confidences as to what they would do next. What they did shall be told in due course.

Such great effects from trivial causes spring.

The blazing house was now almost visible. The reflection was caught by the water just beyond me. On I scudded round the bend of the bank, the stream hurrying me down, and now I have opened up the town reach, and the burning and half demolished building is crackling and roaring half a mile off. The smoke, dotted with a million sparks, flies up to heaven, while screams and cries and the roar of falling timbers ascend with them to the lurid sky. Those tiny jets of water only serve to aggravate the thirst in the fiery throat, and not to quench it; no man can live near such a fire as that; the heat even in my gig was soon felt distinctly, and the two planks beneath my feet winked at each other in the glare, and glistened side by side at the thought of what was coming.

A yell, a roar! Four people had got upon the crumbling parapet, some feet above the stable roofs, and were crying and shrieking for assistance. Twenty men at once rushed in to offer ropes and help.—What could they do? The unhappy inmates, clad in evening dress, looked weird and unearthly in the fiery glare. One was a lady, three were men. Taking off their coats; they knotted them by the sleeves, and let down the lady to the lower roof in safety. Such a cheer arose for this. Well done, brave men, well done! British chivalry is not dead when Englishmen and Irishmen can act like this. I watched and waited; pulling in, the heat was great. I pulled away to the opposite wing, abutting on the river, now almost wholly clad in flames and smoke, but still itself unburning.

What is that? Can it be a man or woman kneeling there, and unobserved amid the shrouding smoke by all the rest, who are gazing at the gallant men around the stable? The soldiers had arrived, and were doing service; but no one else perceived the solitary form wrapped in an ulster coat, and trembling on the wall above the river.

Not a moment was to be lost. I pulled in hastily.

"Leap," I shouted, "leap." As I spoke I rose up in the boat. The planks winked once more and rattled. "Jump!" I yelled in my excitement.

One look to heaven—a glance down to the swiftly running river, and the person I addressed leaped feet first. Unthinkingly, I moved suddenly; the light gig rocked. In vain I attempted to recover my balance; the boat tipped over, and fell head long into the water, now covered with debris.

The two planks started after me together from beneath the thwarts.

I sank; and as I did so I thought of Rosie and made up my mind to die. If I must, but I struggled manfully for life the while.

When one is unwilling under water the brain seems to become busier than at all other times. I know not why, but in that half minute or so that I was underneath I saw many acts of my life. Circumstances looked, from my mental point of view, very different from what they had to my bodily eyes. I had plenty of time to repent of my rashness, to utter a prayer, and to forgive my enemies; and then I struggled, knocked my head, half sank again, put out my right arm and grasped something—it was a plank.

Seeing a body rising up close by, I raised the head. The person I had tried to save was senseless, evidently.

I was delighted to find that he, too, was floating on a plank, the twin companion of my own; and how those good friends turned about and drove up against each other in sheer delight, as we all floated away fast down the stream together, [illegible] the

I [illegible] traction and sympathy which exists even in wood, I succeeded in getting close to my companion. Leaning my arms upon the trusty plank, I managed to support the form near me; but all this time we neither of us spoke a word, nor could we discern each other's features. The fast subsiding fire was far behind us now.

The steady planks kept floating with us toward the bank, but I was not very anxious to go ashore just then, as the river sides were steep, and certain curling eddies did not look attractive.

The moon had been obscured by heavy clouds; but we could discern the stones which here and there rose up from out the water from a shoal in mid-stream. We should soon be in safety. The planks apparently thought otherwise. They bobbed about, and grew very impatient to reach the shore.

There's distant thunder! A storm is coming up. No, it must be a train passing the bridge above. No; the noise increases! the sound is borne continuously on the wind. The planks got very restless now. The banks came even closer to us, but the stream ran all the faster. The noise was getting louder every minute.

I knew what it was at last. I knew too well. It was the Mill Weir!

If the sluices were open to the huge overshot wheel our doom was sealed. Nothing much short of a miracle could save us. Striking out for the bank, I called to my companion to do the same, but incumbered with the ulster coat his progress was not great.

We would find footing on the lasher, probably the eddy would assist us.

We floated round the turn in the stream. The wheel was revolving. I could plainly hear the splash, splash of its monotonous clank and dash, the water dripped and ran away from the grinding woodwork, and gladly escaped beneath to save being crushed to air on the top of those mighty paddles.

We had two channels to choose from—one over the weir, the other beneath the wheel. The suction to the latter was tremendous. I swam strongly for the former. I reached the slippery piles and caught them. A bright light was burning in a small window in the mill, twenty yards or so away. We were in an eddy for a moment. I called out loudly. A head was put out; I yelled again. The plank whereon I lay slipped from beneath me, rose up again, and carried me headlong down the foaming lasher like an arrow from a bow, while my companion was wrenched away and darted for the wheel. A loud cry escaped me as we parted. All was over now. Death at last. Oh, Rosie, my darling Rosie; till we meet in heaven—farewell! I had time to think so much—no more. * *

"He is all right; don't you lubbers keep around like that; sheer off, can't ye? Let a chap have a mouthful of air! Hurrah, yer sowls! he is breathing!"

He was. It was I. But how weak, how very ill, mentally and bodily, I felt when I awoke again to life and asked for Rosie?

"Sure he is wandering in his mind, so he is. "Dinny, run up and tell the captain the gentleman's alive. Hurry, now!";

I remember nothing more until I found myself in the barracks, in my brother's quarters. Then I suppose I fell asleep. But I again woke to consciousness, they told me in muffled tones that I had only just pulled through brain fever, and had been in bed nearly five weeks.

Five weeks! I was due in London! I told the doctor's so, or somebody spoke for me—at least, the voice was not like my own.

"Indeed, then, it is out of this ye don't stir, me lad, lawyers or no lawyers. Quiet now, or I'll give ye a composer, and send ye to sleep for another month!"

I submitted and got better. In a fortnight I was down again to the ante-room, where I was welcomed as a hero of romance. The good-natured quizzing and congratulations on my recovery were incessant. At last noticing my puzzled look, my brother said:

"Perhaps he hasn't heard the real facts—have you, H—?"

"I have not the very slightest idea what you are all talking about," I replied. "If it's a joke, I don't see it."

"Now look, here she is again! Lucky fellow?"

"Not a day but what she rides over to inquire."

"Her father's here, too."

"Tell them to come in, Hambly, and see the preserver of the sole daughter of his house and heart."

I heard, but scarcely heeded, all his "chaff."

The door opened; a lady in well-fitting habit appeared. Mechanically I rose as she came in. I looked at her for one brief second, the next I clasped her in my arms.

"Rosie, my darling Rosie, can it be you, indeed?"

No doubt about it. She had come to thank me. For what? For saving her life that night when Sir John Carney's house was burned.

It was Rosie I had rescued then. No wonder my heart had beat so fast while we floated down the stream.

Rosie was my own at last. She is mine still, thank heaven!

Very little explanation is necessary. Mrs. Temple and her daughter had been paying a round of visits, and while staying at Sir John Carney's house the fire had broken out. Rosie had been my companion during that twenty minutes in the water. Wrapped up as she was, and silent as we both were, we did not recognize each other in the dark. The miller had stopped the wheel and pulled Rosie out of the eddy just in time.

For a day or two Rosie had been quite unable to give an account of her rescue from the fire; and, when her father arrived, in obedience to a telegram, he learned at the barracks—where he had called with Sir John to thank the commanding officer for his timely assistance, that his daughter's preserver was myself.

The reader will almost guess the sequel. Soon after my return to London I was appointed secretary of a nice little company, with a nice little salary, and work to match all through the influence of the good solicitor. This employment left me at leisure for other work which I was lucky enough to obtain, and my success emboldened me to ask for Rosie once more.

This time I was not refused. We were married the year following; and now, when we wander "over hill, over dale," we often recall how we struggled together for life that memorable night, through flood—through fire.—Cassell's Magazine.

LACE CURTAINS OF PAPER.

"For the land's sake!" exclaimed Mrs. Brown, dropping in upon me for a morning's call, "what an extravagant creature Mrs. Harman is! Why just as I was coming through the back yard I happened to glance up, and I do declare, if there to all her kitchen windows didn't hang the most beautiful lace lambrequins I ever set my eyes on."

"Lace lambrequins at her kitchen windows! You must be mistaken."

"No, I am not; and if you don't believe it just go and look for yourself."

I did so; and there sure enough were hung what appeared to be elegant lace lambrequins.

"[illegible]" [illegible] Mrs. Brown, "[illegible] me angry to see such doings. Mr. Brown is worth twice as much as her husband, and I never thought of having any but green paper curtains at any of my windows."

"Well," I remarked, "I think myself it is a very extravagant move. Young persons, when starting in life, should be economical, if ever, and look out for a rainy day.

"Have you called?" asked Mrs. Brown.

"No, but I should like to."

"Then suppose' you slip on your bonnet, and we'll step over. Those lambrequins have made me mind kind o' curious."

I assented, and in less than five minutes we stood at the door of a pretty cottage.

"Good morning, ladies," said Mrs. Harman, appearing at the door in a neat calico morning dress; walk in," and she ushered us into a cool, shady room, whose windows were draped with curtains of white dotted muslin.

She was very social, and we fell at once into a pleasant chat. At last Mrs. Brown introduced the topic of public economy.

"Yes, indeed," said Mrs. Harman, "I know something of economy. Harry and I are just starting in life, and I feel we ought to save in every way that we can, without infringing upon our real comfort. He wanted me to keep a girl, but I told him no; that I had much rather do my own work, and I find it very pleasant, too. Through the hot weather I rise bright and early, and get all the baking and sweeping out of the way before breakfast; then I have plenty of leisure to sew. Yesterday I finished those curtains, (pointing to the window); I didn't think they would do so well. I made them out of a couple old white dresses that I had thrown aside—"

"You ought to have put your lace lambrequins in here," said Mrs. Brown.

Mrs. Harman looked puzzled.

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"Why, them beautiful lace things you've got hanging up to your kitchen windows; I couldn't think of such extravagance in my house."

Mrs. Harman broke into a hearty laugh.

"Won't you step out and look at them?" she asked.

"Well, I never! if I ain't beat!" uttered the amazed Mrs. Brown, as we surveyed them. For lo and behold they were nothing but newspapers, cut and notched in imitation of lace patern.

Mrs. H. kindly allowed us to fold the paper and cut them, so we both walked home and hung lace lambrequins at our kitchen windows. Try it.

THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Gov. McClellan's first annual message, which we give in supplement form this week, is a most able document, and should be carefully read by all our readers. Throughout the whole State, the press, Republican, as well as Democratic, commend it in the highest terms. The Trenton State Gazette says of it—"We have a man of brains for Governor of New Jersey, and his message attests the great value of brains in the Executive position. We enjoin upon everybody who cares anything about this State and its welfare, carefully to read every word of this really admirable document. We pronounce it the best message that has come from the Executive of this State for many years." This coming from a Republican journal, acknowledged to be among the foremost in the State, is complimentary to our excellent Governor. It does not require like comments, however, to attest to the soundness of Gov. McClellan's administration. His every action since his accession to the office of Governor, shows that he is a man fit for the position. New Jersey may well feel proud of "Little Mac." Gov. McClellan in his message dwells upon the importance of the people paying strict attention to their local government. By this means they will secure official honesty and economy and prevent abuse in the administration of their affairs. His words on this particular subject are wise, and we hope the Democracy will heed them. On the educational, reformatory, industrial and mechanical interests of the State, the Governor has taken deep interest, and speaks from personal observations. His message is more on the Statesman order than the politician, and should be carefully read by all lovers of a good State government.

The organization of the Legislature was remarkable principally for the complete manner in which South Jersey "swept the deck" in the distribution of offices in the Senate. The six Senators from that region stood together in solid phalanx and the offices given to the counties north of the Raritan might be counted on the thumbs of one hand. The Engrossing Clerkship, which is the most important clerical office in the Senate, and in which there is the greatest opportunity for falsification, and consequently the greatest demand for unimpeachable integrity, is awarded to a man just out of prison, where he was sent for corruptly libelling an officer of the State.

Among the incidents of Resumption is that the law now forbids the issue from the Treasury to National banks of all notes of a denomination less than $5. This will considerably curtail the circulation of small notes, greenbacks excepted, and in so much will promote the circulation of silver for payments of sums less than $5. Several Eastern banks have recently applied for new notes of the denominations of $1 and $2, but the law forbids their issue. Even mutilated notes cannot be exchanged for new ones of the same denomination. The greenback $1's and $2's will remain in circulation as heretofore.

EDUCATION IN NEW JERSEY.

The following extracts are taken from the report made by the Judges on the Department of Education and Science at the Centennial, which has recently been issued. The teachers, school officers, and pupils of the State, who made contributions of school work for the New Jersey exhibit, will be gratified to know the estimation that was placed upon their efforts by those whose judgment must be valued above that coming from any other source:

"In at least one important respect the New Jersey Educational Exhibit was unique. It surpassed all others in fullness and in completeness of organization. Every county in the State, every class and grade of public schools, every high school, all the higher institutions of the State, every important private institution, 95 per cent. of all teachers, and 14,000 pupils, were represented. Besides this, there were 400 photographs of school houses. Nothing like this has been done by any other State or country since the inauguration of such exhibitions. It was enough to kindle the admiration of judges and public. The whole state appeared to have been worked over as a garden is worked by an ambitious cultivator, to make the very utmost of soil and seed. We said to ourselves instantly, here is organization, with zeal, thoroughness, efficiency of work. The whole body of school officers and teachers must have felt a common touch of inspiration, and moved with a unity of purpose, as an army of disciplined men is moved by a common patriotic sentiment, under the direction of a leader whom they have learned to love. New Jersey is a small State, to be sure, but that does not account for the completeness of the exhibit.

"But the New Jersey exhibit was also remarkable for the excellence of the pupils' work, and for the uniformity of that excellence. The work done in the smaller towns, and even in the country neighborhoods, compared well with that done in the city schools—a splendid comment on the efficiency of the State Normal School, as well as on the thoroughness of supervision.

"Nor does this complete the statement of New Jersey's great merit. The classification and arrangement of her exhibit were so admirable, and the catalogue so complete, that the work of each county, city, village, school, or pupil, could be referred to at will.

"Examined in detail, the work in penmanship and drawing challenged especial attention. The map-drawing, which was nearly or quite all from memory, showed unusually good training in geography as well as in the use of the pencil or pen; and the proportion of time bestowed upon spelling, writing, arithmetic, and the other elementary branches, furnished gratifying evidence that proficiency in these studies, so much neglected in many schools, is there highly appreciated.

"The large and attractive display of class-work, shown by the 33 private institutions, was also without parallel in the American section of the exhibition. Drawing, spelling, penmanship, composition, grammar, mathematics, history, geography, book-keeping, the natural sciences, and the Latin, French and German languages, were very satisfactorily represented by practical exercises—not in the exhibits of all, of course, but of a considerable number, while in no case was there a lack of representation by exercises in the elementary branches.

"Add to the foregoing the carefully prepared histories of the several counties of the State, the numerous statistical charts showing the present condition of education in the State at large, with the pecuniary basis on which it rests, and finally some remarkable independent exhibitions made by young persons zealously devoted to various branches of the sciences and of art, and the reader will gain some idea of the very able and thorough manner in which New Jersey did her part in Group XXVIII of the Centennial Exhibition. She has made rapid progress within recent years, and is really among the most progressive of the States in respect to education."

The Judges of Group XXVIII, were Americans—Andrew D. White, Ithaca, N. Y.; D. C. Gilman, Baltimore, Md.; J. M. Gregory, Champaign, Ill.; John W. Hoyt, Madison, Wis. Foreign—Sir Charles Reed, Great Britain; Rene Fouret, France; John J. Marin, Spain; Otto Martin Torell, Sweden.

Public confidence is all that is wanted to bring good times. There is no lack of money or muscle, of soil or sun, of energy or enterprise. Public confidence is like a mass of jelly, which responds to every impulse that is given it. All that is wanted is that some one—it matters little who—should give things a push. A substitute for bricks is now being made from paper. They are made larger than the ordinary brick, and are said to be impervious to moisture.—Barrels are also made of paper, which are preferred to those made of wood, as there is no leakage as in those of wood from a bad joint or a displaced stave. The great demand for barrels uses up our forests rapidly, and if paper will supply the place of wood it will prevent the denuding of our woodlands to that extent. It is an idle conjecture what the world will do for timber to supply the heavy demands for its use, when the great woodlands are cleared of their old timber, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The New York Sun gives ninety-six as the number of murderers hanged in the United States during the past year, an increase of thirteen compared with the previous year. Of this ghastly exhibit 40 were white, 52 colored, 3 Indians and 1 Chinaman; 5 were hanged for outrage, 4 for wife murder and 1 for filicide. In the list of States Texas comes first, with 10; Louisiana, 9; South Carolina, 8; Alabama, 8; North Carolina, 8; Pennsylvania, 6; Missouri, 5; Georgia, 5; Arkansas, 4; Tennessee, 4; California, 4; New York, 3; Kentucky, Montana, Delaware, Virginia, Ohio, Maryland and Mississippi, each 2; Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Indiana, Nevada and Arizona, each 1.

* * *

The failures of 1878 in New York city amounted to 917, a number in excess of that of any other year. These failures represented liabilities of $63,958,403 and assets of $18,695,531.—The great increase was, of course, attributed to the repeal of the Bankrupt Law, which was taken advantage of by all who could. The large number of failures of the past year may be regarded as a purging of the body commercial, which leaves it all the healthier. The small and unhealthy firms have been crowded out, to the improvement of trade generally. Many houses suspended that were regarded as perfectly solvent. Among liquor dealers, bankers and brokers the failures were most numerous, forty occurring in each pursuit. The largest liabilities, however, were among carpenters and builders, the total being $9,246,352.

BLOOD DRINKERS.

It is said that between 200 and 300 men and women of St Louis drink daily from a half to a pint of blood, piping hot from the veins of slaughtered cattle. More blood-drinking by consumptives and aged persons is done in September and October than during the remainder of the year. The blood of young steers is the best, and should be caught as it comes from the animal and drank while the foam is still on and the steam rising. Consumptives are advised, in addition to drinking the blood, to sit in a slaughter house for a couple of hours every day at killing time to inhale the "steam" of the running blood.

HUNTER'S EXECUTION.

Benjamin Hunter was hanged in Camden jail, Friday morning last, for the murder of John M. Armstrong. About two hundred persons were present in the Court House to witness the execution. Hunter was very weak and nervous in the morning, and refused all food. He was carried from his cage to the gallows, being utterly helpless and unable to walk. At 11.24 the white cap was drawn over his face and the rope adjusted, the doomed man being held up by four of the Sheriff's assistants. He made no response to the usual question of the Sheriff, and at 11.25 the rope was cut. A sickening spectacle was here presented. The rope gave way, so that Hunter was bodily lifted from the floor, and was caught by the assistants. The Sheriff then seized the rope and hauled the condemned into the air, and the execution was done by a number of persons holding the rope while Hunter was suspended.

He died of strangulation, and gave no outward evidence of pain, and at 11.40 the pulse had ceased to beat, and shortly after the body was cut down.

THE OLD YEAR'S TERRIBLE RECORD.

The year just ended will be known as one of suffering in various forms of affliction and casualty. Jan. 15 occurred the dreadful Tariffville railroad accident in Connecticut, with 15 killed and 50 wounded; on the 28th of the same month came the confirmation of the news of the starvation of thousands in China; on April 27th came the news of 3,000 persons being consumed by the burning of a building in Tien-Tsin, China; March 6th, a $500,000 fire occurred at Panama; March 8th there was a fatal colliery explosion at Glasgow; March 11th, the Australian steamer Sphinx burned in the Adriatic, with a loss of 500 lives; March 12th, a colliery explosion at Bolton, England, destroyed 40 persons; March 24th, the British naval training-ship Eurydice capsized off the Isle of Wight, with a loss of 400 lives; March 25th, a million dollars' worth of property was lost by fire in Philadelphia; May 2nd, occurred the terrific explosion of the Minneapolis flour mills; June 7th, by the colliery explosion at Hydock, England, 200 lives were lost; Aug. 4th, the yellow fever became epidemic in New Orleans, thereafter spreading all through the lower Southern country, and destroying, it is estimated, over 13,000 people; Aug. 9th, the Wallingford, Connecticut, tornado destroyed 30 persons and much property; Sept. 3rd, the sinking of the steamer Princess Alice resulted in the death of 600 excursionists; Sept. 11th, 200 were destroyed by the Abercarne colliery explosion; Oct. 23rd, Philadelphia was visited by a terrific tornado, destroying $2,000,000 worth of property; Oct. 24th, there were great prairie fires in Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas; Nov. 9th, eight hotels and other buildings were destroyed by fire at Cape May; Nov. 15th, by the sinking of the Pommerania, 50 lives were lost; Dec. 10th, occurred the Winter floods, with great loss of property, railroad accidents, etc.; Dec. 19th, the sinking of the Byzantium, between Marseilles and Constantinople, 30 persons were destroyed.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 12, 1879.

There is strong reason to believe that the mind of Thomas Graham, the accomplice of Benjamin Hunter, has become impaired. Up to the day of Hunter's execution he maintained a nonchalant air. When the fatal drop ended the life of his accomplice Graham was in his cell a few feet distant and heard all, and when the county physician [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Frederick Eckert died at East Orange a few weeks since, from a bullet wound received during the war. He was a private in the Second New Jersey Volunteer Regiment, and was wounded in the second battle of Bull Run in the Summer of 1862. The bullet lodged in the right side of his back, two inches from the spinal column and in a line about an inch below the short rib. Eckert was discharged, and the wound finally healed. He opened a grocery store on Gould avenue and Steuben street, East Orange. Several years ago the bullet in his back crept slowly around to a point just above the pit of his stomach. Then it began to move upward almost imperceptibly daily. One year ago Mr. Eckert felt it penetrating his right lung, and he could not speak afterward without feeling great pain in his breast. He slept uncomfortably last Thursday night, and early on Friday morning he was found dead in bed by his wife, who had quitted his side only a few minutes before. The bullet had finished its deadly work after sixteen years. Dr. Ill and three brother physicians made a post-mortem examination, and they found the bullet, a heavy, conical ball, in the spot indicated by Eckert.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE.

This work is before us, and those who send five cents to James Vick, Rochester, N. Y., for it will be disappointed. Instead of getting a cheap thing, as the price would seem to indicate, they will receive a very handsome work of 100 pages, and perhaps 500 illustrations—not cheap, but elegant illustrations, on the very best of calendered paper, and as a set-off to the whole, an elegant Colored Plate, that we should judge cost twice the price of the book.

Cut this out—It May Save your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wondrous cures astonishes every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggists, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents.

WALLACE VAIL, P. M.

Attention, Delinquents!

With this issue of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST we send bills to those indebted to us for subscriptions for the same. We trust they will take heed and forward the amount of their bill immediately to this office, where we have just caused to be finished a handsome and cosy little sanctum sanctorum, in which we will be found ready to receipt all bills when the money is paid. There is no use of our stating how much is due us from delinquents. There is too much of it. We want the money which is due, and trust those indebted to us will see that we get it.

Go to Dickens.

PLENTY of snow.

Now get out your cutter,

ASSEMBLYMAN Stiles, of Union, received five votes for Speaker of the House on Tuesday last. He would have made an excellent presiding officer.

WM. P. MULFORD, a colored man, from Bound Brook, received the appointment of Keeper of the Gentlemen's Gallery in the House last Tuesday.

TWELVE inches of snow, which commenced falling about 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, has made excellent sleighing in this section. The livery men are happy.

IT is earnestly hoped by pedestrians that the sidewalks and gutters throughout the city will be thoroughly cleaned of snow as soon as the storm is over.

IF you wish to be entertained go and hear Robert Voorhees, the Rocky Hill Orator, at the First Presbyterian Church Monday evening, Jan. 20th. Tickets 50 cents.

REV. DR. R. K. RODGERS, D. D., a well-known divine of Bound Brook, died at his residence there on Monday last. His funeral on Thursday was largely attended.

IN our report of the accident to Mr Palmer, last week, we stated that Drs. Hart and Burlingham were called to attend him. We should have said Hart and Probasco.

A LARGE sleighing party from Milburn visited Chamberlain & DeCamp's hotel in this city on Wednesday evening last and indulged in dancing, a good supper, &c.

CITY CLERK Wm. B. Smith has office room with Justice Nodyne in Dr. Stillman's brick building on Front St., where the books under his charge may always be found.

WE understand that the managers of the Muhlenberg Hospital Association contemplate giving a dramatic entertainment shortly in aid of the institution, which will be a creditable affair to our city.

PETER I. Ten Broeck carried off the honors for Plainfield in the distribution of offices at the opening of the Legislature last Tuesday, he receiving the appointment of Assistant Sergeant-at-arms of the Senate.

It is stated on good authority, that Tom Taff, the jolly landlord at Scotch Plains, is possessor of a fine trick horse. He thinks so much of the animal that he gets out of his sleigh at times and leads the animal rather than use a "starting bar" on him.

"GAME IN SEASON," was the tag suspended about the neck of a large live chicken hawk exhibited in front of Coriell's meat market, Front Street, on Tuesday last. The carnivorous bird was captured after one of its wings had been broken by a shot from a gun in the hands of a Mr. Bird of this city.

SMITH, the barber, located for the past year in the City Hotel building, has made a change of base and is now domiciled in Flagg's building, North Avenue. He has fitted up his quarters in fine style and has bath rooms attached. "Tom" gives a clean shave and is therefore liberally patronized.

IN accordance with arrangements made by the Central Railroad Company with the Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., the latter corporation began running their loaded coal trains over the former's road on Monday last. That accounts for so much travel over our favorite road during the still hours of the night.

THE amount raised in New Jersey for city, county, state schools, and state taxes for 1878 was $5,014,734.86. The total debt of the nine largest cities is $36,502,722. Jersey City, $14,317,456, Elizabeth, $5,806,500: Rahway, $1,690,090, New Brunswick, $1,468,000, Newark, $8,824,455, Paterson, $1,374,000. Plainfield has no debt.

CONSIDERABLE excitement was created in front of the City Hotel, Thursday afternoon by the exhibition of two live tape worms that had just been removed by Dr. C. A. W. Ward of the Newark Medical and Surgical Infirmary, 236 Market Street, Newark. One from Mr. Wm. Hedden, and one from Miss Katie Holmes, both of Plainfield. The Dr. has his office in the Hotel as may be seen by his advertisement in another column, where he treats all chronic diseases with equal success that he removes tape worms. He also removed a tape worm from John Hard last Saturday.

WHEN a person, who has subscribed for a newspaper, desires its discontinuance, it is always proper to pay arrears and notify the publisher to that effect, but when a paper is thrust upon people without their order or consent, they are under no obligations to go to the trouble of notifying publishers to stop it. A simple refusal to take it from the Post Office is sufficient. But, if the paper is taken from the office and used, the person so receiving and using it is in effect and law, the same as a subscriber and is bound to pay for it. This information seems to be seasonable just now when all manner of [illegible] games and swindles are being practised.

THERE will be the Dickens to pay in Flagg's Parlors, North Avenue, next Tuesday evening.

READ [illegible]' advertisement, and take heed of what he says. Clothing can be purchased cheap of him now.

THE twelfth session of the Elizabeth M. E. District Conference will be held in Plainfield, on February 11th, at 9 a. m.

Admission 15 cents, with plenty of refreshments at fair prices. See advertisement about the matter in another column.

Corriell, John Simpson, Lewis Craig, E. W. Runyon, J. B. Titsworth, J. B. Vandervar, Manning Stelle.

Union out in the Cold.

Union County yesterday fared as well as usual. In other words the Republican caucus in the Legislature left her aspirants out in the cold. True, a man from Plainfield got a place, but the active Republicans did not want him appointed. Somehow or other Union County is always shabbily treated when the Republicans can obtain control of the Legislature, and yet our county does as much to make the Legislature Republican as any other county.—Elizabeth Monitor.

The Mendelssohn Quintette Club,

Assisted by Mrs. H. F. Knowles, gave a Concert, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., Tuesday evening, Jan. 14th. It was grand, simply grand. No other word will express it, nor do we think that word is used unfittingly. We rarely ever have the opportunity, here at our very doors, of hearing music of the quality furnished by this Club. Their wonderful success may be attributed to the fact that each man is a thorough artist and has already gained plaudits for his efforts as a Soloist. Of Mrs. Knowles too much can hardly be said. The lady possesses a very mellow voice, which is at the same time powerful. An enchanting vivacity of manner renders her efforts highly agreeable and the perfect control of her voice that she has, enables her to render very difficult and intricate pieces with ease. She received two encores as an appreciation of well deserved merit. Mr. Edward Heindl executed a Grand Fantaisie for Flute, by Briccialdi, with praiseworthy exactness and expression. The Second Fantaisie, for Clarionette, was a pleasing offering by Mr. Thomas Ryan; but decidedly the interest of the audience was centered in the efforts of Mr. Bernard Listemann.—This gentleman was especially welcome, having on former occasions made for himself a name here and a very enviable one at that. His renderings fully realized the most sanguine expectations, and he has added another bright star to the portion of his "crown" reserved for Plainfield.—This gentleman is particularly commendable for his fine appreciation of a composer's under thought and his consequent beautiful expression. All the finer tones and shades of meaning are so clearly drawn forth from the strings of his instrument as a versatile author can transfer to paper. We must again congratulate the Y. M. C. A. They know that which is good and are not slow to administer it to the literary and musical palates of Plainfield.

Report of the Relief Association for Two Months.

The ladies of the Relief Association desire that the public shall become more familiar with the practical working of the organization, in order that their interest in it may not diminish, especially at a time when such urgent necessities are upon it. The association commenced its work Nov. 4th, 1878, since which time there have been daily applications for relief. By a regulation of the association, each case is investigated by a visitor, and relief granted or refused, according to the report of the visitor. By this means several fraudulent cases have been detected. The treasury would often be exhausted, if relief should be granted in response to all applications. The Executive Board endeavor to exercise careful judgment and discrimination in dispensing aid. The funds thus far have been received from membership fees and from voluntary contributions. The ladies would hereby tender thanks to all who have contributed—in money, in furniture for rooms, in materials for use of Employment Bureau, or in anything which tends to aid in making the work effective. They would make special mention of the Christmas offering of $100 from the Crescent-Avenue Sunday School, and of the gift of clocks from Messrs. Collier and Magie. Also of the kind offer of Mr. H. P. Reynolds, to furnish medicines gratuitously to those not supplied by the city physician. The nature of the work which the association has undertaken, and the increased misery and suffering produced by this inclement season, certainly ought to make an appeal strong enough to the good people of Plainfield to keep the treasury constantly replenished. The ladies cordially invite the citizens to visit the rooms any morning from 10 to 12 o'clock, and see how the work is conducted. There are at present 67 visitors for the association. They have made reports upon 86 applications. Of these 13 have been regarded unworthy, and refused aid, and 9 are deemed ineligible.—The number of women who have been furnished work in limited amount by the Employment Bureau, 28; number of articles made, 139; amount paid in clothing, for articles made, $4 55; value of edibles given to sick and needy, $67.83; value of tickets on Holly Tree Inn, $5.94; value of coal dispensed, $44 99. Appended is a copy of the report of Mrs. Joseph M. Myers, treasurer of the association to January 10th, 1879:

Mrs. [illegible], Treas.

We predict a mild winter before this time next August. Stick a pin in here.

YESTERDAY, (Thursday) morning, the passenger train leaving Roselle for N. Y. at 5:35, engine No. 152, ran into the rear end of a coal train belonging to the P. & R. road, which was standing on the track near Elizabeth, the engine taking water. No. 152 was badly wrecked and the caboose and three coal cars of the train demolished. A wrecking train from the Port was summoned and after a delay of about one hour the track was once more clear for travel. No one injured.

CAN it be necessary to say any more than "look at the advertisement" to induce you to attend Miss Rogers' Third Musical Recital on Thursday evening, Jan. 23rd. In our notice of the last recital we tried to convey to our readers some idea of how thoroughly we enjoyed it. If three of the members of the New York Philharmonic Club, combined with Miss Rogers, could give such music as we heard then, what can be done by the whole club. Don't give up that conundrum, but do as we propose to do, go and solve it at Assembly Hall next Thursday evening. In the vocal department we are to have, in addition to Miss Hewlett, Mr. Stoddard, the most popular baritone ever heard in Plainfield. Such attraction cannot fail to crowd the house.

Miraculous Escape.

On Tuesday afternoon, the engineer of the train, Mr. Hugh McClaren, which leaves Somerville for Flemington at 2:30, when near the Neshanic Station, the side rod of the engine became detached and knocked the bottom of the cab to atoms, throwing the engineer upon the top of the boiler, but fortunately he was but slightly injured. His fireman, Billy Snetzer, escaping by jumping into the tender. The engine was badly damaged. An engine was telegraphed for at Somerville which was immediately dispatched and took the train on to its destination.—Somerset Messenger.

Personals.

We regret to learn of the illness of Jas. F. DeCamp, who is confined to his house of pneumonia.

Among those who enjoyed the fine sleighing last Saturday, we noticed our stout friend J. H. Edwards, of Westfield, who tips the balances at 340 avoirdupois.

The genial countenance of Sheriff Ryder was observed in Plainfield on Monday last. He, in company with Deputy Nicholl, came here on unpleasant business to certain parties.

We learn from the death list in the N. Y. Herald of Thursday, that Sam. Spencer, brother of "Sandy" Spencer, well-known to many of our residents, departed this life on Tuesday morning, Jan. 14. Deceased was esteemed by all who knew him for his generous qualities.

Mr. H. P. Reynolds, druggist, has been recommended by his physician to try the balmy air of the South for his failing health, and he will accordingly so take their advice.

Miss Fannie Tefts, of Fredonia, N. Y., is a guest of Mr. A. M. France, the well-known expressman of this city.

Escaped Prisoners.

At about seven o'clock last Friday evening two prisoners escaped from the Somerville Jail by knocking out a lot of bricks from the north side of the outer wall of the prison, making a hole about 16 inches square through which they made an easy exit. John Finerty, alias John Collins, was convicted of highway robbery at North Plainfield, and was sentenced for a term of three years in the State Prison; the other John Heninger, was sentenced for a term of 9 months for robbing the dwelling house of Carl R. Goshen, the Giant at Middlebush. John Collins is a man about six feet high, light complexion, round freckled face, blue eyes and light sandy hair cut short, aged about 21 years, dressed in gray clothes. The other prisoner, John Heninger, is about five feet six inches, dark complexion, dark hair and eyes, small dark moustache and about 23 years of age. Sheriff Van Liew has offered a reward of fifty dollars for their apprehension and delivery at Somerville, or $25 for either. Another white man sentenced to State Prison for one year and a colored boy sentenced for 3 years had the opportunity also of escaping, but on account of the severe cold weather, and as they allege, not knowing where to go for a safe refuge, concluded they would stay and face the music, consequently they alarmed the sheriff after the prisoners had fled, but it being too late to discover their whereabouts, although every effort was made by the Sheriff and citizens to get on their trail. It is thought by many that the convicts had help from the outside, as a large crowbar belonging to the Sheriff, which had been brought from the wagon shed was found near the hole through which they made their escape.—Somerset Messenger.

STATE STREET HOUSE.

F. Conway, of Middlesex.

We this week make extracts from Comptroller Stockton's admirable Annual Report of the finances of the State and [illegible]

Common Council Proceedings.

THURSDAY EVENING, JAN. 15th, 1879.

Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—Coriell, Depew, Finch, Lithgow, Moore, Potts, Reddish, Simpson, Boatmore, Stewart, Stover.

President Potts in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Mr. Coriell presented the following communication:

To the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J.

You will please to take notice, that in the matter of the re-assessment for the grading of the road way and sidewalk on Park Avenue, we are dissatisfied with the assessment made by the Commissioners appointed by your Hon. Body, because the amount allowed to the undersigned was less than the actual cost of the work done by us, and that we desire to appeal from the same and to file our appeal with the City Clerk of the City of Plainfield.

J. H. PLATT,
for himself and
JOHN I. HOLLY.

Plainfield, Jan. 13, 1879.

On motion, referred to Com. on Streets and Public Health.

Mr. Stover presented petition of James H. Force, for a license to keep an Inn and Tavern, and to sell spirituous and fermented liquors in the building now occupied by him situated on the northwesterly side of Front Street. On motion, referred to Com. on Licenses.

By the same—Petition of Frederick Casper for a saloon license, to sell spirituous and fermented liquors, in the building now occupied by him, situate on Second St., near Park Ave.

On motion, referred to Com. on Licenses.

Mr. Simpson presented petition of E. P. Thorn for a license to sell spirituous and fermented liquors in his saloon, situate on Park Ave., near Front St.

On motion, referred to Com. on Licenses.

Mr. Depew asked if the Com'n from J. H. Platt had not been referred to the wrong Com. (Streets and Public Health). He thought it should go to the Com. on Assessments and Sewers. After some further discussion it was referred to the Com. on Assessments and Sewers.

Mr. Coriell presented claim of Children's Home Association for six months board of Anna Freeman, $25.

On motion, referred to Com. on Alms.

Mr. Stewart, from Com. on Printing and Stationery, stated that the Roll Blanks and Committee Cards had been procured and were in the hands of the City Clerk.

Mr. Stewart offered the following: "The Committee on Printing will please order 250 affidavit blanks printed for officers of the city government."

Adopted, all aye.

Mr. Depew offered the following:

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 15th, 1879.

WHEREAS, at the last meeting of the Council of 1878 a Resolution was offered and adopted that of the balance in the Treasury, $300 be devoted to reducing note due Jan. 19th, 1879, and

WHEREAS the balance of cash on hand as reported by the City Treasurer was $1,345.32, and the amount of warrants ordered drawn, and remaining unpaid was $1,806.73, thereby more than absorbing all balance in the hands of the Treasurer, therefore be it

Resolved, That His Honor the Mayor, and the City Treasurer, be and they are hereby requested and empowered to renew the note falling due on the nineteenth day of January, 1879, to the First National Bank of the City of Plainfield, for the full amount of ($3,500) Thirty-Five Hundred Dollars for a period of three months from said date.

Adopted, all aye.

Mr. Lithgow offered the following: Resolved, That the Com. on Fire, Water and Lamps is hereby instructed to advertise for proposals for lighting the streets of the city from February 1st to April 1st, 1879.

Adopted, all aye.

By the same—The following:

Be it ordained and enacted by the inhabitants of the City of Plainfield in Common Council assembled, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, that the Ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to license Inns and Taverns, and to regulate and prohibit the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors," adopted Feb. 22d, 1872, and re-adopted March 5, 1875, is hereby amended by adding the words after "shall" in the second line of Sec. 12 between the hours of eleven o'clock at night and seven o'clock in the morning; and

On motion, referred to Com. on Laws and Ordinances.

Mr. Stewart offered a resolution, that the Rules of Order of 1877 be adopted by this Council.

Mr. Stover moved to amend by adopting the Rules of Order of 1875.

Mr. Lithgow moved as an amendment to an amendment, that a Com. of three be appointed by the Chair to settle upon Rules of Order. He thought this the best plan, and if the resolution and the amendment offered previous to his were withdrawn the matter could be settled this evening. The resolution of Mr. Stewart and the amendment of Mr. Stover were withdrawn, and the motion of Mr. Lithgow adopted. The President appointed as such Com. Messrs. Lithgow, Stover and Finch.

Mr. Finch requested that the President direct the chairmen of the several standing committees to make full and detailed reports of the standing of the city at the next regular meeting of the Council, and it is requested that parties about the city knowing of nuisances and irregularities are asked to send such information to the chairmen of the several committees at once in order that they may be thoroughly posted so that they can make a full report. And that the Finance Committee be especially directed to make an itemized report of the probable wants of the city for the coming fiscal year, and that the Tax Collector be directed to make for the information of said committee a complete list of all persons who are in arrears in their taxes and the amounts due from each person so named.

Mr. Coriell called from the table the claim of A. V. Searing, groceries, &c., $29, tabled at the last meeting of the Council of 1878. The Clerk then read the claim by items, and, on motion, it was referred to Com. on Alms.

Mr. Stewart moved that when this Council adjourn it adjourn to meet next Monday evening, at the usual hour.

Mr. Stover thought they should meet sooner, on account of the expiration of some of the licenses, as some of them expired to morrow, &c., and they would be selling without a license. After some further discussion, and that next Monday would be none too late to act upon the licenses presented this evening, (and the Committee wanted sufficient time to examine the petitions) the motion of Mr. Stewart was complied with.

After a few remarks by the President in reference to the prompt action of the several Committees, especially the Finance Committee, Council then adjourned.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Madam Rumor gives it to us, in confidence, that an Amateur Minstrel Troupe has been organized in this place, and is now rehearsing for a grand entertainment to be given some time in February. It is proposed to give the proceeds to aid in purchasing a new bell for the Baptist Church.

At the present writing, beautiful weather and good sleighing continues at the Plains. That these blessings are improved and enjoyed, especially the latter, is made manifest by the almost constant jingling of merry sleigh bells.

The boys and girls, with a healthy sprinkling of older heads, may be seen, nightly, enjoying the excellent coasting privileges afforded by the "Spencer Hill." Indeed, so great has become the mania for this sport that our Public School Principal was the other night seen on the hill enjoying the rare sport. He did not come out, however, till the late appearance of "Luna" made it necessary for a little "Day"light.

Jeremiah Fisher, a well known and esteemed citizen, formerly, and for a long time an efficient Engineer on the Central Railroad Ferry, died at his residence, New Providence, on Friday morning last. Funeral services were held on Sunday and the remains were conveyed to Rondout, N. Y., for burial.

The attendance at the Public School on Monday last was one hundred and fifteen. This large attendance speaks well for the health of the community and the prosperity of the school.

The school teachers have all "Dunn" it.

Rev. E. S. [illegible], Presiding Elder of Elizabeth District, will preach and administer the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, in the M. E. Church, on Sunday, Jan. 19th, at 3 P. M. [illegible]

FIRE MATTERS.

The firemen of Elizabeth and State have in consideration an application to the Legislature requesting the passage of a law for the more equitable distribution of the assessments from Insurance Companies.

The new truck of Resolute Hook and Ladder Company, of Morristown, built by Leverich, of Brooklyn, was received on Wednesday of last week amid general rejoicings by the Company, who after a parade entertained the builder, the Common Council, officers of the Fire Department and other friends at the United States Hotel. Speaking of the Truck the Banner says:

The new apparatus has already been described in detail and we have nothing to add except that its appearance on close examination warrants all that has been said about it. The fire extinguishers carried by the truck are painted of the same dark blue and richly decorated by a gold monogram, designed and painted by Mr. E. J. Thatcher. Mr. Leverich says it as good an apparatus of the kind as there is in the East. Its frame is all of iron and steel, and in fact all its parts that could be made of these metals were so constructed.

It cost $1,250, made up as follows: The members of the company out of their private purses paid $350, $200 was realized on the old truck and the city pays the balance—$700.

State Comptroller's Report.

The annual report of Hon. Robert F. Stockton, State Comptroller of the Treasury, presents a very full and clear exhibit of the financial condition of the State. It is explained at the outset that the estimates of receipts and expenditures for the coming year have been made upon the idea that the true interpretation of the State Constitution, which forbids the creation of any debt or liability beyond a certain amount without, at the same time providing the ways and means for its payment, requires that appropriations shall not be made by the legislature to an amount exceeding that portion of the revenue of the State that will not be required for the necessary State expenses.

With this prefatory remark the Comptroller proceeds to give facts and figures showing that the financial condition of the State is most encouraging. The value of the property of the State is $10,512,997.91, an increase since last year of $421,682.86. This highly satisfactory statement then follows:

"The indebtedness of the State which, at the date of my last annual report, was two millions seven hundred and ninety-six thousand three hundred and seventy-six dollars and eight cents ($2,796,376.08,) has been decreased during the past year, by payment upon the principal of the war debt and by discharging in full all loans and all balances due upon the various legislative appropriations of former years. The only debt at present, consists of outstanding bonds of the loan contracted for war purposes, which amount to two millions one hundred and ninety-six thousand three hundred dollars ($2,196,300).

The investments of the State are as follows: Stock, $415,316.7.; U. S. bonds, $170,000; railroad and canal bonds, $151,000; bonds of N. J. school districts, $85,000; bonds of counties, townships and cities, $799,670.44; bonds of the State $138,000; bonds and mortgages, $1,428,463.49; ditto in arrear of one year's interest, $699,412.20; riparian leases and rentals, $771,007.50; real estate and personal property connected therewith, $5,422,533.78; interest, taxes and debts due and unpaid, $192,851.11, same in process of collection, $138,782.56; bank balance, $400,959.67. Of this amount of investments, $6,773,511.54 belongs to the State fund, $2,462,633.83 to the school fund, $1,458,852.54 to the sinking fund, $116,000 to the agricultural college fund, and $2,000 to the Soldiers' Children's Home. The income from the State fund the past year was $103,031.97, an increase of several thousand dollars over that of the previous year.

The report shows that material changes have been effected by the school fund investment. The amount of reinvestment during the past year, amounted to $57,500, made necessary by the collection of United States bonds, maturing to the amount of $7,000, personal bonds to the amount of $48,500, a township bond of $500, and school district bonds to the amount of $1,500. The surplus income for the year, that was invested, amounted to $76,702.64, which together with the sum of $18,022.36 of the bank balance, comprised the investment for the year, which went toward the enlargement of the fund. The fund has, therefore, been increased, by investment, $94,725, and the total investment and reinvestment for the year has been $152,225.

$100,000 will be required from the School Fund to meet the payment of the annual appropriation for the benefit of the public schools, which falls due during the month of November, and $149,000, which was transferred from the State Fund on the last day of the fiscal year, are required to be invested in the principal of the fund, by the act of the Legislature.

Of the large amount reported under the head of taxes unpaid $75,949.33, is owing by Hudson county, and $71,495.56 by various railroad companies. For some years the receipts of the State Fund were unequal to the expenditures, leaving a large deficit at the close of each year. In 1876 this deficit was over three hundred thousand dollars, and in 1877, over four hundred thousand dollars. During the past year not only has this deficit been satisfied and all the annual expenses met, but there was a large balance left. While the receipts of 1878 exceeded those of 1876 by $72,246.76, the expenditures of 1878 were $538,023.74 less than those of 1876. The whole receipts of all the funds were:

From State taxes	$[illegible] 51
" Tax on corporations	[illegible] 42
" Interest and dividends	31,019 60
" State Prison receipts	71,221 79
" Fines and recognizances	6,321 90
" Licenses and fees	2,463 14
" Revised statutes	2,491 20
" United States, for rent of court room	200 00
" State House extension	61 19
		1,648,568 59
From two-mill school tax		1,106,007 42
" Income of School Fund		119,382 44
" Securities of School Fund		37,000 00
" Interest on securities in Agricultural College Fund		4,960 00
		$2,[illegible] 44
From temporary loans		300 000 00
Total receipts		$3,[illegible] 56

After making the deduction of receipts from their character peculiar to the year, the sum of $779,415.35 remains as the revenue of the State, exclusive of temporary loans and taxes, as compared with $698,046.25 for the preceding year.

The total disbursements have been $3,122,387.70, and after deducting the disbursements made from the several funds set apart for special purposes, the amount of the two-mill school tax, and the temporary loans paid off, the sum of the remaining disbursement is found to be $1,476,435.38, which was the actual amount paid out during the year from the receipts available for current State expenses and legislative appropriations. Thus it appears that the expenditures were $697,020.03 more than the receipts, exclusive of loans and taxes, and this amount was therefore the portion of the receipts from taxes which was required to meet the State expenditures during the past year. In this expenditure is included the sum necessary to pay off the balance due upon appropriations of former years; this charge, therefore, does not belong to the disbursement necessary for the expenses of 1878. Deducting the amount of such payments, $375,411.55, leaves the expenditure of 1878 $1,100,023.73, and, consequently, the sum of $321,108.48 as the amount which was required from taxes to meet the necessary expenditures of the year.

The Comptroller estimates that the revenue for the year 1880, should there be no changes in the laws under which it is derived, will probably amount to $750,000. A table of the taxable property in each county as returned by the several Boards of Assessors, shows the total valuation to be $551,651,549, a decrease of $34,395,549 from the valuation of 1877. The only public debt of the State at this time is what is known as the war debt, for the gradual extinction of which provision is made by the operation of the Sinking Fund.

The rest of this complete and interesting report is devoted to details of the expenditures, showing that, among other disbursements, $[illegible] was paid on State Prison account; $[illegible] for State Prison extension; $[illegible] for the Trenton Asylum; $[illegible] for the Morristown Asylum; $[illegible] for County Asylums; $[illegible] for the feeble-minded, deaf and dumb; $[illegible] for [illegible]; $[illegible] for the Reform School; [illegible] lunatics; $10,828.16 for clerical services; $68,901.00 for Judiciary, Court expenses, &c.; $31,151.30 for transportation and costs; $31,111.24 for salaries and fees; $11,000 for the Riparian Commission; $15,856.29 for State House expenses, $3,722.98 for fish culture; $18,626.02 for revision of statutes, and $74,719.89 for legislative expenses.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

[Under the above head we shall endeavor each week to give items and news of interest to the lovers of fishing, gunning, trotting, athletic and other sports. We shall be pleased to receive contributions or items for this column from all interested in such matters].

The Mayor of Camden has committed Frank Pullen to jail for ten days in default of paying a fine of $40 for offering eight rabbits for sale after the first of January.

The many friends in this city of Mr. Thomas Bagot, a member of Co. E., 23d Reg. N. Y. S. M., a resident of Brooklyn, N. Y., will find pleasure in reading the following from the Brooklyn Daily Argus of the 2d inst., from which we glean the following regarding their Annual Games at their Armory on New Year's Eve:

"The entries for the first race, a five mile walk, were Henry H. Leland and Robert N. Coleman, of Company A. E. J. Barber, of D, and Thos Bagot, of E. The first three were sent off by the crack of a revolver at 7:22, the favorite being Barber. Bagot was late, and did not come on the track till the others had made one lap, but he walked at a tremendous pace, and soon after the commencement of the second mile he had made up his lost lap. The first mile was done by Barber in 10 min. 57 sec., with Coleman, Leland, and Bagot in the order named. It took 11 min. 4 sec. for Barber to make the second mile, and Bagot was next close behind Barber. Barber walked splendidly, but it was noticed that while he was doing all he could, Bagot was walking well within himself. When Barber spurted, Bagot let out, but always satisfied himself with coming within a foot or two of Barber, making no attempt to pass him. The third mile was got over in 11 min. 10 sec., Bagot being still on Barber's heels, with Coleman and Leland away behind. The pace was quickened on the fourth mile, and both Barber and Bagot made fine walking. The excitement was great just about this time, and both men were cheered on by their friends. At the end of the first lap of the last mile Bagot passed Barber amidst the wildest applause, and though Barber put on the steam he never overtook Bagot, and the race ended as follows: Bagot, 50 min. 32 sec.; Barber, 51 min. 23 sec.; and Leland, 54 min. 15 sec. Coleman retired on the fifty-fourth lap."

We congratulate "Tom" upon this his first public appearance as an amateur pedestrian, and trust to yet see his name among the professional walkers. The "time" made gives evidence that he possesses the power of endurance, and is otherwise qualified to make a fast walker.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

James Vermeule (col.) lost his little boy last week, aged 15 months.

Lewis H. Heinger has a new patent self-lighting lamp burner which he is sole agent for in this County.

The meetings during the Week of Prayer last week were largely attended.

The first entertainment of the Westfield Lyceum came off on Thursday night too late to report the same.

John Stilliger and Matthias Schweinfurth was before the Grand Jury on Tuesday last to answer to a charge of keeping a disorderly house and selling liquors without license, made by I. M. French against them. They both gave bail to appear at the trial.

Our people took advantage of the fine sleighing we have had during the past week. Among the fine new cutters out we noticed those of Messrs. J. S. Irving and Nathan Burasmith, and Rev. Mr. Gill. Mr. Irving has some fine sleighs for sale at his shop.

Aeolian Hall is no more, it belongs now to the things that are past. The Westfield Lyceum has taken its place, and hereafter it will be known by that name. The Hall has been completely renovated and a new coat of paint given. The pictures representing the "Progress of America" have been removed, the stage built larger and scenery will be put up as soon as possible.

Owing to the small attendance, on account of the many other affairs that have been going on for the last two weeks, Westfield Div. No. 24 S. of T. has not as yet elected any new officers, but expect to do so next Monday evening, Jan. 20th.

Under the auspices of the M. E. Church there will be given a series of five Popular Entertainments at the Church during the Winter. The first of the series will come off on Jan. 23d, when there will be Readings by the well-known A. E. Pearsall. Prof. C. H. Edwards, will act as organist. Tickets for the whole series, $1. Single admission, 25cts.

The Annual Meeting and election of Trustees of the Fairview Cemetery Association took place on Monday evening, Jan. 13th, at the Lecture Rooms of the Presbyterian Church. The meeting was called to order by Mr. C. B. Ripley. Robert M. Fairbairn elected chairman. After the reading of the reports the electing of Trustees for the ensuing year was the most interesting. Mr. Thomas H. Clark and John M. Ledley were appointed tellers. The following were declared elected: Mr. Gideon Ludlow, W. W. Connoly, J. T. Pierson, Dan. Fisk, W. A. McQuaid. Resolutions were passed to the memory of the late Squire Pierson.

A great number of our young folks went over to Short Hills to a party held at the house of Mr. L. Darby on Tuesday night last. All had an excellent time except one young man; who although he had paid for the music, he could not get a dance or anything to eat.

USEFUL TO THE HOUSEWIFE.

MILK AS FOOD IN SICKNESS AND HEALTH.

Dr. Crosby, of the Bellevue hospital, pronounces milk an article of diet which all persons may use, under nearly all conditions. There are those who say that they cannot take milk, that it makes them billious, etc., but he declares that this is not true. A person who is sick may take milk with the greatest possible advantage, because it contains, in a form easy of assimilation, all the elements essential for maintaining nutrition. It is the natural aliment of the young animal, and certainly answers a good purpose for the old animal, provided it is used properly, and not poured into a stomach already overfilled, as though it had in itself no substance or richness. New milk, he does not hesitate to say, may be taken, as far as disease is concerned, in nearly every condition. Perhaps it will require the addition of a spoonful or two of lime water. The addition of a little salt will often prevent the after-feeling of fullness and "wind on the stomach," which some complain of. If marked acidity of the stomach is present, then perhaps a little gentian may be requisite to stimulate the stomach somewhat, and it may be necessary to give it in small quantities and repeat it often; but ice-cold milk can be put into a very irritable stomach, if given in small quantities and at short intervals, with the happiest effect. It is used in case of fever, which formerly it was thought to "feed;" and when scalded it has a desirable effect in summer complaints. But it is an article of diet for people in health, and who wish to remain in that happy condition, that milk should be most appreciated. For the mid-day lunch of those whose hearty meal comes at night, or for the support of those who dine at noon, nothing is so good. The great variety and excellence quality of prepared cereals give a wide choice of food to use with milk. Bread, with berries in their season, or baked sweet apples, boiled rice, cracked wheat, oatmeal, hulled corn or hominy, taken with a generous bowl of pure cold milk, makes the best possible light meal in warm weather for children, and for all adults who have not some positive physical idiosyncrasy that prevents them from digesting it. The men of the firmest health and longest life are the men of regular and simple habits, and milk is a standard in such a diet.—Canadian Spectator.

SIMPLE DRESSES

Ladies are wearing, both for the house and street, very simple dresses of fine twilled flannels, or of the coarser cloth "suitings," made up with the Russian blouse-waists so fashionable in Europe. These waists are shaped like the chemise Russe worn here, with no seams but those under the arms and the shoulders, and long enough to cover the hips. Their fullness, however, is laid in a single box-plait down the middle of the back and one down each front; when the buttonhole hem of the front is also laid in a broad box plaits,this gives the appearance of three plaits in front. A wide belt of the cloth is then added. The edges of this blouse are stitched by machine in many rows on a deep hem, and the broad box plaits have a row of stitching down each edge. The overskirt for this suit may be a deep long round shape, but it is most often a washerwoman overskirt shaped more exactly as a washerwoman's dress when turned up would be than any yet seen. The revers is of the heavy cloth fabric, and is at least half a yard deep; it is turned straight up in front closely around the figure, and is buttoned together behind by a single large button, or else it is held by a short strap with two buttons and holes. The ends then hang straight down behind, and form the only drapery. The short round skirt is without a flounce, being either stitched on the edges or else widely bound with Hercules or perhaps basket-woven braid. Such plain suits are both inexpensive and stylish when made of the blue-gray or olive cloth mixtures, or the heavy twilled flannels or cloths of navy blue or real seal brown, that are sold for two dollars a yard. From seven and a half to eight yards is an abundance of the double-width stuffs. Some ladies add steel or brass buttons to such dresses; but those of smooth bone, either black or the color of the dress, are more stylish.—Harper's Bazar.

FEMALE FREE MASONS.

Recently the Observer, after referring to the fact that Hon. Mrs. Aldworth is supposed to be the only female "Free Mason in the world, divulged the fact that Mrs. B. B. Babington, who was at one time a resident of this State, was also a member of the ancient and honorable Order. The Observer's article has brought the Shelby Aurora to the front, and, in its issue of yesterday, the editor, Mr. J. B. Babington, writes as follows: "Inasmuch as the lady referred to in the above article is our mother, we deem it our duty to republish it and make the necessary corrections. The story is correct with the exception of places and ages. The lady's father was a native of New York, and moved to Greenup county, Ky., where our mother was born and raised. The place where she was made a Mason was in an unfinished church room. She secreted herself under the pulpit, going in an entrance from the side, and was eventually discovered while leaving her hiding place after the Lodge had adjourned. She was about fifteen years old when she was made a Mason, and our father did not join the Order for nearly twenty years after they were married. We do not belong to the Order, but we have it from men who do, that she is higher in Masonry than a large number of men who have passed to the third degree. Our mother is still living, and is now in Boyd county, Ky., a few miles from where she was first initiated into the mysteries of that ancient order of Masons."—Charleston, (N. C.) Observer.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

SETH GREEN ON EELS.

Seth Green has written to the editor of Forest and Stream, in which he reaffirms the opinions he has heretofore expressed, as printed in the Democrat and Chronicle, and alludes to the different opinions in regard to the production of eels, whether from eggs or otherwise, and writes: "I see my name mixed in with all the articles, and I think it my duty to let the people know what I have said. I said I had opened thousands of eels, and I had opened and examined them nearly every day in the year, and had never found any young eels or spawn in them except in their stomachs." He does not assert positively they are hybirds, because he says he does not know, but he is decidedly of the opinion that they breed in the ocean. He says: "I have said that I thought they breed in the ocean, because I have always seen them coming up the fresh water streams when they were not larger than a small needle, and when they are that size they can go up any falls. They do not go up in the sheet of water but on the rocks, the same as an angle worm would go up any wet surface, and I think that this is the reason that there are no eels in the upper lakes. The reason is that they get so large by the time they arrive at Niagara Falls that their weight causes them to drop off. I believe that if Niagara Falls were within one hundred miles of the ocean young eels would go over them. I have never seen or heard of an eel being caught 500 miles from the ocean that was not over six inches long and his body as large as a pipestem. These facts are what I base my opinion on. I am anxious to know how eels breed, and will send the first man a draft on New York for five dollars and pay express charges, that will send me an eel with young eels in it that breed there, or an eel that has a rope of spaw in it." Some of these gentlemen "down East" whose communications we have printed will probably again fish for eels, in order to get the $5 greenback. Mr. G. tells them that if eels do spawn he does not think it will take long to ascertain the fact, "for the roe sack is always there after fish have spawned." The eel question is still open.—Rochester Democrat.

CHARITY.

A tramp came up the garden walk;
He shivered and shook with cold,
His lips looked blue, and his fingers too,
And his garments were thin and old.
—[New York Express.

The tramp walked up to the kitchen door,
A pitiful story he told.
They gave him a ham-bone—minus the meat—
And bread all covered with mold.
—[Elmira Gazette.

"Something to eat," he sadly said,
As he gave his trousers a hitch.
We gave him bread, with fine butter spread,
And he—flung it into the ditch.
—[Hackensack Republican.

Then that tramp went off in a horrid huff—
And he grinned a ghastly grin,
While the cook imbibed some soothing stuff,
That was labeled "Holland Gin."
—[New York News.

A tramp that came to our kitchen door
Asked for naught but a cup of tea,
Which he drank with one swallow, piping hot—
Copper-lined we thought he must be.
—[Meriden Recorder.

Somebody wants a "Printing Bureau" established by the next Legislature, through which all State printing shall be done by contract, and we believe the Newark Advertiser a little time ago endorsed it. It is a very pretty scheme, and all in the interest of "economy" too, of course. The "Bureau" must have a head at a salary of four or five thousand dollars a year, and he will want an office, two or three clerks, and an auditor of accounts, and then, with it all, the State, after perhaps a single year, will pay a higher price for poorer work than it now does.—Morris Jerseyman.

That is just about the style of it. In other States where it has been tried, it has proved a sink of corruption. They have one at Washington, and the nation has not yet "pointed with pride" to the institution. What the State wants is some practical men in the legislature, who will order the printing done in a creditable style and with a view to economy, and not in the interests of favorite printing houses.—Monmouth Democrat.

Just our sentiments exactly.

A good deal of the rain that falls between now and spring will lay with the slippery side up, that careless pedestrians may be suddenly assisted in sitting down. This is one of the conveniences that nature provides for us that is never appreciated.

One of the great needs of this country is a vest pocket deep enough to take in the whole length of the extra cigar, so a man can look his fellow square in the eye and say, "No, I'm sorry, but this is the last, and I have already had it in my mouth."

Probably the mild-eyed goat is the only animal ever invented that can eat twenty-four hours a day, and then get up an hour before day and devour a flour barrel and seven old fruit cans for a lunch.—[Edison.

A man will sit on a picket fence all the afternoon to see a base-ball match, but put him in a church-pew for three-quarters of an hour and he will wobble all over the seat.—[Trade Review.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

CLARA LEE.

BY WILLIAM LYLE.

I was bred to the law, but I am compelled to say the kindness was not reciprocated—the law was never bred to me, and if it had not been for what people called good luck, I might have continued until now "hoping against hope." Having nearly tired out my friends they in desperation "pooled their issues" and enabled me to purchase a small country practice. My purchase lay in the little village of Sandford, a quiet, sober looking place, with the usual accessories, one or two grass grown lanes, a few five-barred gates, the village church, and a haunted house, which last, as belonging to the mysterious part of my narrative, I may as well describe.

The house was a rambling sort of concern, with high conical gables—built for no earthly purpose that I ever could make out, and a sharply sloping roof, a six feet stone wall, and a belt of close set trees separated the building from the street, and effectually concealed it from the gaze of the inquisitive.

One half of the Grange, as it was called, was occupied by Mr. Walter Jinks, a lawyer, (my only rival), and the other half was set apart by tradition for the use of the spirits who must have had rather a dull time of it.

When I first settled in Sandford, I was lucky in obtaining apartments with a very respectable widow lady, who had nothing at all remarkable about her, save a daughter, a girl—I say it advisedly, a girl of some two and forty Winters. Her mother, Mrs. Wiggens, would never on any account permit Jemima to be regarded as having emerged from girlhood. Mrs. Wiggens, no doubt, had some purpose to serve by this perversion of words but she had few to contradict her, and as far as that was concerned, the days rolled on in peace, and the old lady—I mean the old lady—enjoyed the hallucination.

Jemima had a provoking idea that her vocation lay in writing romances, and I had not been over two weeks at Hope Cottage when I was installed as second hero in a forthcoming sensational story. Indeed, the dear obliging girl herself hinted to me that she had to kill one of our best men for the purpose of introducing me into her great romance, "The House of the Seven Murderers."

I believe I forgot to mention that with Mrs. Jinks at the Grange lived a widowed relative—Mrs. Lee and her daughter Clara, whose beauty, by the way, was the admiration of the country road.

Notwithstanding that there were many rather mysterious movements about the household, I contrived after much circumlocution to obtain a sight of the beautiful Clara.

Having manufactured some semblance of an errand one evening after dusk, I called upon Mrs. Jinks. Opening the entrance door, I stood at one end of a long passage—dark enough in itself, but terminating in a handsomely furnished room which was one blaze of light. Before Jinks appeared I had time, barely time to take in the entrancing scene.

In the middle of the apartments I have just mentioned, stood a crimson ottoman, and reclining gracefully upon it, the sylph-like form of Miss Lee. You will expect me to tell you the color of her hair—the particular style of her feature, and so forth. I shall not do it, for the very sufficient reason that I cannot. Description is perfectly out of the question. Suffice it to say that from that moment Clara's image was photographed upon my heart.

What I said to old Jinks I do not know, and I am equally oblivious of my walk home, but midnight found me, according to immemorable customs among lovers, with a wasted taper, a fevered brain, and a copy of verses entitled, of course, "Beautiful Clara Lee."

I sit in the morn by streams of gold,
Glassing the lilies a thousand fold;
Sweetest of odors floating along,
Bear on their bosoms the sound of song.
But rivers and song
Are lost upon me,
I only behold
My own Clara Lee.

I drink in the breath of rosy noon,
With twilight zephyrs I hold commune,
But amber light and the starry skies
Only remind me of loving eyes.
All thoughts beautiful
Appear unto me,
Dream-rays of glory
From sweet Clara Lee.

Somewhat relieved by this effusion, I retired to rest, and awoke the next morning as a confirmed devotee. The vision of the previous evening was unimpaired, indeed it was heightened by sundry additions brought with me from dreamland.

I called for breakfast in my own room to avoid Miss Jemima, and that I might dwell for an hour or two in peace upon the new pleasures that had entered into my life.

Vain desire; I had scarcely finished my coffee when I heard at the door the gentle tap, tap of Mary—Mary was Jemima's factotum.

"If you please, sir," said she, "Miss Jemima wishes to know if she may murder you, for she has begun her third volume. And please, sir, who would you wish should do the deed, because Captain Hawksheart has not yet returned?"

Yielding to my destiny I suggested that I should only be too happy to kill myself to oblige her mistress. Mary took exception to this, however, on the ground that it would be suicide, and Miss Jemima must have seven bona fide murders.

When terms were finally entered upon by the high contracting parties, it is, at this distance of time, impossible for me to say; but doubtless I was duly murdered, and it is a matter equally certain that when Miss Jemima publishes her work, your humble servant, following the example of greater men, will awaken some morning and find himself famous. I am now nearing that portion of my narrative, which is more likely to interest my readers, if it does not completely puzzle them by its perfectly incomprehensible nature.

Wherever I went at this time, my heart instinctively turned toward its polar star, Wilton Grange. Wandering about the lanes of an evening was my constant employment, and I began to wish I had never seen Sandford, or that something would transpire to bring me nearer my heart's idol.

Returning from my accustomed strolling, I was about to step into my room, when I observed a figure seated at my little writing table, where, absent in mind as usual, I had left my lamp burning. It was the figure of a lady, a stranger to me, and I hastily retired. I walked out on the porch in search of Mrs. Wiggens, and asked her who was in my room.

"No one," she replied, with some little surprise. "You are dreaming, Mr. Gregory."

I retraced my steps at once, and placed myself right in the door-way. The stranger rose from her seat, and turned her eyes full upon mine.

The glance was so melancholy as to seem unearthly. A weight of woe seemed to be resting on the pure marble of that forehead while the dark and pleading, yet lovely eyes shone out upon me, I could feel, from the realms of immortality.

I was certainly not timid, but I could feel a cold chill creeping through my entire system. With a perfectly [illegible] motion the figure moved toward the door where I stood, and I instinctively made way for it to pass. It passed close to where I stood, without once removing its eyes from mine, only that I could notice that the look grew more intensely beseeching and earnest as it passed out, and a shadowy arm was pointed for one instant to the table at which it had been seated—and I was alone.

It would be impossible for me to describe my feelings at the moment, but one may guess my utter astonishment when I reached the table and found traced in a very delicate ladylike hand, right across a sheet of my foolscap, the words, "C—— Express, Wilton Grange, Clara Lee."

If, up to this time, I had inclined to doubt my senses, here was certain proof that some power had been present; what could it mean? I turned the paper over two or three times, folded it up neatly, and while doing so resolved to walk over at once to the Grange.

I was met on the porch by Mrs. Wiggens, breathless with the agitating information she had just received. Mrs. Lee, at the Grange, had died that afternoon. This strengthened my purpose rather than otherwise, and in five minutes I had knocked at the door. It was opened by a young woman, and I enquired for Miss Lee. "Miss Lee, sir; her mother has died this afternoon, and I am afraid the young lady cannot be seen."

Impelled by I know not what, I replied, "Please to hand my card to Miss Lee, and say I wish to see her upon urgent business." After some little delay the girl returned, and I was admitted. I could see at a glance, traces of tears, and the gloom of poignant sorrow rested upon Clara's beautiful countenance. She was seated before a table, upon which was piled a heap of papers, but rose at my entrance.

"Sir," said she, motioning me to be seated, "you say your business is urgent, but you see I am in the midst of a deep calamity, and will be as brief as possible?"

This was sharp and to the point certainly, but the tone was kindness itself, and I felt loth to break upon the echoes of that melody with what I had to say.

At last, however, I recovered myself and related to her substantially, what had occurred during the preceding half hour. I then handed her the paper. She started with surprise, examined it first closely, then at arm's length, and finally pressed it to her lips, while tears in torrents coursed down her cheeks.

"Sir," cried she, "are you sure that you told me just how you obtained this paper? It is a most astonishing thing. My beloved mother died at four o'clock this afternoon, yet this is most surely her writing. And you say it was written within the hour, is it so?"

"I have told you everything," I returned, a little touched by her doubtful tone. She paused a few moments, and resumed.

"Well, Mr. Gregory, you are a lawyer, I notice. I am compelled to accept this most wonderful document as a credential that you mean well by me, and I will not conceal from you that your visit has happened at a most critical moment, and your advice may be valuable."

I bowed and she went on.

"My uncle, Mr. Jinks, has been very kind to my dear departed mother and myself, and he desires now to take me under his protection, making me a yearly allowance of a little money upon the condition that, for past and future expenditures, I make over to him what money may filter through these two year's litigation that has succeeded the death of my father, and as you will see, sir, by this copy of his proposal," handing me a paper, "any other moneys to which I may become entitled." I looked over the paper. It had been drawn up with great care, and was certainly not the work of a novice.

Noticing that I had finished the perusal, she eagerly asked, "What ought I to do?"

"Nothing," I replied, "at least in the meantime you must let me take the paper home. I crave a night to think over it, and I will see you in the morning."

Through the entire interview a feeling had occupied my mind that I was there for a purpose; I could not tell precisely what, and rising to depart, I said:

"By the way, do you get the C—— Express?"

"Yes, sir;" said she, "it is here," and she handed me a copy of the print.

"Oh!" she continued, "I had forgotten that it is mentioned on this dear paper of my mother's, I wonder for what reason?"

"Here," said I, has been the reason," for I had now begun to suspect foul play, and running my eye down the columns, I pointed out to her where a small piece had been cut out, leaving a space about an inch deep.

"Ah!" exclaimed Miss Lee, "there is some meaning in all this; will you, sir, try and discover it? I shall not ask you to work for nothing."

"Miss Lee," said I, "in serving you money would be the least consideration—it is to me already a pleasure, while at the same time I desire that you will not for a moment think that I will presume upon the singular circumstance that has brought us together. By mid-day to-morrow I shall be here and advise you in this matter."

She extended her hand, I believe I scarcely touched it, but I could feel the electric current sweep through my blood, and the unspeakably soft and musical "good-night" follow me into dreamland.

The next morning I obtained a copy of the C—— Express; my suspicions were verified; there was the missing paragraph, which read to this effect:

"The ship "Sea Gull" has just arrived from Bombay, pleasantly dissipating all fears entertained of her safety, and bringing interesting intelligence for at least one family. The late Silas Lee, of Bombay, has, it seems, bequeathed the whole of his immense wealth, (nearly half a million sterling) to his next of kin, presumed to be the widow and daughter of Col. Lee."

I hastily put the paper in my pocket and waited upon Clara—how I love to speak or write that name!

I laid the whole matter before her, engaged to advertise her residence, etc., in the Times, and took my leave laden with thanks. In a few days she had a letter from a solicitor in London, with a request to remove to the metropolis for a week or two at least, and one afternoon I was summoned to the Grange to say farewell.

It would be useless for me to go over that painful ceremony; let me say in a sentence I forgot myself and the secret of my love oozed out. But I found that Clara had known it before.

When the parting came I long retained that beautiful hand in mine, and she did not seek to withdraw it. Respectfully I bent down and pressed upon it one—just one warm kiss of love. Still it was not withdrawn. I could see that in those eyes—always a truthful index of the heart—there was something more than a mere business friendship, just the faintest ray of hope began to dawn.

"Mr. Gregory," she said at length, in her rich, full tones, "it would be idle to pretend that I have not seen this before, but the truth is your own reserve had prevented me from noticing it; an honest, loving heart like yours deserves candor in return. And I must with true regret inform you that I shall never love again.

"Beneath the [illegible] soil of the East lies one to whom in other days my heart was given, and if there be anything in my altered fortunes to give me pleasure, besides the power I now have of doing good, it is that I may return to India where I was born, and there at last peacefully close my eyes within sight of the grave that holds my heart."

Words cannot express the chill that fell upon my soul at this utterance, and my succeeding despair. The next few weeks of my existence may as well be written blank and it was no relief when I received a letter from the London solicitor intimating the departure of Clara for India. My cup of sorrow was now full; there was now no more to fear.

The remaining portion of the letter I read mechanically, and it was not until an hour had elapsed that I fully understood what at another time would have thrown me into ecstasies. In the queenly magnificence of her generous heart she had left me ten thousand pounds for the, in part, payment of my services.

Ten thousand pounds! How rich! and yet how poor.

Shortly after these events I prepared to leave Sandford. I had but few regrets in doing so; the sensation was gone.

Mr. Jinks never forgave me for that part I had taken in the matter; and it did not much signify.

For the supernatural part of this narrative I offer no explanation to my readers, I have none to offer; they will simply please themselves as to what they think of it.

Of Clara Lee I have never heard since her departure, but although the silver streaks of age are gathering on my head, I have never entirely forgotten my first love.

HINTS TO THOSE CALLING UPON THE SICK.

1. Offer your help in the name of the Church, saying, "Can our church do anything for you?" and be ready to watch yourself, or furnish some one, if watchers are needed.

2. Only call at the door, unless you are sure your friend is able to see you without harm.

3. Enter and leave the house, and move about the room quietly.

4. Carry a cheerful face, and speak cheerful words.

5. In order to cheer, you need tell no untruths.

6. If your friend is very sick, do not fall into gay and careless talk in the attempt to be cheerful.

7. Don't ask questions, and thus oblige your friend to talk.

8. Talk about something outside, and not about the disease and circumstances of the patient.

9. Tell the news, but not the list of the sick and dying.

10. If possible, carry something with you to please the eye and relieve the monotony of the sick-room; a flower, or even a picture which you can loan for a few days.

11. If desirable, some little delicacy to tempt the appetite will be well bestowed.

12. The perfume of some flowers is poisonous, and they should never be carried into the sick-room. Especially is this true of the tube-rose, oleander, heliotrope, hyacinth, orange, lilac, syringa and lilies.

13. Stay only a moment, or a few minutes at the longest, unless you can be of some help.

A MONSTER LOCOMOTIVE.

The largest locomotive ever constructed in this country was brought here last Friday by the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad. This monster is on its way to the West, and will be used on the New Mexico & Southern Pacific Branch of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, and is especially intended to work on a long heavy grade at a point on the Rocky Mountains.—It is a ten-wheel tank engine of consolidated pattern, having eight driving-wheels, and a pony (two-wheel) truck. The cylinders measure 20 by 26 inches, and the driving wheels are but 42 inches diameter. The boiler is enormous, being straight, 58 inches diameter. It has 213 tubes, each over 11 feet long. A water tank, almost the entire length of the boiler, rests on top of the engine and when filled with water will add considerably to the weight. The fire-box is ten feet long. The truck-wheels are thirty inches in diameter, and are of paper, with steel tires, similar to those now being used so extensively under the Pullman sleeping-cars and on the Metropolitan Elevated Railroad, New York. The engine, when in working order, will weigh 118,000 pounds. The great weight and size of the boiler and the small driving-wheels combined form a tremendous power, well suited to the work the engine has to perform. The eight driving-wheels are merely to distribute the weight, for if it rested on but four, no track ever laid could stand the pressure. The weight is so great that the Western railroads over which it must pass will not permit it to go over bridges so it will have to be taken to pieces and carried over in sections. It passed over all the bridges of the Pennsylvania Railroad without being dismantled.—Chicago Tribune, Jan 6th, '79.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

To know how to wait is the great secret of success.

The greatest misfortune of all is not to be able to bear misfortune.

Unhappy is the man for whom his own mother has not made all mothers venerable.

Men show their character in nothing more clearly than by what they think laughable.

What we have to do in this world is not to make our conditions, but to make the best of them.

A good word is any easy obligation; but not to speak ill, requires only our silence, which costs us nothing.

If you want to impress in conversation, introduce your own topics; if you want to please, let your companion.

He that telleth thee that thou art always wrong, may be deceived; but he that saith thou art always right is surely a liar.

Always meet petulance with gentleness, and perverseness with kindness. A gentle hand can lead an elephant by a hair.

It is wonderful what strength and boldness of purpose and energy of will come from the feeling that we are in the way of duty.

Enjoy the blessings of this day if God sends them; and the evils bear patiently. For this day only is ours; we are dead to yesterday, and we are not born to to-morrow.

Imitation sealskin is much used in bands for dress trimming; it is called moleskin.

Winter gloves are lined; those most in use are castor and silk, with deep cuffs edged with fur.

There is a new style of wristlet; it is a wide bracelet of jet edged on each side with dark fur, to be worn above the gloves on the arm.

A chapter might be written upon the wonderful beauty of the ribbons this season which come for bonnet and dress trimmings. They combine the most exquisite colors with twisted gold and silver threads. These ribbons are sparingly used on velvet bonnets, mixed with dark ribbons to form bows, and thus obviate the necessity of flowers to give coloring; or narrow ribbons of this kind edge the strings of dressy white evening bonnets. Sometimes the velvet ribbons of sombre shades have these bright ribbons woven in them as a stripe through the centre.

Cobb, who was convicted of murder in the second degree, at Norwich, Ct., Thursday, was sentenced last week, by Justice Culver, Chief Justice Park having been called to New Haven by the death of his brother. The remarks of the Court were brief. They reviewed the proceedings to show that a fair trial had been had; that crime had been on the increase of late in "this land of steady habits," and that justice, though slow, was apt to be sure. The sentence was imprisonment for life at Wethersfield. The prisoner was veiled. She showed no emotion except when Judge Culver alluded to her worse than orphaned child, when she colored up for a moment. Her counsel moved for a new trial, and ten days were allowed to perfect the motion. Bishop's trial for his share in the murder, and for poisoning his own wife, is postponed until the March term.

The accounts of the grounding of the U. S. Frigate "Constitution," off Ballard's Point, England, last Friday, state that she went ashore at one o'clock in the morning and continued firing minute-guns until three o'clock. The first attempt to tow her off was made at one o'clock in the afternoon, but was unsuccessful. Success was finally attained by the combined efforts of six tugs. A rope from one of the tugs was fastened to the main masthead of the "Constitution," so as to give her cant. A quantity of the vessel's cargo had been previously discharged into lighters. As soon as she was floated, she was towed to Portsmouth for examination. It was found that she had suffered no apparent damage. At the time of stranding she was drawing twenty-four feet of water forward and thirty-two feet aft. The guns, anchors, etc., which were taken out to lighten the vessel, were taken to Poole.

The Grand Council of the Royal and Select Masters of the State of New Jersey held their annual meeting in Trenton on Tuesday, at the rooms of the Masonic fraternity in Taylor Opera House. The following officers were elected to serve during the ensuing year:

M. I. G. M., Frank A. Fenton, of Camden; D. G. M., A. J. Wark, of New Brunswick; P. C. of W., Charles Belcher, Jr., of Newark; Grand Recorder, Thomas J. Corson, of Trenton; Grand Treasurer, John Woolverton, M. D., of Trenton; C. of G., John M. Knapp, of Ridgewood, N. J.; G. M., Geo. H. Marsland, of Lafayette; Grand Chaplain, Jerome B. Borden, of New Brunswick; Grand Steward, Leonard L. Greer, of Passaic; Grand Lecturer, Edward Goulier, of Newark; Grand Sentinel, Amos Howell, of Trenton.

The Grand Lodge of Free Masons met on Wednesday of this week in the Assembly Room, where they held their grand annual communication.

MONEY WANTED.

As will be seen by reference to our Council Proceedings, the newly elected Council of our city has taken the bull (license) by the horns with a vengeance. When the Assembly Hall ticket was nominated, it was announced by the managers that the same was "non-partisan" and that the question of license was not a leading question in the election, but it was generally understood that the gentlemen composing the nominees on the ticket would manfully take hold of this vexed subject if they were elected, and either grant or not grant licenses and not afterward ask the people to go to an expense of holding an election to settle the matter. But to the surprise of the tax payer, at their second meeting, they shirk the matter, and ask the people to settle it in a manner not at all compatible with the views of a majority, we are inclined to think. They ask the people to walk to the polls and vote to increase their taxes, which are high enough now, by granting the Council an additional Five Thousand Dollars, to run the city the present year, when that amount is awaiting them at their Council doors, their votes only required to insure a delivery of the funds. We are aware that there is a class of our citizens who do not believe in licensing hotels or saloons to sell spirituous liquors, who of course will uphold this action of Council, but we contend that as long as the traffic in rum is a legitimate one, and upheld by the Government of the United States, which receives a revenue from its manufacture, that no body of men, having the interests of the tax-payer at heart, should refuse a revenue from its sale, and then ask the people to be taxed for an appropriation equal in amount to that which would be received by the granting of license to sell it. The people are burdened with taxation, and it is unjust to ask them to be further taxed unnecessarily. Governor McClellan in his late excellent message refers particularly to the subject of taxation, and invokes the people to look carefully after the affairs of their local government, and we believe that in this case they will do it. We are fully aware that the amount annually allowed the City of Plainfield to carry on its government, ($10,000,) is entirely too small a sum, but we have gone on successfully, year after year, since the city became a corporation, with that amount of appropriation and have no debt to speak of to-day. As is well known the debt contracted by former Councils, who refused to grant licenses, and in consequence had not a sufficient sum to light the streets and give proper police protection, &c., was paid nearly off by a succeeding Council, which accepted the money tendered them for a legitimate business, while the moral of the city was better, as shown by reports from the various branches of the city government. Besides, the proposed election will entail an expense which the exchequer of the city cannot very well stand at present. We believe it would be much wiser on the part of our City Fathers to grant licenses, and by legislative action hereafter invest the power of granting the same to an Excise Board, elected by the people, so that this annual hitch in the affairs of our city government may not occur.

The following golden extracts from Governor McClellan's excellent message, every citizen should cut out and paste in the top of his hat, and peruse them daily:

"I cannot too strongly urge upon the people of this State the necessity of carefully preserving their county and municipal rights, and of faithfully performing every duty corresponding to those rights. Every right and privilege of self government abstracted from those sub-divisions is a blow against republican institutions; and every citizen who neglects to exercise the privileges and perform the duties growing out of those rights, does much to weaken and subvert the institutions on which the stability of our government and the prosperity of the people depend.

"So important is this subject that I must repeat what I said one year ago, and that is, to restore order to the financial affairs of the municipalties and townships, to reduce expenditures, increase receipts, prevent waste and malversation, and preserve the financial good name of localities suffering under a burden too heavy to be borne, it is absolutely necessary that every citizen should take an active and intelligent interest in the concerns of local government. If they will attend the primary elections, do their best to secure the nomination of honest and capable candidates for all offices, work for the election of such nominees, oppose all others, and carefully watch and assist the officers elected, it will soon be found that a long stride has been made in the desired direction.

Nor does this concern only those possessed of a certain amount of property, and paying largely in direct taxes; it is even more the affair of the workingmen, who apparently give but little in the shape of direct taxes, for they pay at least their full share in the increase of rents, the enhanced prices of all they consume, and the scarcity of employment, resulting from high taxation, which drives away business and manufactures.

It is by the active and honest efforts of all classes of our citizens in their local governments that we must look for relief from the principal burdens which oppress our people. In view of the magnitude of the interests at stake in these local matters, party divisions should give way in favor of economy, honesty and intelligence on the one hand, as against extravagance, dishonesty and incompetence on the other.

In connection with the subject of the finances, I would ask your attention to the lack of uniformity in the methods of valuation and assessment practiced in different parts of the State, and to the delay, which, I am informed, often occurs, on the part of township collectors in paying over their quotas to the county collectors.

The New Jersey Editorial Association met in Trenton on Monday last, and elected Colonel Jones, of Woodbridge, President; J. N. Babcock, of New Brunswick, Secretary, and James S. Yard, of Freeholder, Treasurer. A legislative committee of seven was appointed to watch the Legislature so that there should be no reduction made in the price of the public printing. The association represents 170 newspapers.

Caleb Cushing, strangely enough, was buried January 6, 1879, just thirty years after his father's burial, January 6, 1849.

Twenty-four students from Princeton College were arrested in Trenton about midnight Saturday night on a charge of disorderly conduct in the streets. They went to Trenton in two large sleighs and by their noise and hilarious conduct greatly disturbed the peace in driving from street to street. The police finally mustered in force, and surrounding the sleighs captured the disorderly occupants. They were each fined $3.80 and discharged. The scene at this police office was amusing and exciting.

Thirty-two Paterson liquor dealers were recently arrested for selling liquor on Sunday, and were tried under a city ordinance before two justices of the peace, who fined them $50 and costs each. Half the fine went to the informer. The prosecutor was the Rev. Arthur B. Greenwood, and the evidence was procured by two detectives, House and Meeker. The cases were appealed, and argument was heard Saturday. When the proceedings were over Greenwood was arrested on an indictment charging him with conspiring to induce one of these liquor dealers to sell liquor so that the fine might be collected. Judge Barkalow required him to give $500 bail and accepted his counsel as surety, telling him however that he must furnish another bondsman before Wednesday. "I shall not trouble myself to find any bondsman at all!" exclaimed Greenwood, indignantly. The detectives are also indicted it is said.

MESSRS EDITORS:

We recognize in the first prominent act of the Council of 1879 a shrewdness that substantiates the prophecies of the knowing ones. The license question was not an open issue at the late election, nor must it be forgotten that a large percentage of this order-loving community would endorse a No license ticket, and it cannot be that the gentlemen of the present councilmanic board are callous to the sentiment of this class of citizens, and are we mistaken in the character of the late action of the Council when we accuse them of casting the responsibility upon the people, of this moral issue, under the guise of wanting more money to meet imaginary requirements. Are we blind to the spirit which actuates this measure, inviting the applause of a CLASS! We give credit for shrewdness unparalleled in the history of councilmanic honors in this city. Yet we deprecate the feasibility of this act, and see through it, a cowardice that evades an open manly legislation upon this question, and we see no good from it, unless our attention be called to the bearing of the late Council in an economical point of view in their management of this city's affairs.

And from the following figures it seems as if the act bears favorably in contrast with the bright showing of economy of the last council. When they took their office, a judgment of | $1,100
Wood Pavement Co., | 600
Warrants drawn and held, | 1,900
Bills incurred and approved, | 2,000
Mr. Rogers, | 1,100
Note in Bank, | 3,500

Wood Pavement Co.,	600
Warrants drawn and held,	1,900
Bills incurred and approved,	2,000
Mr. Rogers,	1,100
Note in Bank,	3,500

The furniture of their hall held for debt, and other items, were reduced with the present amount of resources from taxation and license, leaving the present Council untrammelled with a cloud of debt. Surely these men can sit in clover and bear the honors of office without care or responsibility, and have their constituency smile upon their manly and respectable bearing, if we will only grant them money they need for the requirements of fancy. But we loudly say, No! We are taxed enough for these times, and demand reasonable action for the collection of taxes in arrears, which now amounts to over $7,000, as reported by the Collector.

We denounce it unfair to call upon us for an election and its necessary expense, while those in arrears enjoy the benefits without paying their portion, and contend if the Council desire to evade the moral responsibility in the matter of licenses in this manner, we shall vote "no money," irrespective of our principles on this question; and upon the basis that a reasonable effort to the collection of unpaid taxes for over in the face of the financial budget of the last year is sufficient to meet all requirements of the current year, with a balance in the treasury; all independent of the amounts derived from license. Therefore are we mistaken in the object of the present order, and cannot the issue of "money" or "no money" be met without removing the moral responsibility of granting licenses from the shoulders of this body of gentlemen. Take warning from a good Governor's Message on taxation and economy, and remember that if the Council are men of easy circumstances, do not forget that we are wading through depression and every shingle helps to unroof our little homes.

Respectfully,
"LE TOUT ENSEMBLE."

MESSRS. EDITORS:

The Finance Committee of the present Council in their report last Monday evening stated that the claim of D.D. Rogers, held by the Washington Fire Insurance Company, was $900, to Jan. 20th, 1879.

The amount due from the city on the D. D. Rogers claim, principal and interest to Jan. 4th, 1879, as reported by the Secretary to the Finance Committee of 1878, was $717.15. How has the claim increased in so short a time! Will the Finance Committee please explain. Also what has become of the $300 received by the City Treasurer on check dated Jan. 4th, 1879. I think that $300 will pay all warrants ordered by the former council and leave a balance in the Treasury.

TO THE EDITORS OF THE CONSTITUTIONALIST:

I take this opportunity of expressing my earnest thanks to the many friends who so kindly done all they possibly could for me while under arrest, on a false charge of obtaining goods under false pretences in the city of New York. On Monday last I was released, the parties not being able to sustain the charge made against me.

To Messrs. Suydam & Jackson I desire especially to publicly thank them for their gratuitously preparing my case for the trial. As regards Mr. Noah W. Pike, all I can say is at the time he secured my release I thought he was an honorable man, but I will leave it to the public to say whether it was or not an honorable act in Mr. Pike to surrender me at a time when I was unable to help myself without giving me any notice whatever.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Broad Street has another street lamp, thanks to the new Society, the Westfield Lyceum.

I. H. French was surprised last Monday night by sleigh loads of his friends from Orange. All had a merry time and left in the morning.

The many patients of Dr. Harrison will no doubt be rejoiced to see him back again safe and sound from his southern visit. The Doctor returned on Monday last.

Our Public Library has once more changed its location for the better. It left the Town Rooms last week and moved into the quarters prepared for it in the Westfield Lyceum.

The inaugural ceremonies of the Westfield Lyceum were postponed on account of the storm last Thursday night to Tuesday night of this week. The hall was filled to overflowing.

A great deal of sickness is prevailing just at this time in our town, and most of the cases seem to be pneumonia. Mr. Wm. Ball is lying very low with the same; Mr. John Darsh's little boy is just recovering from a severe attack through the able efforts of Dr. Kinch.

Now and Then.

Akin to a curiosity-shop was the old-fashioned cupboard, with its pills and bottled nostrums. These nauseous nominal remedies are, to-day, supplanted by remedies purer and almost tasteless. Worthy of illustrative mention is Peter Moller's COD-LIVER OIL. This limpid, pure and palatable preparation has long had the highest praise of physicians and the household.

Cut this out—It May Save your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wondrous cures astonishes every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggists, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. For sale in "Fanwood" [illegible]

Mr. Stearns, the Secretary of the National Temperance Society, against whom charges of improper conduct were recently made, has prepared a statement denying the accusations against him.

Sale of Land for Taxes in Westfield Township.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a warrant issued by the Town Committee of Westfield Township, under their hands and seals, pursuant to the statute in such cases made and provided for the collection of taxes laid on certain lands in said Township for the year 1878, the subscriber, a Constable of said Township, will on Friday, the 20th day of December, 1878, at the hour of 2 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the Township rooms by public auction, sell the lands and premises taxed to the undernamed persons, to make the taxes with interest, costs, fees, charges and expenses thereon, to any person or persons who will take the same for the shortest time, and pay the amount due thereon. A Card.

I avail of this medium to make public reminder that law prohibits immoderate driving through the streets of Plainfield, and to request that a practice fraught with so much danger and annoyance, especially in the thickly settled portions of the city, be discontinued.

Remonstrances have also been entered against the exhibition of fast sleigh driving and racing along Park Avenue on Sunday. It is certainly a reasonable and becoming duty to properly regard the Sabbath and the feelings of those who observe it religiously, and I doubt not such considerations will induce all good citizens to hereafter prevent cause for like complaint.

NATHAN HARPER, Mayor.
Jan. 21st, 1879.

Read the Council proceedings.

GO HEAR Josh Billings at the Congregational Church next Thursday evening.

DEAN'S CLUB HOUSE on Park Avenue, is a favorite resort for sleigh riding parties.

IRA PRUDEN, one of Plainfield's oldest citizens, died of typhoid pneumonia last Monday morning.

Rev. Edward P. Terhune, D. D., will occupy the pulpit of the Congregational church next Sunday morning and evening.

W. H. EGBERT will start on Monday for Colorado where he will remain for a time to regain lost health. We wish him renewed strength and health and a pleasant trip.

MR. ED. ASHTON, the artist who did the painting, marbling and graining of the front of Connealy's saloon on Madison Avenue, did a neat job, and evidenced that he is a professional in his business.

A YOUNG son of Mr. T. A. Sofield was injured by being thrown from a sleigh on which he was "hooking" a ride on Park Ave., Thursday afternoon. This practice of the boys should be stopped.

THE lecture by Robert Voorhees, the Rocky Hill orator, was listened to by a fair and appreciative audience on Monday evening last in the 1st Pres. Church. It was pronounced the finest lecture of the season.

THE Executive Committee of the Plainfield Athletic Club have about completed arrangements for the leasing of a large room in a building on Front Street, which will be fitted up as a gymnasium. The Club is daily growing in membership.

COUNCILMAN Mayer last Monday evening presented each member of the Council a handsome chromo-lithograph calendar representing the Phenix Insurance Company, of Brooklyn. We return thanks to the gentleman for copies of the calendar.

Dr. C. A. Ward, of Newark, who is at present stopping at the City Hotel, this city, is meeting great success, and has concluded to remain for another week. See his advertisement in another column. The Doctor's wonderful cures have kept him busy.

Clark's Opera House at Elizabeth was destroyed by fire on Tuesday last, entailing a loss of about $40,000; insured for some $50,000. The fire originated from a defective flue. The press speak in the highest terms of the efficient working of the fire department.

THE commuters of Plainfield desire and need a fast through train to and from this city and New York. We believe the Central Railroad Company will give it to them if they, the commuters, will agree on a time of departure and arrival of said train. A fast train is certainly needed.

IT is rumored that the Board of Directors of the "Central N. J. Game Protective Society" will call a meeting of the members of the Society at an early date to take into consideration certain legislative matters of interest and benefit to the Society. We shall give notice when the meeting is called.

THE residents of North Plainfield, Somerville, Scotch Plains, Green Brook, and Sterling wishing wells driven will do well to consult our advertising columns. John Rafferty and I. McVoy being, according to Green's Attorney, the only ones legally entitled to do the work of the above places.

FRONT STREET, from Cole's Hill to a point beyond Brittin's Hotel, was put in a condition for the exercise of horse flesh last Tuesday, by the snow being levelled off the entire width of the street through the means of a road scraper, Mr. Brittin bearing the expense and Uncle Jake Cole doing the work.

THE Fourth Symphony Concert, under the direction of Dr. L. Damrosch, occurs at Steinway Hall, New York city, Saturday evening, Feb. 1st, at 8 o'clock. The Soloist on the occasion will be Herr August Wilhelmj. The Fourth Public Rehearsal occurs Thursday afternoon, Jan. 30th, at 2 o'clock.

WHAT a difference in temperature there was on Tuesday and Wednesday. Tuesday was set down as the coldest day of the year, the thermometer marking eight below zero in the morning. Wednesday was like a Spring day, and water from melted snow stood in the gutters, and would have run off into the sewer if the law was obeyed in the matter of opening the same.

ABOUT thirty-five couple attended a "Surprise Sociable" at the residence of Mr. Fowler Vail, on Jefferson Avenue, Green Brook, last Wednesday evening, among whom were many Plainfielders. A number of the members of the "Would Be Glee Club" attended, and all report having a good time. You can always depend on having a good time when "Friday" makes up a party.

JAMES L. DE CAMP, a member of Gazelle Engine Co. No. 1, died on Sunday morning of pneumonia, after a short illness. His funeral, on Tuesday, was largely attended by members of the above named Company, and of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., of which deceased was a member, attending in a body. The remains were interred in the Presbyterian burying ground, North Plainfield, under the auspices of the Lodge above named. Mr. DeCamp leaves a wife and three children. He was universally esteemed by all who knew him for his many good qualities.

THE January Reception of the Y. M. C. A. will be given on Tuesday evening next, 28th inst., at Assembly Hall. A fine Concert is announced for this occasion, the Committee having procured the services of Miss Kinsey, of Newark, Soprano; Mr. Merriam, of Brooklyn, Piano; Mr. Mayland, of Brooklyn, Flute; Mr. Spies, of Brooklyn, English Concertina. Miss Kinsey is a very popular singer in Newark and comes to us highly recommended. The Trio of gentlemen from Brooklyn are all good musicians and have played together in Brooklyn with marked success during the present season. Their selections will consist of Trios, Duetts and Solos. The experiment of charging a small admission fee to cover expenses having proved successful and popular, the plan will be regularly adopted.—The price is fixed at 10 cents. Tickets for sale by the Librarian at the rooms of the Association on and after Saturday, 25th inst., and at Assembly Hall on the evening of the Concert. Members of the Association can procure tickets of the Librarian without charge.

By a recent change in the postal laws a package not exceeding four pounds may be registered for ten cents, the same as a letter, and sent without additional postage. This is cheaper than the express companies can afford to handle these small packages, and just as safe, and will be found very convenient.

Mr. N. O. Bond, Patentee of Bond's running water attachment, and which can be seen at Green & Co.'s furniture warerooms, is also the owner of a beautiful farm, situated in Virginia, containing 200 acres, which he offers for sale or exchange. To those contemplating locating in Virginia, Mr. B. offers very liberal inducements.

MUCH interest is manifested in the special services being held each evening this week in the M. E. Church. Meetings are also held at four o'clock each afternoon. It is expected that the special services will be continued through next week. Instead of preaching next Sunday evening, there will be brief addresses, interspersed with sacred songs and prayers.

The act concerning townships and township officers, passed by the last session of the Legislature, provides that the amount of taxes remaining unpaid, and the names of the delinquents, be published with the regular yearly report of receipts and disbursements of the various townships throughout the State, at least twenty days before the annual town meeting. Town Clerks should take notice of the new provisions.

A miraculous escape is recorded in the case of a man (name unknown) who was struck by the locomotive of a passenger train on the Long Branch Division of the Central R. R., last Wednesday, near Long Branch, while going at the rate of 30 miles an hour. Strange to relate the man was not instantly killed; in fact to appearances but slightly injured, being thrown on the pilot of the engine, where he was found in an unconscious condition by the engineer, and taken to Elizabeth, where he received proper medical treatment.

Especial attention is called to Bond's Patent Running Water attachment for wash stands, whereby bowls, pitchers and slop jars are dispensed with. When we state that in our opinion it is one of the finest affairs for those not fortunate enough to be the possessor of hydrant or running water, we but feebly express our appreciation of it as an invaluable affair. Mr. Bond, the inventor, can be daily consulted at the Furniture Warerooms of Green & Co., and will freely show and explain his invention. All who see it either order one or promise to do so at an early day.

An Edict from the Mayor.

Last Sunday a large concourse of people assembled on Park Avenue, below Eighth Street, to witness trials of speed between horses driven by their owners and others, who happened to meet on the road that day. Of course, much noise prevailed, and complaints were made to His Honor, Mayor Harper, who at once issued an order to Chief Dodd to arrest any person violating the city ordinances in the matter, and, as will be seen by a card at the head of our local page, restricts racing on Park Ave. to beyond 8th St. The Mayor is right in his endeavor to stop racing on our public streets on Sundays, and all lovers of the sport should stop the practice on that day.

A Worthy Object.

Through the efforts of Postmaster Vail, the renowned Josh Billings will read some of his inimitable sayings before a Plainfield audience next Thursday evening, Jan. 30. The proceeds of the entertainment will be devoted toward relieving the wants of the family of James L. DeCamp, the deceased fireman, who died suddenly of pneumonia last Sunday. He leaves a wife and three small children in destitute circumstances. We know that the firemen will respond to an appeal like this and aid in relieving the wants of the family of their deceased comrade, and we think a generous public will do the same. The price of admission will be 50 cents, with reserved seats at 75 cents. Josh will hold forth in the Congregational Church, and tickets will be for sale at the Post Office and the various drug stores.

The United States Court.

The United States District Court met at Trenton on Tuesday last. The following named gentlemen have been summoned as Grand Jurors for the January term:

Cornelius Walsh, Newark; Timothy Abbott, Trenton; Richard S. Leaming, Cape May Court House; Samuel Taylor, Mount Holly; J. Hart Brewer, Trenton; George R. Robbins, Hamilton Square; Alexander Shafer, Newton; J. B. Stoutenburgh, Passaic; Samuel P. Adams, Port Republic; Charles Smith, Kearney, E. Newark; Henry M. Ward, Newton; Joseph Tatem, Camden; Benj. W. Vandevoor, Shrewsbury; John S. Laird, Englishtown; William Knight, Woodbury; Israel C. Voorhees, Woodbury; Ira Johnson, Yardville; Morris C. Barick, Chester; Henry W. Miller, Morristown; James L. Hayes, Newark; Jas. M. Hendrickson, Lawrence; Isaac T. Nichols, Bridgeton; George Coombs, Pittsgrove; William I. Shreve, Orange.

A Narrow Escape.

As the afternoon freight train, bound West, was passing at full speed under the Terrel Road bridge, last Saturday, about 2 o'clock, Daniel Warren, the brakeman stationed in the centre of the train, who was walking upon the roofs of the cars, was accidentally struck full in the forehead by the bridge. He did not roll off the cars, however, although severely stunned. Fortunately he was seen by the Engineer and the train was stopped at this station, where the unfortunate man was removed to the baggage room in an insensible condition. The Central Railroad Local Surgeon, Dr. Stillman, Sr., was immediately summoned and found the wounds were chiefly contusions and gashes, one eye being entirely closed. His wounds were dressed, restoratives applied and after the lapse of three hours he was sensible and in a fit condition to be removed to his home in Phillipsburg on the 5:04 o'clock train. Reports from there Thursday state that he is doing well. On the whole it was a most miraculous escape from death.

The Hand Case.

It will be remembered by many of our readers that in August last, one of our citizens, a young man and industrious laborer, Charles Hand, who always has borne a good reputation, was arrested on the street in New York, whither he had gone on business, on the charge of a man named Monaham, who alleged that Hand had purchased a horse and wagon of him under false pretenses.—Hand was thrown in jail and languished there several weeks. Finally Mr. N. W. Pike, of this city, interested himself in Hand's behalf, and procured bail for him in the sum of $500, Mr. P. becoming responsible for that amount. Hon. Algernon Sullivan, a well-known lawyer of New York, took the case in hand, and has generously devoted time and thought to the matter, with but slight pecuniary reward. The case, delayed from time to time, was finally set down to be tried in the Court of General Sessions last Friday, the 17th, at which time a large number of respectable and influential citizens of Plainfield voluntarily attended Court for the purpose of testifying to Hand's good character. The trial, however, did not come off, although Mr. Pike, his bondsman, surrendered his bond bail, and Hand was again remanded to prison. On Saturday the District Attorney severely cross questioned Monaham, and became satisfied that the case was one of mistaken identity and ordered Hand to be released.—There is something back of the whole matter yet which should and will come out in time. Monaham would probably have succeeded in sending Hand to State Prison for a crime never committed, if the latter had not had friends of influence to interest themselves in his behalf.

The Sleighing Carnival.

The fine sleighing since the late heavy snow, has afforded great pleasure to the lovers of sleigh riding, and our streets are thronged with handsome and fast-going equipages from early morn to late into the night. Park Avenue, from Seventh street to the city line, a distance of about 1½ miles, affords excellent facilities for testing the speed of fast trotters and the enjoyment of a delightful sleigh ride by family parties, on account of its macadamized road bed, which makes level sleighing. Here it is that owners of fast horses resort in the afternoon to test the relative merits of their animals. A reporter of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST has been among them the past few hours taking a few notes. Among the merry throng he observed

Wm. Moore's famous trotter "Lady Rebil," the reins manipulated by Lew Dunham. But few has the effrontery to tackle her.

Ellis Campbell, with his latest wonder, "Knox Chief," a fine black stallion, made the snowballs fly in the faces of more than one competitor.

Pete Osborn, with his grey mare "Nellie," was ready for a brush with any one, and seldom came at the end of the dash behind.

Johnny Osborn aired "Fanny Varrick," who shows a clean pair of heels to those who try her.

John Chandler's chestnut "Charley," gave proof to many a contestant that there is speed there.

J. G. Cadmus exercised his well known "None Such," and made it hot for a good many who attempted a brush with him.

Isaac Pangborn drove his black pacer "Charley," who does not allow the snow to accumulate under his feet.

A. Vanderbeck's lazy looking white horse "T. Eclipse," caused many a one to open their eyes when "Vandy" tightened the reins over his horse's back.

Nick Nolan's grey horse "Charley," surprised the spectators by his bursts of speed.

J. W. King snow balled his contestants with his handsome and premium brown stallion "Guy Miller."

E. P. Thorn was out with his beautiful mare "Pet," who is a hard one to beat by some of the best so-called trotters. "Pet" is good for an all-day drive, too. He was accompanied by his wife.

David Leeson and lady friend, sailed along at a rattling pace behind one of his team of fine greys.

Frank Day, accompanied by a lady friend, drove a handsome grey.

W. W. Coriell and wife were seated behind his fine stepping mare "Bessie," and gave the "go-by" to many.

F. A. Brookway warmed up his brown mare "Lady Gold Dust," and was not always the last in a brush.

Dr. A. J. Fithian, from Scotch Plains, drove a handsome grey of fine promise. He calls him "Barney."

Dan Berry handled the reins over his new purchase, a handsome clipped black horse, called "Ned." He was frequently taken for the editor of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, but as that mortal is not the lucky owner of a trotter, the illusion was soon dispelled. He has, however, promised us a ride behind "Ned," for the honor bestowed.

M. H. Acken, of New Brooklyn, was ready for a brush with any one with his handsome chestnut gelding "Stonewall," and "Het" managed to come in ahead in many cases.

E. A. Greig drove his fine brown horse "Charley," who we known is a "stayer," from experience.

Wm. Woodgood, Jr., of Cranford, seated beside a lady friend in a handsome cutter, dexterously threaded his way among the throng, behind his trotter "Fritz." There were not many to brush with him a second time.

Ex-Councilman E. C. Mulford drove his fine stepper, a clipped black horse, "Real Estate."

John Scalle, of Piscataway, was willing at all times to test the speed of his handsome horse "Cap. Westbrook," against any competitor. He has a fine stepper.

D. G. Hetfield, of Rahway, thoughtfully pursued his way among the throng, behind his grey horse "Sammy Tilden." "Dan" had one eye open for any one who came up behind him, however.

Gid Smalley, with his "Billy Button," made all competitors show a clean pair of heels, and was seldom the last one to reach the end of the course. "Gid" has other wonders which he occasionally exercises.

Jake Evans, of Perth Amboy, drove his grey horse "Tom Scott." A good stepper.

Alf. Vail deceived many with his demure looking grey mare "Nellie." When once a "starting-bar" was put in use, however, that mare would everlastingly go.

Joe Obl's mare "Daisy," gave many all that they wanted to do in a brush. She is a good animal.

W. Heidloff skimmed over the snow behind a fine stepper, a brown mare, "Mellick" by name.

Gen. Long, of North Plainfield, handled the ribbons over a good stepper, a brown horse.

Mrs. Ridgeway and sister, rode behind the former's bay mare "Lady of the Lake." The reins were dexterously handled by Mrs. R.

Fred. MacDonald was out with his sorrel. A fine animal and stepper, "Fleetwood."

Ed. Willis exercised his promising young horse "Belle of Netherwood."

Chris. Kelley drove his well-known stallion.

L. M. French exercised a fine stepper, seated in one of his elegant cutters, a few more of which he has for sale.

Solomon F. Dunn glided along majestically behind his "Big Bonanza," a sorrel of great promise.

David Tilton leaned back complacently in his comfortable sleigh-seat, while "Billy" drew the reins over the back of his steady mare.

Mr. J. Shepherd, of Bound Brook, drove his very promising young bay mare, "Lavenia." She is a fine stepper.

M. J. W. Irving, of Westfield, rode behind a very fine black horse, that showed a clean pair of heels.

Mr. Smith, of Netherwood, drove a clipped sorrel that gave evidence of speed.

Wm. Van Nesle, of New Brooklyn, did not allow every one to pass him with his sorrel horse.

Alf. Bedlow, Jr., drove his bay mare, "Dolly."

Capt. B. F. Depew and lady rode behind his all-day bay, "Pet," complacently viewing the trotters.

N. W. Pike rode behind his fine stepper, a clipped bay mare. She is a fair stepper.

Johnnie Tier, with lady friend, driving his pacer.

Postmistress Vail drove her beautiful and green stepper "Lady."

Mrs. J. Frank Hubbard and daughter.

Mr. Wm. Sanford and family.

Mr. Charles Sanford and family.

Billy Hand was out on Wednesday with a four horse load of children, scholars of the 2d class in the grammar department of the 4th St. Public School, Miss Edwards, teacher.

Mr. Aaron Jimerson's big sleigh followed, loaded with the scholars of the 4th Street Grammar Class, Miss Shreeves, teacher.

About 150 of the scholars of the Congregational Sunday School of Bound Brook, visited Plainfield in sleighs on Tuesday, and had a fine time over lemonade and cake at Chamberlain & DeCamp's Hotel.

Among the sleigh riders on Tuesday was a large crowd of little children who were the guests of Mamie, daughter of Fire Commissioner Jacob Adams, whose wife furnished the conveyance. Mr. Levi Bird drove the team.

Ex-Councilman Marshall was out with his mammoth family sleigh, giving the children a grand ride.

"Uncle Dan" Roberts, the livery man, [illegible] on Cherry Street, [illegible]

"Lady Rebil" is quartered at [illegible]

The [illegible] merchant, John W. Long, had many of his fine turn-outs on the road.

Among the many double teams out, (and Plainfield can boast of as many fine equipages as any city of her size in the State,) we were enabled [illegible] to secure the names of the following:

Mr. William [illegible] team of handsome greys. Good travelers and showy.

Nate Robbins's (Metuchen,) handsome clipped browns, "Nate and Mate," who are fast goers, and threw the snow in more than one contestant's sleigh. Mr. R. also drove a four-in-hand on Tuesday, with "Nate and Mate" on the lead, and "Allie and Molly" at the pole, giving several of the dignitaries of the city of Metuchen a ride through our streets.

Dr. Field, of Bound Brook, drove a fine and stylish team, a grey and black.

D. W. Weter drove his handsome family team of bays—"Charley" and "Frank."

E. S. Little, seated in his handsome new white cutter, behind his trotters, "Duke" and "Bell," pulled the reins over, probably the finest turn-out on the road. No double team would tackle him more than once.

J. H. Edwards, Esq., of Westfield, kindly invited THE CONSTITUTIONALIST reporter to sit beside him in his sleigh, behind his trotters "Jim" and "Sos." Before venturing out, our reporter inspected the build and strength of the sleigh, looked carefully at the harness, induced "Uncle Joe" to get weighed, found that he only tipped the scales at 350 pounds, and ventured forth. He arrived home all safe.

Ali Holden conveyed sight-seers over the course with his fine turn out, a sorrel and a bay.

Fish Warden Obl and family drove behind his all-day team of white horses, "Selim" and "Charley."

Lloyd B. Nelson, of New Market, was out with his pair of Spartan colts, who make a fine appearance and are fine travelers.

On Wednesday the scene on the Avenue was a lively one, it having been intimated that there was to be some fast horses there that day, and the large crowd who lined the sides of the street were not disappointed. Ellis Campbell drove his "Knox Chief," Johnny Osborne handled J. W. Johnson's "Fanny Varrick," Ed. Dunham, "Carrie White," and Lew. Dunham drove Wm. Moore's "Lady Rebil." These horses are all noted as trotters, and there was some splendid exhibitions of speed between them. The race track adjoining Dean's Club House has been put in fine condition for snow trotting, and it is expected that there will be some lively brushes between owners of members' horses there soon.

Of course there are many more owners and drivers of fast horses and family teams, who deserve mention, but it has been impossible to secure their names for this issue. But two accidents have occurred coming within our knowledge, in which the occupants of sleighs have been thrown out in consequence of collision, suffering no injury, however, or material damage to horse or sleigh.

The New Speaker.

Hon. Schuyler B. Jackson, who has just been chosen Speaker of the New Jersey Assembly, is an attorney and counsellor at law, and one of the Supreme Court Commissioners of New Jersey. He was born in Newark, June 16, 1849, and was educated at the Newark Academy and at Phillip's Academy, Andover, Mass. He graduated from Yale College, and took a course at a Berlin university, Prussia, and Columbia College Law School, New York. In 1872 and 1873, he made an extended tour of Europe. He was Professor of Commercial Law at the Newark Business College; is a member of the Newark Board of Trade and of the Yale Alumni Association. He was a member of the One Hundred and Second Legislature, from the Seventh District of Essex county, having been elected by a majority of 1,201 votes. In his bearing he is courteous, and, if he will keep his party politics well bridled and stick well to the declarations made in his speech in the House yesterday, there is every reason to expect that Essex county will be proud of her most fortunate representative in the One Hundred and Third Legislature.—Newark Journal.

The Dickens' Reception.

Mr. Dickens did not receive in person, but his representatives made out to do the honors of the occasion with sufficient eclat. Tuesday evening last, the Ladies' Society, connected with the Congregational Church, (and called "Workers in the Vineyard"), gave their first public attempt in the line for which they are especially organized.—Flagg's Building was the place selected for the entertainment and this selection proved to be an unwise one, for had a larger place been engaged all of the great number of people, who had to go away without gaining admittance, might have been accommodated. But the ladies were not to blame for that, for none of the most sanguine had even dared to hope for such a "crush." The entertainment was enjoyable to all and the harmonious blending of instruction and amusement reflects decided credit on the proposers of the scheme. It was altogether a unique thing and made a decided "hit"—The great variety of Dickens' characters were clearly and properly personated and the entire lack of mere repetitions was noticeable. Each person to whom a character was assigned was capable of supporting it in the best and highest degree of the "art." During the evening the refreshment tables were well patronized and the danger of an over-taxed brain was thereby averted by something "for the stomach's sake." Among the very prominent visitors might be mentioned: Mr. Pickwick, with spy glass, spectacles and blue coat; Mr. Samivel Weller, the genuine "Sam;" Mrs. Wardle and Little Boy; Mr. Winkle, Mr. Snodgrass and Mr. Tupman; Mr. L. H. Fat Boy: these were veritable Pickwickians. Sairey Gamp and Betsey Prigs flourished about with style and the Micawber family were present in force. Mr. Dick, Grandfather and Little Nell; Mr. Willifer, Mrs. Willifer; Traddles, Bill Sykes; Nicholas, Nickleby and Fagin, the Jew; each took advantage of the opportunity to show off their little peculiarities.—The Toodles family and Mrs. Fox realized that they were on exhibition and behaved accordingly. David Copperfield was present at the same time representing two ages, the one when about ten years of age, the other when about twenty. The above is a rather difficult proceeding and needs practice, we surmise, to perform with any satisfaction. It is to be regretted that the entertainment is not to be repeated, but these ladies do not believe in cloging the appetites of Plainfield with too much fare of the same kind. They are to be congratulated on their success, both financially and in the amusement furnished.

A Want to be Supplied.

We are happy to state that an experienced directory corps has commenced the canvass for a most important work namely a complete Directory of Plainfield, which will give the name, occupation, and address of every citizen, together with names of all the farmers, country merchants and business men throughout the entire county of Union. The value and importance of such a work will at once be apparent to our business community, who will appreciate it by a liberal patronage. The want of such a book has long been felt, and we bespeak for its publisher a hearty welcome. It will necessarily have a very large sale not only in Plainfield but in the surrounding villages, and among the farmers, as also among those villages along the railroad to Somerville to which the work extends.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the City National Bank, held last week, Mr. [illegible] was elected President of the institution.

W. LITHGOW,
E. L. FINCH,
Finance Com.

Plainfield, Jan. 20, 1879.

Ordered received and placed on file.

Mr. Lithgow, from committee on fire, water, and lamps, presented the following report:

To the President and Members of the Common Council:

The Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps beg leave to present the following:

There are 109 Gas and 32 Oil lights located on the various streets of this city, and in good order; but for the protection of this property it will be necessary that the Council at an early date order same to be painted; and to this end your Committee do now offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps is directed to advertise for proposals for painting the lamp-posts and lanterns, property of the city of Plainfield.

Of the $7048 12 collection of Taxes for 1878, $4733 92 was expended for lights. If our immediate predecessors had not procured large revenue from back taxes, &c., they would not have been able to have provided the city with light, as during the past twelve months.

The amount required by your Committee for the current year will be about $4500; but we are not prepared at this time to offer any suggestions or ask for an appropriation.

The Council is aware that the suspension of the street lights, even for a short time, would be disapproved by the majority of our fellow-citizens; your Committee therefore suggest the most rigid economy in all departments of the city government with the view of meeting the wishes of the people in this matter.

Respectfully submitted.
W. LITHGOW,
WALTER E. STEWART,
JOHN SIMPSON.

On motion, report received and placed on file, and the res. adopted.

Mr. Rushmore, from License Com., reported that the petitions of E. P. Thorn and James H. Force were not complete, owing to some of the signers not being property owners, but had been rectified this evening, and Com. would like further time to examine them, &c., and would report the petition of Fred. Caspar as conforming to the Ord., but have no recommendation to make.

Mr. Stover moved as the petition of Mr. Caspar conforms to the ord. in every particular, his license be granted.

Mr. Lithgow asked if this license matter could not come up under the head of Miscellaneous Business, as he had something to offer under that head pertaining to the license question.

Mr. Stover said he had no objections of having it laid over as had been requested.

Mr. Coriell, from Com. on Police, reported the Station House in good condition, and the police force, he thought, active, &c., On motion, report received and placed on file.

Mr. Finch, from Com. on Sts. and Pub. Health, presented the following:

The Committee beg leave to report that some of the Streets have been and are still in bad condition. Front St. will doubtless need some attention; complaints regarding other points have been sent in, and our attention has been particularly called to a nuisance of long standing, in the shape of dumping ground on Arlington Ave., below 5th St. It has been repeatedly said the matter of License is the most important question with which we have to deal, and to many it may seem that such is the case. But we believe all sound, practical thinking men will regard the matter of good public health as quite as important, and a far more serious question than the license question. We find many and various nuisances existing; gravel pits, ponds of stagnant water, overflowing sinks, &c. Two places in particular have been brought to our notice which should have prompt attention and be remedied at once. One matter that we think has been apparent to every person who has given the subject the least serious attention, is that our present system of cesspool drainage [illegible] is fraught with danger, and if persisted in the time is not far distant when serious results will follow. Already we learn of many cases of sickness that can be traced directly to this cause. Many theories that are advanced as to the best mode of disposing of refuse and impure matter are not correct. And there are many cases, reported to us where persons' wells have been contaminated by their own or their neighbor's cesspools; in fact, the danger from this source to the citizens of the city of Plainfield is so great and apparent, [illegible] if persisted in for any length of time that we deem it of the greatest and most vital importance and would respectfully ask that this Honorable Body take it into candid consideration, [illegible] all cesspools that now exist, and we would advise [illegible] that any person [illegible] of any wells that are contaminated, [illegible] sinks or cesspools not water tight that have been built since the passage of the Ord. dated Nov. 14, '78, would send such information to the Chairman of any member of the Committee on Streets and Public Health, that the same might be investigated and the trouble remedied, if possible, and prevent our city from having the bad name that many of the smaller cities have at the present time. We would urge upon all our citizens to look very carefully into the condition of their own sinks and cesspools, and if they are not in proper shape and condition, have them put so at once. All of which is respectfully submitted.

E. L. FINCH, Chairman,
J. W. [illegible],
JOHN SIMPSON,
Com. on Sts. and Pub. Health.

Plainfield, Jan. 20, 1879.

On motion, report received and placed on file.

Mr. Simpson, from Aud. Com., reported as correct the following claims: Children's Home board, [illegible] A. V. Searing, [illegible] On motion, report received and [illegible] ordered drawn for the several amounts. All ayes.

Mr. Lithgow presented the following:

ORDERING A MONEY ELECTION:

The amount of money required by the Common Council for streets, lights, salaries, and other necessary expenses, for the year 1879, will be about $12,000; the receipts for the same year may be safely placed at $6,000.

There are but two ways in which the deficiency may be met—by the granting of licenses for the sale of liquors, or by the legal voters of the city of Plainfield authorizing the Common Council to raise the sum required by taxation.

A large number of our most respectable citizens are in favor of granting licenses for the sale of liquors to the hotels only; and equally respectable citizens are in favor of granting licenses for the sale of liquors to all persons conforming to the law.

The Council [illegible] are aware that they have not been [illegible] peculiar views upon the [illegible] of Plainfield, but to express the views of their fellow citizens on [illegible] this point, as in all public matters. After a careful examination of the receipts and necessary expenditures of the city government for a series of years, we are convinced that the only alternative presented to the Council is to procure the extra revenue by granting licenses to all who will comply with the law, or by limiting license exclusively to the hotels and obtaining the excess money by a special vote of the people.

This question must be decided by the people. If [illegible] citizens will grant us the money required by the city, we will limit license by the strict letter of the [illegible] law—to hotels. If they refuse and expect us to furnish the essentials of a good city government we must procure the revenue by license. Therefore,

Resolved, That an election be held between the hours of seven o'clock, A. M., and seven o'clock, P. M., on Tuesday, the 11th day of February, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, at the usual places for holding elections in this city, to vote the sum of Five Thousand Dollars, to be raised by tax in this city for the use of the city in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, in addition to the specific sum authorized by the charter to be annually raised by tax; such sum of Five Thousand Dollars to be assessed and collected at the time and in the manner directed by the charter for the assessment and collection of annual city taxes; and that the Clerk be and he is hereby authorized and directed to give notice in the manner required by the charter that such election will be held accordingly.

Resolved, That the Committee on Salaries, Offices and Elections be and they hereby are authorized and directed to make all necessary and proper arrangements for such election.

Mr. Redfield moved their adoption.

Mr. Stover objected. He said if you license one, license all! He believed that a license presented to this Council (if conforming in every particular to the License Ord.) should be granted, whether it be for a Hotel or a Saloon. He would offer as an amendment, "that if the money asked for ($5,000) be granted by the city at the election to be holden on Tuesday, Feb. 11, 1879, then no license be granted!"

Mr. Lithgow at this juncture arose and stated as to the amendment of Mr. Stover he would have nothing to say; it was for the Council to decide. This Council was elected by the people, and he did not think that six men should say that such and such a person should be granted a license; the citizens should have something to say in this particular. If they do not see fit to vote "money," then license everything; make it either total prohibition or free rum, etc.

After some further discussion, Mr. Stover still insisted upon his amendment.

Pres. Potts requested Mr. Stover to put his amendment in writing. After a lapse of a few moments, Mr. Stover presented his amendment in proper shape, asking for information in the meantime as to whether these parties would not be selling illegally until the election in February? In his opinion he thought they would. The clerk then read the amendment, as follows:

Resolved, That if the election proposed to be held on the 11th day of February prox. should result in a majority in favor of the money asked for, then no licenses for the sale of spirituous liquors in any form shall be granted by this Council for the present year.

Mr. Stover moved its adoption. Agreed to by the following vote:

Ayes—Coriell, Finch, Lithgow, Potts, Rushmore, Redfield—6; Nays—Simpson, Stewart—2; excused from voting—Depew, Mayer, Stover—3.

Mr. Stewart moved the adoption of the res., as amended. Carried by the following vote: Ayes—Coriell, Finch, Lithgow, Potts, Rushmore, Redfield, Simpson, Stewart—8. Excused from voting—Depew, Mayer, Stover—3.

Mr. Stewart offered an amendment to the License Ord., striking out everything in reference to saloons, and making the fee for Hotel license, $400.

Mr. Stover moved that it lie upon the table. He could not see why this should pass; if the city voted "money," there is to be no licenses granted.

Mr. Lithgow thought it should go to the Com. on Laws and Ords., where it rightly belonged.

Upon a vote being taken upon Mr. Stover's motion to table, it was lost, as follows:—Ayes—Depew, Mayer, Potts, Simpson; Stover—5. Nays—Coriell, Finch, Lithgow, Rushmore, Redfield, Stewart—6.

Mr. Stewart moved that this matter be referred to Com. on Laws and Ords. Adopted.

Clerk then read the following: "Resolved, That the Com. on Printing & Stationery be authorized to have printed fifty (50) Peddler's Licenses, in book form, with stub attached."

Amended by Mr. Stover, "and that the Com. receive proposals for same." On motion, res. as amended, adopted.

Mr. Depew offered a res. that the Com. on Printing and Stationery cause to be printed 250 copies of Rules of Order, as adopted this evening. On motion, adopted.

Mr. Stewart offered a res. that the Com. on Printing be authorized to have printed 200 copies of all the ordinances since 1869, in one book, for the use of the city. On motion, adopted, Simpson, Stewart and Stover voting in the negative.

Mr. Finch offered a res. that the Com. on Sts. disburse $50 toward keeping the sidewalks and gutters clear of snow in case of a heavy rain.

Mr. Depew thought that there was an ord. now in effect compelling property owners to keep their sidewalks and gutters free from snow and ice. The Corporation Counsel being present, stated for the information of the Council that such an ord. was now in force. Upon Mr. Finch's motion being put, it was lost.

The election of Messrs. Coriell, Finch and Stover as members of the Police Board not having been done in accordance with the Rules of Order, (by ballot) a res. was offered to that effect by Mr. Stover, and the three above-named gentlemen were balloted for and elected.

Mr. Depew offered a res. that ex-Mayor Male not having signed the license of Jas. Connealy to sell spirituous and fermented liquors, that the matter be referred to the Com. on Licenses.

Mr. Stover thought that that matter had already been settled. In his opinion it was now a matter of Law.

Mr. Depew then stated that he would refer the matter to the Com. on Laws & Ords. On motion, so adopted.

Mr. Coriell offered a res. that the Street Com'r be instructed to have the gutters cleared of snow by property owners who have failed so to do. On motion, adopted.

Mr. Stover moved that the petition of Fred. Caspar for a saloon license, be taken from the table.

Mr. Lithgow moved that the petitions be re-committed back to the Com. on Licenses until after the special election. On motion, so declared.

Mr. Mayer offered a res. authorizing the Com. on Printing to furnish a small quantity of Stationery for use of Council, and a feather duster for janitor. Adopted.

On motion of Mr. Stover, Council then adjourned.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

[OFFICIAL.]

Pursuant to adjournment the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county convened at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, on Thursday, January 9th, 1879, at 11 o'clock, a. m.

All the members being present except Freeholder Runkle.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (with the exception of list bills paid, which were, on motion, omitted), and on motion the minutes, as read, were approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Communication from Director C. W. L. Martine.

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

GENTLEMEN: I desire to call your attention to the matter of interest due the county from the city of Elizabeth, an account that has been standing on our books for the last year or two, which they refuse to pay. In all other cases interest has been paid.

Some of the taxes are paid promptly on the day due, while others are left to drag along through the following year and are then paid with the money collected on the following tax levy; this compels the county to borrow money for the current expenses and interest and payment of bonds long after the taxes are due, and should have been paid. These loans, with the accrued interest, have to be raised each year, the amount being paid by taxation, which increases the tax levy beyond its just proportion; so that it is readily seen that those who pay their taxes promptly are the parties who suffer most (if no interest is collected) for after paying their just proportion they are taxed for the interest to cover the deficiencies of the delinquent townships and cities.

The cities and townships collect from delinquents twelve per cent, and it seems reasonable and just that they should pay the county six, as the county is required to pay the State ten per cent., after the tax is due ten days.

I have conferred with many persons familiar with the subject during the past year, and nearly all seem to think that some legislation should be secured whereby the State and county tax should be made a preferred claim, or that the Township Committee or City authorities should be compelled to borrow a sufficient sum (if it had not been collected) to pay the State and county tax on a certain day, for if the State authorities run the State Government in all its parts, and the county provides for the lunatics, criminals, and in some instances the paupers, and runs the courts of justice, society has that which is the most necessary for its protection and safety, therefore these matters should receive the people's just attention and the means be provided promptly to meet these obligations.

If temporary loans must be resorted to after the taxes become due from the citizens, let them be made by the townships and cities so that they may be near the people, and they will see to it that but little is borrowed, and that little paid at the earliest possible moment.

I call your attention to the interest matter of Elizabeth that such steps may be taken as thought best.

In regard to additional legislation in the matter of collecting the tax, it seems to me some exertion should be made in that direction.

Most respectfully,
C. W. L. MARTINE,
January 8, 1879. Director.

Freeholder Randolph moved that the communication be received and spread upon the minutes.

Which was carried.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Committee to issue Bonds:

Your Committee appointed to issue bonds to renew a portion of the bonds falling due in Jan. 1st, 1879, to the amount of $45,000 would respectfully report:

That they have issued 45 bonds of the amount of $1,000 each, cancelling one bond, thus making the amount actually issued $44,000; $2,000 falling due each year for twenty-two years of 6 per cent. bonds they sold to the highest bidder who bid for the whole amount for 27-100 of one per cent. with accrued interest added. The amount falling due Jan. 1st, 1879, to be provided for, is $55,200.

Respectfully submitted,
Jan. 9th, 1879.
THOMAS H. SMITH,
J. F. HUBBARD, } Committee.
WM. H. BRIANT,

On motion of Freeholder Randolph the report was received and placed on file.

Committee on Springfield avenue bridge, Cranford township.

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Your committee appointed July 2d last, to construct a bridge over the Rahway River on Springfield avenue, in Cranford township "at a cost not to exceed four thousand dollars" would respectfully report.

That the same has been completed at a cost of three thousand five hundred and ninety dollars and twenty-four cents, ($3,590.24.)

The abutment walls and wing walls are of quarry stone, and a first-class job, and cost (including grading, surveying and iron pipes for sluiceways) was $1,103.27.

The superstructure is of iron, eighty (80) feet span, with roadway of twenty (20) feet, and two sidewalks of six and one-half (6½) feet each, it is a very substantial bridge, light in appearance and much admired, reflecting credit on the builders, the "New York Bridge Company," the cost was, including a bar of iron on each wall and an extra coat of paint, $2,486.97.

The bills of same have been paid in accordance with resolution passed at the September meeting, authorizing the Collector to pay on the presentation of a properly authenticated warrant.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN IBERMANN,
GEO. W. F. RANDOLPH,
ALBERT PIERSON, } Com
WILLIAM J. THOMPSON,
THOS. H. SMITH,
Jan. 9, 1879.

On motion of Freeholder Hubbard the report was received and placed on file.

Committee on Calvert at Seventh street and Central Railroad, Elizabeth.

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Your committee appointed to consider the communication of John Carr and others in reference to a calvert at Seventh Street and Central Railroad, would respectfully report that they have visited the location mentioned, and find a small stream, and the streets that are graded and used crossing it all properly bridged.

It is also crossed by the Central Railroad, and at that point we find a calvert or bridge part brick and part iron, which seems rather small and a little high. If there is any trouble from the stoppage of the water we think it must be at this point, where there is no highway in use.

Under these circumstances we do not see how the county can afford any relief. All of which is respectfully submitted.

THOMAS FORSYTH,
J. F. HUBBARD, } Com
GEORGE DOTY,

Freeholder Randolph moved that the report be received and placed on file.

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Thos. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

POETRY.

"WHAT ART THOU DOING WITH THY LIFE?"

What art thou doing with thy life,
Oh, thou with many gifts?
Is there a nature that inspires
And comforts and uplifts?
Do those in trouble think of thee
As of a precious balm?
And does thy presence lull the storm
Till it becomes a calm?

What art thou doing with thy life?
'Twas meant for others' use,
And awful is the reckoning
For waste and for abuse,
Better to use one talent well,
Than to misuse the ten;
The smile of God is recompense
For all the scorn of men.

What art thou doing with thy life?
Up and be doing friend;
The days and nights and months and years
Our God doth only lend.
If Time was all our own why then
It might be freely spent,
But it is borrowed and 'tis spent
To squander what is lent.

What art thou doing with thy life?
Retrieve a past of gilt,
Alas! thou canst not gather up
The drops already spilt,
But God will blot out yesterday
For the Redeemer's sake,
If thou to-day, with good resolves,
Will trust in Jesus' name.

What art thou doing with thy life?
It is already noon;
The evening shadows are not far—
The night-time will come soon.
And to the Master we must go
At setting of the sun,
To hear Him say how our day's work
Has in His sight been done.

RESOLUTION.

Press on! there's no such word as fail;
Press nobly on! the goal is near—
Ascend the mountain! breast the gale!
Look upward, onward—never fear!
Why shouldst thou faint? Heaven smiles above,
Though storm and vapor intervene;
That sun shines on, whose name is Love,
Serenely o'er life's shadowed scene.

Press on! if fortune play thee false
To-day, to-morrow she'll be true;
Whom now she sinks, she now exalts,
Taking old gifts and granting new.
The wisdom of the present hour
Makes up for follies past and gone;
To weakness strength succeeds, and power
From frailty springs—press on! press on

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

MAT'S LUCK.

"It is just my luck!" said Mat. "Confound it!"

He walked gloomily to the window and looked out—on the vivid green of the croquet lawn, on white and red roses clustering about the porch; on the old rector, tending his favorite geraniums in the distance, amid a blaze of sunshine and glow of color. Mat longed to be with him—the sombre room seemed oppressive as a cage.

He threw open the French windows, drew a long breath and thrust his fingers into the pockets of his shooting-coat, falling naturally into a careless, lounging attitude peculiar to him. The fingers came in contact with a note and idly brought it to light. It was addressed, in a women's handwriting, to "Matthew Curtis, Esq., M. D." A grim smile played about that gentleman's lips as he reflected how unsuited was that formal superscription to the jovial, reckless good-for-naught, known to rich and poor for miles around as young Mat Curtis.

With a listless air he drew forth the brief inclosure. His face darkened as he perused it.

"Mis Agnes Bellus would be glad to have a few minutes' conversation with Mr. Curtis."

"Lover-like—very!" commented Mat, with sarcastic emphasis.

Another glance at the delicate paper and the firm, square handwriting, the dark look hardening the while, until the character of the face seemed completely altered.

"Look at it!" quoth Mat. "Her hand never trembled; there is not a wavering stroke! Why, most girls would cry their eyes out while writing such a note as that to their lovers!"

He crushed the offending missive into a crumpled ball as he spoke, and addressed a few more unapostolic expletives to the fair sunshine—expletives peculiarly unbefitting a clergyman's study, or the hearing of the young lady who noiselessly entered in time indistinctly to catch them.

Young—not more than twenty, perhaps—but with a serene and queenly grace of movement, a gravely beautiful face—an air just now of haughty disgust.

"Pardon me," she says, icily; "so interesting a conversation with yourself is probably of a confidential nature."

Mat turns with a flaming face, a quick, deprecating gesture, a courteous, apologetic bow and speech that somehow in their confused humility stamp him as a gentleman.

"I trust, indeed, you did not hear it. I earnestly crave forgiveness if you did?"

She contemptuously dismisses the matter with the slightest wave of a little jewelled hand. Cold, hard, proud she looks, and her words have a clear-cut articulation suggestive of newly-clipped coins.

"I sent for you."

"Yes," answers Mat, defiantly. His penitence is dying away—the dark, hard expression is returning. "Just my luck," it seems to repeat.

"To beg an answer to three questions," continued Miss Bellus.

Mat bows, thrusts his hands into the deep shooting-pockets once more, and resumes the careless, lounging attitude.

"Have you entered your name, notwithstanding my protest, as a gentleman-rider for the Autumn steeple-chase?"

"Yes."

"Have you, in truth, gone back to the old habit of dropping into the 'Barley-corn' two or three nights in the week to" (how supreme was the ring of scorn in her voice!) "drink ale and smoke in company with the boors there?"

"Yes," repeats Mat, sturdily.

"Is it, indeed, true that, on leaving that inn last night, you involved yourself in a poaching affray, actually knocking down a keeper and helping one of the poachers to escape?"

"Yes," says Mat, with a kind of sullen despair.

Miss Bellus draws something from her white fingers, and holds it out. Mechanically Mat's hand comes out of the shooting pocket and grasps it. It is a women's engagement ring.

They looked at each other, a curious contrast in the two faces. Hers composed, calm, haughtily indifferent. His blankly astonished, angry, agitated, by turns.

"Not—not that, Agnes!" he pleads, huskily.

The serene beauty, the quiet determination of her face unnerves him.

"Can you not make allowances?" he cried. "Can you not understand that man's young blood like mine must find some excitement greater than mixing pills, and powders, and lotions, or creeping through sick rooms all day?"

It is pitiful to see how he watches her while he speaks, and notes the same fixed, cold, disdainful answer.

"At least, let me explain. I am fit so to your satisfaction, I think, I hope!" he says, dubiously. "Return it to your finger, and reserve judgment till you hear the defence!" And he holds the ring towards her, with a great, clumsy hand that trembles somewhat.

Still no audible reply. A faint shake of the head, a look of polite incredulity—that is all.

"Do you not care?" he asks.

His appealing eyes search her face. It does not change. Beautiful, imperturbable, the sentence written there never varies. His unsteady fingers dropped the ring, but he let it lie, half buried in a fleecy rug. Then, with a set, stern look, he sets his foot upon it, bows slightly, and walks from the room.

He leaves the house, passing the window to gain the road, but looking neither to the right nor to the left.

His head is erect, his hands are out of the loose pockets. For once (startling transformation), young Mat Curtis looks positively dignified.

And as he vanishes so startling a transformation takes place in the room he has quitted. Miss Bellus proves herself a woman, and not a queen, by a series of actions essentially feminine.

First, she rescues the best love token from the floor; then she kisses it and cries over it; then she locks it away carefully in a writing-desk; then she rushes up stairs to watch her lover out of sight from an upper window.

For a quarter of a mile or so she watched him, a retreating figure, growing smaller and smaller in the distance. He never once looked back; the regular march of his steps never faltered; a turn of the road hid him from sight. Miss Bellus sat down on the floor—a most undignified position—and cried till her pretty eyes were red and swollen.

"It is all over!" she moaned—"all over!"

* * * * * * *

"Fire! Fire!"

Mat sprang from his bed, and with professional experience struck a light, tumbled into some clothes and rushed from the house.

No need to ask where the alarm proceeded; the fierce pillar of flame and the red glow in the sky were beacons towards which he ran at headlong speed, with one thought in his mind, "I pray heaven it may not be the rectory!"

"Where is it?" he shouted to two laborers, fagging along as swiftly as heavy boots and ponderous habits of progression would let them.

"Farmer Joyce's, sur."

"Farmer Joyce's! Thank heaven! The next house to the rectory, but not near enough to endanger it!"

Mat's surprise gave place to a thrill of almost pleasurable excitement; it was his "mad young blood" asserting itself. Dashing through a gateway, he almost ran over a girl, bare-headed, wringing her hands in impotent anxiety. It was Miss Bellus.

"Go back at once," commanded Mat, curtly. "Put on a hat, and the thickest shawl you have."

The panic-stricken girl obeyed. Not till afterwards did it occur to her he had no right to issue such instructions.

When she returned it was to find Matthew Curtis, Esq., M. D., in the attire of a burning pig-style, pitching out squeaking, half-roasted porkers.

"Just my luck!" he grumbled, examining his scorched fingers. "If they had been babies, now, I might have gained some credit at the same risk."

"The stable is a-fire, sur!"

"What?" shouted Mat. He did not wait for the information to be repeated.

It was true. The stable was on fire; the horses were screaming with terror; two or three rustics were making excited and fruitless attempts to drag them out; attempts the poor animals resisted with all their might. A little crowd of men looked on idly and despairingly.

"Jim, run into the barn and get three or four empty sacks and a rope. Quick!"

"Yes, sir."

By drawing a sack over each animal's head and neck, thus blindfolding it; by passing a rope round the forelegs and setting strong arms to haul, and by a little organization of brave but until then ill-applied efforts, a rescue was affected. All the horses were saved, except one poor brute smothered by the smoke.

Father Joyce came up, with a grimy hand extended in honest gratitude.

"Thank you kindly, sir. I don't mind for the risks of the buildings—they are all insured; but it went to my heart to hear them poor brutes scream."

Mat gave his left hand—the right hand was bound up with a handkerchief. The old rector joined them, Miss Bellus leaning on his arm.

"The danger is over now, Joyce, I think. Mat, come across with me."

Mat glanced at the averted face of the young lady, and misconstrued it. She was, in truth, ashamed to meet his eye. The contrast between his coolness and courage and her physical cowardice humbled her. She had come down from that pedestal of propriety from which she had presumed to judge him so harshly, but he did not suspect it.

"I have burnt my hand and arm slightly—just my luck!" said Mat. "I must go home at once to dress them."

He took off his hat as he spoke, awkwardly enough, with the left hand, and turned away.

"He is a fine fellow, Agnes, that lover of yours," said the rector; "but his manner is rather abrupt to-night. What ails him?"

"Never mind, papa—never mind."

There was a kind of wail in Bellus's voice.

"A lover's quarrel," thought the rector, sagely. "Then my attitude must be one of dignified neutrality—my policy non-intervention;" and he laughed quietly to himself at the conceit.

Mat was dressing his burns in the surgery when the outer door opened and his father entered.

"Hallo, dad! Who called you up? It was my turn to-night."

It should be explained that "young Mat Curtis" and "the old doctor" were partners.

"The old doctor" made no reply. He sat down in a low chair, and began to fan himself with a broad straw hat. Mat, looking up in surprise, saw that he was ghastly pale; that his eyes had a look of horror in them; that his whole appearance was that of a man who had sustained a terrible fright.

Mat touched his arm gently.

"What is it, father?"

Doctor Curtis' lips moved twice before any sound issued; then he uttered but one word, "Cholera!"

Upon Mat's face there came a faint reflection of his father's fear. The scourge had been raging with frightful violence in distant parts of England. They had talked of it often, dreading its approach, trusting it might pass by this pure, healthy village.

No; the next day three cases were reported, and one dead. The rival practitioner, Mr. Bennett, a man of good private means, fled with his wife and family. Mat and "the old doctor" were worked almost to death. No need of bar-parlor dissipations, or approaching steeple-chases, or poaching affrays now to quiet the mad young blood.

Mat went from house to house with a grave face, and a cheerful, kindly, hopeful word for every poor terrified wretch, who shuddered at his own fears.

Then his father was stricken, "the old doctor."

Poor "old doctor!" When the evil that he had dreaded really came to him, seized upon him, he grew brave and strong.

"Nonsense, lad!" he said, when Mat tried to speak encouraging words from a sinking heart. "I have no stamina; I could not expect to live much longer in the ordinary course of nature. Don't blink the truth, boy. I shall be glad to die in harness."

* * * * * * *

Miss Bellus watched the funeral procession from that same upper window she had once before put to a similar use.

Very contrite was Miss Bellus in those days. A horrible dread had taken possession of her with the first report of cholera in the village. She fought against it; she hated herself for it, she tried to drag herself to the beds of the sick poor; but trembling limbs refused to carry her. It was constitutional physical cowardice; and every gossiping tale of Mat's calm heroism increased her self-abasement and her love and admiration for that unconscious gentleman.

His father's death gave him double work, but he did not spare himself. He snatched food, rest, sleep when and how he could until the epidemic died out almost; then as the last case was in a fair way of recovery he sickened.

"My luck has changed," said Mat, with a smile. "I can be spared now the work is done."

Miss Bellus heard the news the same hour. A housemaid to whom she had done some little kindness ran off to the rectory to tell her. Miss Bellus gave an order or two and went straight to her father's study.

"Papa, Mat is sick now."

"Bless my soul!" said the rector, in great excitement. "Poor lad—poor lad!"

"I have told Jenkins to put the horses to the brougham and the housekeeper to get the green bed-room ready."

"Eh?" and the old gentleman looked very bewildered.

"And you must fetch Mat," explained Miss Bellus, calmly.

"But—but—"

"He shall not be left to the nursing of those ignorant servants," she insisted, resolutely. "He shall be brought here or I will assuredly go to him."

The rector had yielded to her all her life. He shook his head in sore perplexity.

"Are you not afraid, dear?"

A peculiar smile lighted her pale, beautiful countenance.

"Not now."

A similar question was almost the first one put by Mat in a convalescent state.

"Were you not afraid, darling?"

"Perfect love casteth out fear," she rejoined, softly.

There are times when the formality of an introduction can be dispensed with. One of these times is when you meet two young ladies who have tipped over into a snow bank and are unable to extricate themselves or turn their cutter right side up.

"What in the world are you up to now," excitedly asked the maternal parent of her five-year old, who with his bow and arrow was demonstrating to his younger sister that he could hit his father's stovepipe hat across the room. "I'm teaching the young idea how to shoot," was the precocious reply.

USEFUL, IF NOT NEW.

The following simple rules for preserving health and promoting personal comfort, if not new to some of our readers, are none the less important to every one:

The object of brushing the teeth is to remove the destructive particles of food, which, by their decomposition, generate decay. To neutralize the acid resulting from this chemical change is the object of dentifrice. A stiff brush should be used after every meal, and a thread of silk floss or india rubber passed through between the teeth to remove particles of food. Rinsing the mouth with lime-water, neutralizes the acid.

Living and sleeping in a room in which the sun never enters is a slow form of suicide. A sun bath is the most refreshing and life giving bath that can possibly be taken.

Always keep the feet warm, and thus avoid colds. To this end, never sit in damp shoes or wear foot coverings fitting and pressing closely.

The best time to eat fruit is half an hour before breakfast.

A full bath should not be taken less than three hours after a meal. Never take a cold water before bathing. Do not take a cold bath when tired.

Keep a box of powdered starch on the washstand, and after washing rub a pinch over the hands. It will prevent chapping.

If feeling cold before going to bed, exercise; do not roast over a fire.

A young man and his favorite companion sat near the front at Burdette's lecture the other evening. When the Hawkeye man had just finished convulsing his hearers with an account of a youth's first shaving encounter with a barber, the young man leaned over and whispered:

"That's true to life, I can tell you."

"How can you tell me?" inquired his girl.

"How?" he replied in a whisper; "why, that's the way I felt when I first got shaved."

"When was that?" she asked.

"Oh, before I shaved my mustache," he returned.

"What mustache?" she queried, a little surprised.

"What mustache do you suppose?" he retorted, turning red.

"Why, Charley," whispered the girl, "I never saw any mustache! Do you mean—"

"Never mind what I mean," hissed the young man between his clinched teeth. And he stared very hard at the lecturer all the rest of the evening, but somehow couldn't see anything to laugh at. Sunday night he went to see a new girl.

The Bumstead Ring in Jersey City "scooped in," in one job, more than the total of the Warren county frauds, which amount to $100,000. In the latter case all the participants in the frauds are or will be punished, but in the Jersey City case, where the steal ran up into millions, Bumstead was the only sufferer, serving a term of nine months in the State Prison.

Governor McClellan on Monday, 27th inst., sent into the Senate his nominations for Law and Lay Judges in fifteen Counties of the State. Of these, eleven are Republican and four Democrats.—It has been the custom heretofore for the Governor to appoint to these positions gentlemen of his own political faith. At least this has been the case as a general rule. It will therefore be observed that Gov. McClellan has in this instance made an emphatic departure from this practice, and he has consequently raised a storm which promises to assume some proportions. Singular as it may appear, the principal opposition to the Governor's course comes from the Republicans.—Why this is so, especially under the existing circumstances, is somewhat difficult to understand. Time will however enlighten us, and we refrain from the expression of any opinion, until further developments enable us to do so understandingly. We believe "Little Mac" has a level head knows what he is doing.

TOWNSHIP TAXES.

For the benefit of Township Clerks and others interested, we publish Sec. 2 of the Act passed the New Jersey Legislature last winter, regarding the collection of taxes. The same law applies to cities. We suggest that proper heed be taken of the provisions of the law:

Sec. 2. And be it enacted. That it shall be the duty of the clerks of the said townships in this state, at least twenty days before the annual town meeting in each year. To make out and caused to be published in such newspaper published in said township as has the largest circulation, or if no newspaper be published in said township, then in the newspaper published nearest to said township, in said county, and having the largest circulation, or in pamphlet form if the town committee shall so order, a full and complete account of the receipts and expenditures of the township committee for the preceding year, the amounts received and paid out by the township collector from all sources for account of the township of the several school districts therein during the said year, the amount of taxes remaining unpaid and the names of the delinquents.

THE NEW PENSION BILL.

The following is the new pension bill recently passed by Congress and signed by the President. As there are many soldiers of the late war in this section interested in its provisions, we publish it entire:

An act to provide that all pensions on account of death or wounds received or disease contracted in the service of the United States during the late war of the rebellion, which have been granted or which shall hereafter be granted, shall commence from the date of death or discharge from the service of the United States for the payment of arrears of pensions and other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all pensions which have been granted under the general laws regulating pensions or may hereafter be granted in consequence of death from a cause which originated in the United States service during the continuance of the late war of the rebellion, or in consequence of wounds, injuries or disease received or contracted in said service during the said war of the rebellion, shall commence from the date of the death or discharge from said service of the person on whose account the claim has been or shall hereafter be granted or from the termination of the right of the party having prior title to such pension, provided the rate of pension for the intervening time for which arrears of pension are hereby granted shall be the same per month for which the pension was originally granted.

Sec. 2. That the Commissioner of Pensions is hereby authorized and directed to adopt such rules and regulations for the payment of the arrears of pensions hereby granted as will be necessary to cause to be paid to such pensioners, or if the pensioners shall have died to the person or persons entitled to the same, all such arrears of pensions as the pensioner may be or would have been entitled to under this act.

Sec. 3. That section 4,717 of the revised statutes, which provides that "no claim for pension not prosecuted to a successful issue within five years from the date of filing the same shall be admitted without record evidence from the War or Navy Department of the injury or the disease which resulted in the disability or death of the person on whose account the claim was made, provided that in any case in which the limitation prescribed by the section bars the further prosecution of the claim the claimant may present, through the Pension Office, to the Adjutant General of the Army or the Surgeon of the Navy, evidence that the disease or injury which resulted in the disability or death of the person on whose account the claim is made originated in the service and in the line of duty. And if such evidence is deemed satisfactory by the officer to whom it may be submitted he shall cause a record of the fact so proved to be made and a copy of the same to be transmitted to the Commissioner of Pension and the bar to the prosecution of the claim shall thereby be removed," be and the same is hereby repealed.

Sec. 4. No claim agent or other person shall be entitled to receive any compensation for services in making application for arrears of pension.

Sec. 5. That all acts or portions of acts so far as they may conflict with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

THE PENALTY OF MALFEASANCE.

The prosecution of the Warren county malfeasors has culminated in the sentence of all but one of them, less culpable than the rest, to imprisonment in the State Prison for various terms. The penalties may be regarded as severe, but it is the severity dictated by impartial and inexorable justice.—The criminals belong to a class of officials who, under a lax system of accountability and an indifferent public sentiment which has permitted official peculation to be practiced with impunity, have multiplied in every part of the land. Examples in high places have found imitators in places less exalted, the silence of the laws in the presence of official stealing great and small has caused such betrayals of public trusts to be regarded as a venial offence, and offices have come to be looked upon by those who occupy them as opportunities for gratifying mercenary greed without regard to the means employed.

The highest purpose to be subserved by the conviction and punishment of the Warren county officials, and all others guilty of like criminality, in the recreation of the sense of public trust, to the decadence of which the widely prevailing peculation is attributable.—The punishment of the guilty parties, deserved as it is, is but the penalty which the individual pays for his crime, but society is mainly concerned in deterring others from committing the same crimes, and in teaching, by example, that men who accept or seek public office will be held to a strict and rigid accountability. The era of corruption and profligacy, and their concomitant, dishonesty, inaugurated by demoralizing civil war—an era in which unscrupulous administrations have, by their acts, taught the people that the most sacred Constitutional obligations are no restraint upon physical force, and in which the whole power of the Government has been exerted in behalf of plunderers preying upon entire communities—is giving way to a better and purer era born of the reaction inevitable in all human affairs.—Men who have abused public confidence will be called to account when their misdeeds are detected, and those who hold public trusts will be wise if they are deterred from the commission of crimes which lead to the prison door.

The sentences pronounced at Belvidere on Saturday will meet with universal approval. It is a deplorable feature of these cases—as it is of most similar cases—that the ignominious punishment these officials have brought upon themselves, is the cause of shame and sorrow in many a household. It is also deplorable that the men condemned to penal confinement had once been respected and trusted in the communities in which they lived. But these are personal and private considerations which cannot be permitted to stand in the way of the administration of public justice. The public thief has no claims upon public leniency, and it is public law impartially enforced that requires of the men sentenced on Saturday the expiation of their crimes.

Thus says the Trenton True American and so say all who believe in honesty and uprightness in office. Warren County is not the only county in the State where "crookedness" has been practiced by officials, and the same discovered, and there is many an official to-day quaking with fear lest their acts be unearthed and prosecuted. How is it with Union County? Have we any Tammany Associations among us? If so, let the skeleton be exposed to the bottom.

TO THE VOTERS OF PLAINFIELD.

Independence of purpose and action is a virtue to be commended in any man, and more especially in the man elected to perform the duties of public office. The men selected by the voters of a city to regulate its affairs, guard its best interests, and make laws for its government, should be men possessing this virtue to the fullest extent, and when placed in public position through the sovereign voice of the people should have sufficient strength of character to enable them to do what they deemed for the best interests of the whole community over whose affairs they are elected to preside, without giving heed to the twaddle and talk of a few individuals, always to be found among the inhabitants of almost any town or city, who are vain enough to think that it is their province and duty to instruct and direct those elected to make and administer the laws, and who are ever willing to make the attempt to force their fanatical ideas upon said community. Greatly to be admired is the man who heeds not these importunities, but has firm convictions of his own as to his duty, and dares to do it, without stopping to consider whether there might not be some individual who would not approve of his action. These remarks have been called forth by the action of the Common Council at its last meeting in ordering what is called a money election to take place on the 11th of February next, the real object as indicated by the resolution being to decide for a certain few wavering members of the Council what they shall do as to the question of granting licenses. The question now presented to the voters and tax-payers of the City of Plainfield is, are they in favor of strict PROHIBITION with INCREASED TAXATION, or shall licenses be granted in accordance with our present license ordinance, and our streets be improved, our city lighted and policed without our already overburdened taxpayers being compelled to submit to increased taxation? That it is not practical to attempt prohibition, or in other words (to prevent the sale of liquor), we think has been fully demonstrated by the twenty years' experience of the State of Massachusetts. The same thing has been tried in our own fair city; we refer to some two years since when an attempt was made to enforce these prohibition ideas by the refusal of the Common Council to grant licenses. In view of these facts, it is for the voters of Plainfield to say, whether they are in favor of Prohibition with increased taxes levied upon the already overburdened taxpayer, without in the least lessening the evils arising from the sale of liquor, or that licenses shall be granted to all who comply with the law as it now stands. The Council (or at least a majority of them) have by their votes upon the resolution ordering the election, pledged themselves abide by your decision, and if the money is voted they will grant no licenses to either hotels or saloons; if it is refused they will grant licenses to all who properly apply. Your decision is awaited.

THE PENSION BILL.

The only objection that can be argued against the Pension Arrearages Bill, which, as announced on Saturday, became a law on that day, is that it will take a large amount of money from the United States Treasury. The number of pensioners is large, but there are thousands of poor soldiers in the land, some of them eking out a miserable existence by carrying hand-organs, etc., who will throw up their hats high in the air because the bill was passed, and, better than all, that the President's signature has been affixed thereto, although strong objections were urged against. The question has not been one of party, but of justice, and Congress has performed an act which will cause those who voted for the measure to be held in grateful remembrance, although no claims can be paid until additional legislation is had. Surely, the men who served the country in its days of disaster and gloom, and accomplished such glorious results, are worthy of more tangible evidence of regard than is set forth in resolutions at political conventions.

The fight over the right to construct a bridge across the waters connecting Jersey City with the Communipaw Ferry of the Central Railroad has commenced at Trenton, and the prospects are that a lively legal tilt will be the result. We earnestly hope the bill to construct the bridge will pass, as it is a needed want to the patrons of the Central Railroad. As it now is, passengers and working-men are compelled to pay a sum to cross the ferry to New York, and a still further sum to re-cross the river to reach Jersey City from Communipaw. Let us have the bridge.

Speaking of the new bounty bill, the New York Commercial Advertiser wittily remarks that many a veteran of the late war who came out without a pension, now wishes that he had received a wound, not bad enough to hurt, but big enough to place him on the roll of national invalids. This reminds us of the old soldier who was talking to an armless comrade about the glory of the war. "Give me my arm," said the latter, "and you may have all the glory. I've had enough."

LITTLE TAMMANY'S FALL.

Sentence was pronounced last Saturday on the little Tammany Ring officials convicted in the present term of court in Warren County. Immediately after the opening of court the Prosecutor moved that sentence be pronounced on the convicted men. Mr. Shipman then arose and appealed for a new trial on the two cases against McDermott. The Justice denied the motion. Mr. Shipman then made some remarks on behalf of Messrs. Cummings, King, Bulgin, Givens and Teel. Ex-Judge Robeson spoke briefly in behalf of Teel. The Judges took the affidavits and petitions presented, and withdrew for conference. Their absence seemed a long one to the spectators, and to the convicted men it must have seemed hours.

In about thirty minutes the Judges returned. The Chief Justice then directed Simon A. Cummings to stand up. The aged man arose with a face too sad to look upon. The Justice reviewed the crimes of the conspirators, dwelling with painful earnestness on their enormity, and expressing himself unable to assign a reason for their commission. He administered a rebuke to the prisoner in terms and in a manner so forcible that defendant's counsel and the spectators seemed to feel relieved when the Judge ceased to speak. The aged prisoner sat down after hearing his sentence—two years in the State prison.

Next in turn came Edwin A. Bulgin, the friend of Cummings and his adviser in all these dishonest tricks. The fact that he was not an office holder was taken into account, and a sentence of only eighteen months in the State prison was imposed upon him on his conviction on two indictments for conspiracy. Edmund Teel, the former Collector, was then called. He maintained wonderful self-possession. The Justice addressed him in tones of great severity, and sentenced him to the State prison for two years on his convictions for forgery and conspiracy.—Charles Strader, on the three convictions against him, one for forgery and two for conspiracy, was sentenced to two years in the State prison. He is an old man, and he seemed quite pleased with his sentence, having apprehended, no doubt, a more severe one. John V. Mattison, on his four convictions for forgery, was sentenced to four years in the State prison. He did not look well pleased. Dr. Cox, on the three convictions for conspiracy, was sentenced to eighteen months in the State prison. He has hitherto maintained a defiant manner, but this morning he broke down and showed deep feeling.

John Givens, the former attorney of the Board, was sentenced to eighteen months in the State prison on two convictions for conspiracy. The Chief Justice, in addressing him, said that he was for the first time in his life passing sentence on a member of the legal profession, and that in doing so he felt great pain. He added that it would be his duty to bring his case to the atten*tion of the Supreme Court at its next* sitting, that his name might be stricken from the roll of attorneys, as a person unworthy to be a member of an honorable profession. The prisoner evi*dently felt deeply this rebuke,* but he maintained his composure.

Jessie King, convicted on one indictment for conspiracy, was sentenced to one year in the State prison. He seemed to be surprised, as he expected only to be fined. Sliker, the fraudulent bridge builder, was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, and to be confined for six months in the county jail. McDermott, the former member of the Common Council of the town of Phillipsburg, who was convicted on two indictments for conspiracy, was sentenced to the State prison for one year.

After the sentences had been pronounced, the friends of the condemned men gathered around them to say good-by. It was a sad scene. Then the prisoners were removed to their cells, and the throng dispersed.

"UNCLE" John Laing, the veteran Livery merchant, gave his little nieces and nephews a sleigh ride on Saturday, in one of his handsome turn-outs. George Butche, a trusted driver, handled the ribbons.

ABOUT 100 cars loaded with grain were lying on a side track at the lower end of the city on Wednesday last. The cars have been detained by the snow westward and are awaiting sidling room at Communipaw.

THE First Annual Meeting of the N. J. State Rifle Association will be held Friday, January 31st, inst., at 8 o'clock p. m., at McCoy's Hotel, No. 14 West Grand Street, (next to the Arcade Building,) Elizabeth, N. J. The Board of Directors will meet same day and place at 7:30 p. m.

ALBERT RANDOLPH struck Geo. Randolph over the head with a cane and Thomas Hamilton beat his wife. All the parties hail from Afric's clime, and Judge Good gave Hamilton a month in the County jail and $10 fine. Albert Randolph got 30 days and $25 fine. The trouble occurred Sunday night last.

THE new store building being built by the heirs of the Martin estate, corner of Second Street and Park Avenue, will present a handsome architectural appearance when completed. The upper, or second floor, is to be fitted up in neat style by Messrs. Suydam & Jackson, whose law offices will thereafter be found at that locality.

THE Alabama Minstrels and Jubilee Singers, composed of the best colored talent in the city, will give an entertainment at Laing's Hall next Tuesday evening. They are under the management of Messrs. Foster and Martin, and the pleasure-loving public are promised a first class entertainment. Prices of admission 25 and 35 cts.

Nathan Harper used to edit the Mt. Holly Herald. Nathan is now Mayor of Plainfield. Impressed with the ideas imbibed while in the editorial chair, he told everybody in Plainfield they must respect the Lord's day. Finding him in earnest, Plainfielders have toed the mark. And that's the kind of editors Mt. Holly turns out.—Bordentown Register

MR. JOHN I. HOLLY, of New York, and proprietor of the Holly Grove Stock Farm, at Plainfield, N. J., has purchased from Dr. W. A. Conover, proprietor of the Pohatcong Valley Farm, near this place, the thoroughbred Jersey cow "Princess of Warren," for $250; and a very choice Jersey heifer, not two years old, for the liberal price of $400 —Hackettstown Gazette.

ROCKFELLOW, the Grocer, informs us that he is prepared to sell from one, to five thousand pounds of fine dairy butter at 25 cents, an offer which should induce all lovers of good butter to call and see him. It is needless for any one to purchase their butter in New York, when they can get it delivered at their homes at New York prices. So say we. See his advertisement in another column.

PERSEVERANCE LODGE, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, will hold their next regular meeting, on Thursday evening, Feb. 6th, at their new Lodge room, Seile's building, over Reynolds' Drug Store, which has been newly painted and artistically decorated, thereby making it as pretty a Lodge room as the city can boast of. At the next meeting the 2nd and 3rd Rank will be conferred. A large number of visiting brethren are expected to participate on that evening.

THE young ladies of the Philomathean at the High School, propose holding their annual Reception, the evening of Feb. 21st. We understand that this Reception is expected to eclipse all former efforts of the young ladies, both in the make up of its programme and in its execution. Already the members of the Deliber, a rival society, have noticed sundry mysterious nods and giggles, and from this we may suppose that the "natives" are about to be astonished.

THE kettledrum of Mrs. Headley, at No. 11 West Forty-ninth street, this afternoon, was made highly attractive by the superb floral decoration of Mr. W. H. Brower, of No. 955 Broadway. A tea kettle of rare blossoms, and a large "T" woven in rich flowers, were the most prominent pieces. Thirty hand boquets and thirty boutonnieres of rare beauty gave out their fragrance and brightened the scene. The drawing rooms were festooned very gracefully with light strings of smilax. This is among the loveliest floral decorations of the season.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser, Saturday Jan. 25th.

MEETING of Board of Trade next Monday evening.

THE Plainfield Dramatic Reading Society will give an entertainment at Assembly Hall, on Thursday evening, Feb. 13th, the entire proceeds of which will be devoted to the Building Fund of the Muhlenberg Hospital.

On Wednesday evening next, Feb. 5th, the citizens of Dunellen will be treated to a pleasing entertainment in the M. E. Church, consisting of a concert and exhibition, the proceeds being for the benefit of the Sunday School. Admission 35 cents.

Special Meeting.

The Board of Directors of the "Central N. J. Game Protective Society" have ordered a Special meeting of the members of the Society to be called on the 11th day of February next, in the parlors of Chamberlain & DeCamp's Hotel, (formerly Laing's) in this city, at 8 p. m., at which it is earnestly desired that every member will be present, as business of importance will come before the meeting.

Y. M. C. A. Monthly Reception.

The Y. M. C. A. gave their third monthly reception Tuesday evening last, Jan. 28th. For this occasion Miss Kinsey, who has gained quite a reputation at Newark, was to have been the vocalist, but owing to sickness she was unable to be present. Her place, however, was acceptably filled by Mrs. L. de la Montayne, soprano of Grace Church; Mr. R. H. Meyland, of Brooklyn, Flute; Mr. E. L. Merriam, Organist of Westminster Church, Brooklyn, Piano, and Mr. R. Spice, Concertina, were the other artists, who, by their efforts, pleased the audience which so comfortably filled Assembly Hall. There was nothing elaborate on the programme but simple and thoroughly enjoyable selections. Mr. Spice, from his Concertina, could draw more music than we ever supposed could be confined in so small a compass. He is a master of his instrument, and not only that, but he has power of expression which could be but transfer to the piano or some other well ordered instrument, (for concertinas are always considered as nearly related to midnight serenades) his reputation would be made. The other gentlemen gave satisfactory evidence of their proficiency with the instruments of which they are believed to be masters.

Personalia.

Mr. James E. White, formerly engaged in the Dry Goods business in this city, has purchased a farm in Georgia, of Mr. J. M. Stiger, and removed thither with his family. Several other Plainfield persons have settled in the same State on tracts sold them by Mr. Stiger.

It is with regret we learn of the severe illness of Mr. John P. Bonnell, at his home in Green Village, N. J., at the same time we congratulate him upon his re-appointment as Harbor Master at Elizabethport. John is missed from among the throng at the legislative halls.

We see it stated that Capt. Wm. H. Gill, ex-assemblyman from Elizabeth, N. J., has removed to Washington, D. C., where he has received a government appointment. The Democracy of Union looses a good campaigner in this change.

Louis M. Stover, son of Councilman Stover, and his friend Mr. Wells Goodhue, we learn, reached Galveston, on Monday, the 20th inst, after a pleasant sea voyage, en route to Tilden, McMullen County, Texas, where they intend to engage in the business of sheep raising. They have our best wishes for success.

Belmont Perry, Esq., brother of Samuel E. Perry, Esq., of Flemington, who received the nomination for Clerk of the Senate by the Democrats at the opening of the present Legislature, has been appointed Prosecutor of the Pleas of Gloucester County by Gov. McClellan and confirmed by the Senate. Mercer Beasley, Jr., son of Chief Justice Beasley, was re appointed and confirmed for same position in Mercer County; also R. S. Jenkins, for same position in Camden, the able lawyer who concluded the Hunter case on part of the State.

Hon. John Dunn, of the First Assembly District of Union County, takes to the new duties imposed upon him in his position, as readily as a duck does to water. He is an earnest and eloquent debater, and will make his mark before the close of the session.

Geo. R. Marsh, Esq., is preparing to leave Plainfield and take up his residence in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he will engage in business pursuits.

Miss Olive L. Rogers' 3d Musical Recital.

Thursday evening, Jan. 23d, Miss Rogers' third and last Musical Recital was the event, and an event it was proven to be. When Plainfield had but so recently listened to the far-famed Boston Quintette, it seemed like a rather hazardous undertaking to put before the public so soon a programme that so nearly resembled it in its make-up. But Miss Rogers' entertainment did not suffer by the contrast in the least, indeed it would be hard work to make any discrimination or comparison between the two. The lady cannot take to herself too much credit for the success of this her venture, for indeed it was a decided venture. The lady has proved herself to possess outside of her musical abilities, forethought, judgment, energy, perseverance and, what might well be imitated by men, and indeed, what is supposed to be a manly quality alone, namely, pluck. There is nothing disgraceful in the word and certainly it fits not badly to a woman. All praise, we say, to the woman who in spite of what might seem to be almost discouraging prospects, still kept on her undertaking until she made it a success. In each of these three recitals has Miss Rogers' efforts been successful and notably so last Thursday. She had secured the services of the New York Philharmonic Club entire, and also of Mr. A. E. Stoddard, Baritone. Miss Hewlett, Soprano of the Crescent Ave. Church, also assisted her. The programme on this occasion of necessity presented greater variety than either of the other two, and thereby nothing at all tiresome or needless was noticeable. Miss Hewlett sang better we think than we have ever before heard her, and that is saying a great deal. Her rendering of "The Vision" by Lebour, was taste itself, and so pleasing to the audience that an encore was requested, which the lady kindly granted. She in no way did poorer in her rendering of the Sicilian Vespers by Verdi; her voice in this instance showed, we think, to great advantage. Mr. Stoddard was in good voice and sang "Praise the Lord," by George Rupes, in grand style. Mr. Stoddard bears the name of being the finest singer of sacred music in America, and we could not wonder how that title came to him. Of course he had to sing in response to an encore, that was a fore-ordained fact. The Violin in the hands of Mr. Richard Arnold verily talked, and this gentleman did not in any way wear out his welcome to Plainfield by his efforts on that occasion. The entire work of the Club was good, although they were crippled by the absence of their Double Bass, Mr. Wilhelm Lowack, who was detained by sickness. It was a source of disappointment to all, as by his absence the first piece on the programme, "The Dance of Death," had to be omitted. The Club is said to be particularly successful in the rendering of this piece. Too much can hardly be said in the praise of this Recital; but beyond all that we can say there remains the lasting impression on the minds of those who were so fortunate and wise as to be present, and the regrets of those who were not present, but will always wish they had been. We hope that Miss Rogers will find it convenient to again appear in like array next Winter, and we would suggest to her that Assembly Hall is not the best place in Plainfield for a Musical Recital. The difficulty experienced in the 1st and 2d Recitals was not as noticeable last Thursday, probably owing to the nature of the selections. The walls and ceiling of that room have the effect of stowing the sound in a way not entirely pleasant.

MR. R. R. DAVIS has been engaged by Wm. Marsh, Esq., to go to Cincinnati, Ohio, and perform some necessary repairs to the Gelt House, of which Mr. M. is the owner.

J. G. CADMUS, Esq., has embarked in the Real Estate business. His office is at Brock & Marsh's old stand, North Avenue, near depot.

The Press and the Legislature.

At the recent meeting of the N. J. Editorial Association at Trenton, there was considerable discussion among the editors regarding the action of the Legislature in always wanting to commence "reform" by cutting down printer's fees.

The subject of amateur printers was also discussed. As they are generally irresponsible persons, have no capital of any consequence employed in the business, pay no taxes, and ask no proper remuneration for their work, thereby injuring legitimate printing establishments, it was thought some legal action should be taken in reference to them. Among other suggestions it was thought that the best plan to deal with them was to require a license fee of fifty dollars from every job printing establishment in the State. The whole matter was finally referred to the Legislative Committee with power.

It was stated that a number of bills had already been introduced in the Legislature affecting the interests of newspaper publishers in an injurious manner, and that several others of the same general character had been proposed, and would doubtless be introduced at a later date in the session; that there seems to be a disposition on the part of some of the lawyers of the State to do what they can to injure the newspaper business, in order that they may have a better opportunity to impose upon their patrons and the public, by extortionate fees or otherwise taking advantage of their necessities; that they have taken advantage of the fact that there are a few demagogues in the Legislature who wish to make a little cheap capital out of the general desire for reform in the public expenditures, and who become willing tools in their schemes against the Press, which stands between them and the public they desire to fleece; that the proposed "reforms" of the demagogues in the Legislature begin and end with the schemes against the Press; that after they have done their worst against the Press the public will never hear any more from them about the great abuses which are eating up the people's substances, as nearly the entire Bench and Bar of the State are opposed to the reforms in question. The gentlemen who took part in the debate thought it was high time that the entire Press of the State were more united in defence of their own interests and those of the public, and that earnest war be made at once all along the line against the demagogues in and out of the Legislature. The laws referred to as they now stand are in the interest of the people, and are their sole protection against the cormorants who would rob them of their rights—the only defect being that they do not go far enough, and do not include the entire Press of the State, whether located at the county towns or in the smaller important villages in many of the counties. It was the universal opinion that the number of newspapers in which the public laws and legal notices are published should be extended instead of diminished as proposed, thereby affording the whole population an opportunity to become acquainted with such matters. It is the right of all that they should be so informed, as it is almost their only protection against fraud on the part of public officials and others transacting the business of the people, settling estates, looking after the interests of creditors, etc. The members of the Press demand nothing that cannot clearly be proved to be in the interests of the people generally more than it is their own, and upon this propose to join issue with the Legislature and all others interested. When they see the members of the Legislature in earnest in relation to reforming the great abuses that the people are laboring under, then they will be ready to assist and co-operate with them, even to reforming any abuses of the Press that can be proved to exist. But they do not intend to sit idly by and see their own business injured, and not make an earnest effort to defend their rights in the halls of legislation and elsewhere. They do not intend to be the only subjects of "reform," or even the first ones, without making an effort to know the reason why.—Many instances were given where lawyers attempted to cover up their own high charges under the plea to their clients that they were caused by the heavy advertising bills, when the fact was that the so-called "heavy advertising bills" did not form one-tenth of the lawyer's bill, while the service really performed by the Press was as great as that of the lawyer's. These legal frauds exist in nearly all of the counties of the State, and the members of the Press did not intend longer to submit in silence concerning them. The Press is performing a great work for the State, and feels abundantly able to defend its rights and privileges, and what is more they intend to do it hereafter.

It was stated that it was the belief of those present that only a small number of the members of the present Legislature were really opposed to the interests of the Press, but on the contrary were disposed to do it justice upon all occasions, and that all they desired was information in relation to the actual needs of the Press and its relations to the people, in order to vote wisely upon matters brought before them. The members of the Legislature generally were not inclined to follow the lead and become the tools of demagogues in their body, but ready to listen to facts and act accordingly. The members of the Press in the several counties were therefore requested to communicate directly with their own representatives, and explain the facts as they exist and the real needs of their own localities, which were in the main applicable to the whole State.

The debate was one of the most earnest and interesting that has ever occupied the attention of the Editorial Association, and we never saw more determination among the members to look closer after their rights than was manifested on this occasion. Finally the whole matter was referred to the Legislative Committee, with instructions to call upon every member of the Press of the State to aid them in the discharge of their duties, and to promptly assemble them at the Capitol or elsewhere, whenever the Committee though it was necessary to call upon them for counsel or assistance.

Taken to Morris Plains.

Considerable excitement has been manifested in our city during the past three days, in consequence of one of our citizens being taken to the Morris Plains Insane Asylum, by officers Dodd and Gillies, upon complaint of his wife and by advice of Dr. Tomlinson, who pronounced the subject insane. He was conveyed to the asylum on Friday Jan. 24th, and on Monday again appeared at his home in this city, having escaped from the institution by bribing a keeper with the gift of his watch chain. On Wednesday morning he ill-treated his wife and children, turned them out of doors, took a dose of laudanum, and then lay down, as he said, to die. Dr. Tomlinson was called, gave him a dose of ipecac and compelled him to disgorge the poison. Judge Good telegraphed to Morris Plains, and two officials came on here, took the alleged lunatic in custody, after a stout resistance, and again returned to the asylum with him. This is the main facts of the case, but columns could be filled regarding the unfortunate man's career and life. Out of respect to the family of the party, who have but lately removed here, and by the request of the wife herself, we suppress the name of the person interested.

Another libel suit against a newspaper has been decided. Some one who brought suit against the New York Times has been lucky enough to be awarded six cents damages.

For THE CONSTITUTIONALIST:

The Money Election.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

The present condition of our city affairs is anomalous. We have just elected a Council composed of men who were selected for their supposed ability to act firmly, intelligently, and conscientiously, upon the questions that might be brought before them; and yet upon the very first occasion that presented itself requiring a display of (that most essential of all qualities) "backbone," they have exhibited an indecision that seems to indicate that there is not one good sound specimen of that article amongst the eleven. It is a misfortune of the times that so few men holding public positions seem to have the "courage of their convictions." It would appear easy enough for any one to do what he believed to be right; and that a person selected by his fellow citizens to act in so modest a position as Councilman of a country city like ours, might be able to vote one way or the other upon the so-called "License question;" and yet these Councilmen do not seem to have had that ability, but have avoided the decision of the weighty matter by referring it to a vote of the people; and right here a great mistake has been made. If the people are to be called upon to decide whether licenses should or should not be granted, the question should have been placed before the electors squarely upon its merits. We are now called to vote upon two questions at once. The nominal question is—"Shall we be taxed to raise $5,000 additional for city expenses?" The real question is, "shall licenses be given?" A man who, like the writer, does not believe in prohibition, but does think the $5,000 should be granted, must vote against his convictions on the first question in order that he may vote for the second; while a man who does believe in prohibition, but does not think the $5,000 ought to be given, must vote against his convictions on the second question in order that he may vote for prohibition; thus no one is satisfied. Now I think the Council should follow the resolution they have adopted, and, first, give a license to every one who "complies with the law." 2d. Declare that the money thus accruing to the Treasury should constitute a special fund, to be employed in the payment of extra policemen, to arrest of fenders, and to the mitigation of the poverty and wretchedness which result from dram-drinking. It has always seemed to me wrong to use any part of the money resulting from such a source for general city purposes. To use the words of my excellent friend, John W. Murray, "It is a disgrace to the people of Plainfield that they should be willing to pay the expenses of their city with money that should have been used to buy food and other comforts for the hungry and comfortless wives and children of those who frequent our rum shops." Having thus done, let the Council submit the question of raising extra money by tax to the people, and I feel sure that the voters who placed this Council in office will grant them whatever reasonable amount they may decide to be necessary to run the city with. I see only one good feature in the proposition as it stands. It is said that a man's devotion to a principle is to be properly measured only by the sacrifice he is willing to make for its maintenance. The resolution of Councilman Stover has placed our prohibitionists squarely in the breach. They have now a good opportunity to play the Spartan, and to vote to pay out their money in behalf of their principles. They ought to thank him heartily, (and I have no doubt they do,) for giving them the chance. But I think every other voter should vote against them.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

I notice in the issue of your local journal of the 24th inst., a card from Chas. H. Hand, in which he embraces the opportunity to thank his "many friends who so kindly done all they could for him while under arrest," and at the same time calling the public in judgment upon the acts of Mr. Noah W. Pike who tried to befriend him while imprisoned; as the following facts will prove: In August last, Mr. Pike invited me to Coney Island, and while en route enlisted my sympathies in young Hand's behalf, representing him to be a Fireman and good citizen of your city; and although the charge against him was a serious one, still I became interested and left myself open to any assistance I could render my friend Pike in the case. A few days afterwards he called and informed me that the friends of Hand had failed to secure his release from jail, and asked me to go on the bail bond, which I did, being indemnified by security of $1,000 from Mr. Pike. For over five months this man has enjoyed his liberty through the influence of Mr. Pike, and because he chose to exercise his legal right to surrender him on the day of his trial, Hand rushes into print and insinuates that Mr. Pike has been guilty of some dishonorable act. He has no gratitude to express to his benefactor who for five months at the risk of $1,000 gave him his liberty, and kept him out of prison. He evidently does not appreciate or realize the extent of the obligation Mr. Pike incurred during this time. And now, in conclusion, I have only to say that with my knowledge of the zeal of Mr. Pike in the cause of Hand, and with the amount of money expended from his private purse unreturned, that for real works in behalf of a fellow man, he is entitled to great credit, while the letter of Hand is one in which the spirit of ingratitude could not be more distinctly expressed.

Very Respectfully,

CHAS. F. ALLEN.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

I must refrain from offering an insult to the keen sense of so intelligent a public; therefore, any notice further than this apology for being caught a victim to such base ingratitude, will not be taken of Mr. Hand's communication to your last issue.

"Avaunt! thou thing infernal!
Extract of baseness! essence of blackness!
Ergot of meanness! concentrated poison!
Spawn of the adder! fuel of hell!
Thy breath is pestilence! thy touch is palsy!
Damning ingratitude!"

FIRE MATTERS.

NARROW ESCAPE OF POPE BROS. DRY GOODS STORE.

About half past 11 o'clock, Wednesday night last, two of our citizens, Messrs. Chas. B. Clifton and Cap. Geo. Mehl, discovered smoke issuing from the basement of Pope Bros. Store, on the Somerset Street side.—Upon investigation they found that the interior of the basement was on fire in the carpet and oil cloth department. An alarm was promptly given, which soon brought the Fire Department to the scene. At one time it looked as though the whole building was doomed, and surrounding property endangered, as the steamers were delayed in procuring water from the fire well on the corner of Front and Somerset Streets, adjoining the store, in consequence of the well cover being frozen to its bed. No. 1 steamer and Warren hand engine was sent to the mill race in the rear of the store and No. 2 to the brook at the "Blue Front," and soon there were four streams of water pouring into the basement. During the interval of the engines getting to work the members of Zephyr H. & L. Co., No. 1, rendered valuable assistance in keeping the fire down with buckets of water until the streams were brought to bear on the same.—The firemen, one and all, worked hard to subdue the flames, which originated among a pile of carpet lining and summer goods stored in the basement, and succeeded after an hour's hard work. The store of Pope Bros. above was filled with smoke and the goods sustained therein considerably damaged. They estimate their loss at $3,500, Insured for $12,000, as follows: Philadelphia Fire Association, $1,500; Importers & Traders, N. Y., $2,000; Firemens, Newark, $2,000; American, Newark, $1,500; Washington, Plainfield, $1,000. $2,000 in the Philadelphia Fire Insurance Co. runs out to-day (Friday) at noon. Above Pope Bros. store was the Dime Saving's Bank, and Washington Insurance Co's. office, B. F. Webster and J. M. Mather's Insurance Offices, while in the third story was located the Times office. An adjustment of the various insurances is in progress as we go to press. The extinguishing of the fire was another instance of the efficient services of our valuable fire department. The origin of the fire is unknown.

THANKS

Are due and hereby tendered the Firemen of this city for the prompt manner in which they stayed the progress of the fire in the basement of our store on the night of the 29th inst.

POPE BROS.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

[Under the above head we shall endeavor each week to give items and news of interest to the lovers of fishing, gunning, trotting, athletic and other sports. We shall be pleased to receive contributions or items for this column from all interested in such matters].

We learn that Mr. R. R. Robertson, a member of the "Central N. J. Game Protective Society" is about stocking grounds near Scotch Plains, N. J., with 100 Western quail. The birds will receive the proper protection necessary from members of the Society.

Catching crows for those who indulge in shooting matches, is followed quite extensively in the vicinity of Burlington. The birds are worth ten cents a piece. While there is so much snow on the ground the crows find it difficult to get enough to eat. The scarcity of provender makes them less cautious and they are easily caught in a trap.

The Hunterdon Independent says that T. G. Miller, a merchant in Bridgeton, on the Delaware, (opposite Milford,) has purchased this season over 2,000 rabbits, about 50 pheasants, and 500 quails, and about 350 muskrat skins. This game was caught principally in Nockamixon, which district is inhabited by many poor people, and it is a source of considerable revenue to them these hard times.

One of the school boys of Atlantic City has killed 83 ducks this Winter. He goes out in the evening after school, and seldom fails to bring down a pair of black ducks.

John Lind, a Newark boy, has just finished a walk of fifty miles in nine hours and fifty minutes, without a break, "for record."

Dealers of game in New Jersey complain bitterly of the present game laws in that State, which, as they allege, discriminate against them and in favor of dealers in N. Y. The New Jersey laws provide that no one shall expose for sale any gray, black or fox squirrel between the 1st of January and the 1st of July under a penalty of $5 for each animal; that no one shall expose for sale any rabbit between the 1st of January and the 1st of November under a penalty of $5 for each rabbit; that no person shall expose for sale any plover between the 1st of January and the 1st of August under a penalty of $10 for each bird; that no person shall expose for sale any quail or partridge or grouse between the 1st of January and the 1st of November under a penalty of $15 for each bird. In this State, on the other hand, it is asserted dealers are allowed to sell birds until March 1, and in consequence people in New Jersey who wish to purchase game, being unable to get it there, come to this city for it. The game New Jersey dealers would sell is Western game, as the bulk of the supplies are drawn from the West after January, the New Jersey game coming into market earlier; but no matter where the game may be procured, the New Jersey dealers are not allowed to sell it. The other day a man came to market in Newark with a load of rabbits, and, although he had a bill of sale with him to show he had bought the animals in this city, he was not allowed to sell them there. The New Jersey dealers demand that they be placed on an equal footing with dealers in New York, and it is proposed to seek relief from the Legislature.

The above is taken from the N. Y. Herald of the 24th inst. The proper way to adjust the matter is for the State of New York to make the close season end Jan. 1st, the same as in this State.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

About six o'clock, on the morning of Tuesday last, our quiet village was suddenly awakened by the sounding of steam whistles, ringing of bells, and the yelling of men. At this hour of the morning many of our inhabitants are enjoying their sound and most refreshing sleep, but such an unusual commotion as this did not fail to arouse them and convey to them the fact that a dread alarm of fire was sounding. The "Excelsior" Truck boys with their accustomed promptness was the first to be out, and in a short space of time were hauling the truck with its attachments towards the scene of conflagration with a speed that would have done credit to a city steamer drawn by trained horses. Arriving at the fire, they found that the barn of Warren Ackerman, corner Mountain Avenue and Jerusalem road, was on fire and so far consumed that no efforts could save the buildings. The barn was an old one and partly filled with corn stalks and farming implements, the latter of which had been removed in time to save them. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary.

Mrs. Jarley exhibited her world renowned Wax Figures, as per advertisement on Wednesday evening last, at Academy Hall. It is needless to say that everything passed off in a manner which did credit to all concerned, and without making any special mention of the figures, individually, let it suffice that the machines performed their parts as only machines can, and save an occasional "running down" in the midst of a performance, and other disorders that was easily remedied by the application of a lubricator at hand, prepared by Mrs. Jarley expressly for that purpose, there was nothing to mar the perfect smoothness of the whole program. A full house greeted the performance and a considerable sum was realized. This is to benefit the Helping Hand. May Mrs. Jarley come again.

The Minstrel Troupe of which notice was given last week, are still at work rehearsing, and will give a grand entertainment on the evening of Friday, Feb. 14th. May they have a full house, as their object is a worthy one.

On last Monday afternoon a large crowd gathered at Brittin's Hotel to witness a trot for two prizes, in the shape of blankets, offered by Col. Brittin. The following were the entries:

Billy Button and Running Mate	by G. Smalley
Lady Pilot (driven by P. Osborn,)	" H. Runyon.
Captain Westbrook	" A. Smalley.
Pauline	" G. Scudder.

The course was from Terrill Road to the Hotel. Billy Button and mate won the 1st, 2nd, and 4th heats and the race, carrying off the first prize, a blanket and hood. Lady Pilot took the third heat and made a dead heat with the team on the fourth and secured the other blanket. Pauline was withdrawn after the first heat. On the conclusion of the race Col. Brittin entertained the drivers and judges at a bountiful collation. The whole affair was a success.

This is what the Newark Journal thinks of it:

"Plainfield has a nut to crack, and we advise an immediate descent upon that city of all temperance societies in the State, with Francis Murphy at their head. Never was the question of license brought so squarely to an issue. Plainfield is in want of just five thousand dollars more than the tax levy provides for. It can be raised in two ways, either by an extra levy or by licensing hotel and other bar-rooms. It is a dollar apiece all around or rum. "Pay up or shut up," just as they please. This is one of the most beautiful, moral and religious towns in the State, but the quality of its Christianity has never been put to so severe a test. We do not know whether the line of East and West Jersey runs through Plainfield, but it looks like it. One part of the city of Plainfield receives favors in the shape of benefits which another part is deprived of. The complainants consider it an unjust distribution of the revenue, and are, many of them, in favor of going back to the principal of licensing hotels, that enough may be collected to give all the people what now is given to only a few. The next meeting of the Plainfield City Council promises to be a lively one, with this nut to crack."

NEW JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

TRENTON, Jan. 28, 1879.

In the Senate a bill was introduced establishing county courts in all counties having a population of 30,000 and over, the presiding judge to be a counsellor of at least three years' standing, receiving no fees, but whose salary shall be as follows:—In counties between 30,000 and 40,000 population, $1,500; between 40,000 and 50,000, $2,000; between 50,000 and 70,000 $2,500; counties of 70,000, $3,000, and an additional $500 for each additional 10,000 of population. The county clerk is to be the clerk of such court. The jurisdiction of the County Court will be the same as that which the several Courts of Common Pleas now have. The judges will be appointed by joint meeting.

The bill for the erection of monuments and statues was passed, as was also the bill which provides that hereafter the Courts of Oyer and Terminer and General and Quarter Sessions of Somerset county shall consist of one judge and two lay judges.

In the House there was nothing but routine business of no public importance. A bill has been introduced to repeal the act which appropriates $3,000 per annum to the State Agricultural Society for premiums; also one which requires all public printing to be done in two papers—one of them German—in all the cities; and another that the selection of newspapers in the State to publish the laws shall be made by the joint meetings, and another to allow boards of aldermen in all cities of 12,000 inhabitants to designate the newspapers which shall do the public printing.

In the Senate this afternoon the following bills were introduced:—

Supplemental to the act relating to the municipal authorities managing waterworks to assess by area instead of frontage.

For the employment of stenographers in orphans' courts in particular cases upon the approval of the presiding judge.

To require the Board of Freeholders to provide a workhouse in each county, and to put the county prisoners to work.

To provide places for morgues and for the appointment of morgue keepers in the several counties, to hold office for three years.

To make the salary of the Clerk of Chancery $4,000 per annum, without fees.

To authorize the issue of bonds for the improvement of Kerney Township, in Hudson county.

To provide for the appointment of a commissioner to prepare a system of general laws for the government of municipalities.

The bill requiring the judge of a court when the sentence of death is pronounced to appoint a jury to view the execution of the sentence and report, and also to limit the number of persons who shall witness such execution, was passed.

In the House the following bills were introduced:—

To fix the salary of the Clerk of Chancery at $6,000 with a few fees, the Vice Chancellor to receive $5,000 and no fees, the Chief Justices $6,000 and $2 for hearing every cause, $1 for signing every judgment and $2 for hearing any demurrer; the Associate Judges $5,000 each, with the same fees as the Chief Justice; no fees to be paid in the Supreme Court, but only in Circuit Courts.

To make the compensation of judges of inferior courts $5 per diem for every day's actual service at court.

To authorize every association of veterans in the late war to have camp equipage, stores, &c.

A resolution was lost to appoint a committee of five members and three Senators to provide for the calling of a constitutional convention.

A bill was passed substituting registered for coupon bonds of the indebtedness of Newark; also, the libel bill, confining prosecutions to the county where the alleged libellous matter was published.

A lengthy discussion ensued on a motion to strike out the enacting clause of a bill which provides for the release of bonds from mortgage indebtedness. The motion to strike out was lost by a vote of 20 to 24. In the event of the passage of this bill a mortgagor can take the property for his claim, but cannot follow the bond. The bill was laid over for one week.

The Committee on Municipal Corporations have under consideration the bill authorizing the erection of a railroad bridge at Washington street, Jersey City. The project meets with considerable opposition, and the committee have resolved to hear all parties pro and con on Monday afternoon at three o'clock.

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS.

The New Brunswick Fredonian says: "The mortality among New Jersey newspapers during the past year has been quite large, and especially among newspapers of several year's standing, including five in Newark. About as many more were started in this State during the past year, which made brave efforts to get a foot-hold, but were obliged to give up the ghost before the year came to an end. There are probably fifteen or twenty more papers in this State which are "on their last legs" and which must suspend publication soon. These are truly hard times for newspapers, and only the more substantial can weather the gale. It is safe to say that at least one-half of the newspapers in the State are not paying their running expenses to day, and the same may be truthfully said of the condition of the press throughout the entire country."

The New Jersey Historical Society held its annual meeting in the rooms of the Board of Trade, Trenton, on Thursday, 23rd inst. In addition to the usual routine of business at this meeting, there was an address on the life and character of the late Joseph Henry, L. L. D., Secretary of the Smithsonian Institute, by Prof. J. C. Moffatt, of Princeton, who was long and intimately associated with Dr. Henry in the College of New Jersey.

The twenty-fourth annual report of the Board of Trustees of the New Jersey State Normal School, is before us. There has not been quite as large an attendance as during the previous year, because of measles in the School last Spring. MISCELLANEOUS READING.

OUR AMERICAN MAGAZINES.

The marvelous beauty of the illustrated magazines of this country is attracting attention throughout the world. The edition of SCRIBNER in England has doubled within a few months. The London correspondent of the New York Times says: "The whole lot of magazine annuals (English) put together, are not equal in pictorial art to a single number of SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY." But the price at which our magazines are sold is even a greater marvel. For example, a single number of SCRIBNER, "The Midwinter Number," just issued, has a full-page frontispiece Portrait of Emerson, of rare excellence, and contains one hundred and sixty pages of letter-press, with more than seventy illustrations; many of which are works of art such as before the advent of SCRIBNER appeared only in gift-works and purely art magazines, and yet it is sold for 35 cents. It would be difficult to find an illustrated book to match it at $5. The subscribers for the current year, get, in SCRIBNER, not only four of these full-paged portraits of American Poets, and nearly two thousand pages of text (equal to 5,000 book pages) of the choicest current literature, with more than 1,000 illustrations, including a completed novel, "Haworth's," by Mrs. Burnett, but shorter stories, poems, reviews, descriptions of travel, biographical sketches, etc., and also the splendid series of papers and pictures of exploration in the great South American empire of Brazil, delivered free of postage, and all for four dollars.

In Children's Periodicals, too, America leads the world with ST. NICHOLAS. Prof. Proctor, the astronomer, writes from London: "What a wonderful magazine it is for the young folks! Our children are quite as much delighted with it as American children can be. I will not say they are more delighted, as that may not be possible." ST. NICHOLAS is sold for 25 cents a number, and fourteen numbers (November, 1878 to 1880) are given for $3.

At first glance one would say, literature, art, and cheapness can no further go—but in this country intelligence is so widespread, and artistic culture is so extended, that there is scarcely any end to the demand for such magazines as SCRIBNER'S for grown-ups and ST. NICHOLAS for children, and, as the sale of these publications increases their conductors will no doubt continue to add new features of excellence and attraction.

A NEW IDEA IN TEMPERANCE.

C. T. Campbell, a prominent Temperance advocate, in a recent lecture at Maysville, Ky., got off the following, which is certainly something new and out of the beaten path of ordinary lectures on that subject:

"Barkeepers in this city pay, on an average, $2 per gallon for whiskey.—One gallon contains an average of sixty-five drinks, and at ten cents a drink the poor man pays $6.50 per gallon for his whiskey. In other words, he pays $2 for the whiskey and $4.50 to a man for handing it over the bar. Make your wife your barkeeper. Lend her $2 to buy a gallon of whiskey for a beginning and every time you want a drink go to her and pay her ten cents for it. By the time you have drank a gallon she will have $6.50, or enough money to refund the $2 borrowed of you, $2 to pay for another gallon of liquor, and have a balance of $2.50. She will be able to conduct future operations on her own capital, and when you become an inebriate, unable to support yourself, shunned and despised by all respectable persons, your wife will have enough money to keep you until you get ready to fill a drunkard's grave."

USEFUL TO THE HOUSEWIFE.

TO MAKE RUGS OF FUR AND FEATHER SKINS.

"What are all those odd-looking spots against the side of your wood-house, Emily?" said our inquisitive sister, as she stood looking toward the rear premises of our little country home.

"They are to my fertile imagination elegant foot and coach rugs, carriage and sofa ditto, soft driving mittens, and perhaps a set of sleigh robes, if Rob sends me one more buffalo-skin from the plains," I replied, laughing.

"Nonsense!" said she; but when I had taken her to my pretty sitting-room, which I had fitted up in true Oriental style, with stained floor, on which were distributed various elegant-looking rugs, soft afghans on the lounges, and a center mat of leopard-skin, she no longer scoffed at the idea of the small skins which a woman may easily handle being made into articles of artistic beauty and real utility.

I do this by preserving every skin that comes within my reach—even tiny mole-skins, the breasts of various fowls, and other small animals that come into my house, as is common in the country.

These I proceed with as follows: First, remove the legs and other ragged portions of the skin, and place it in tepid water, softened with a little sal-soda and soap, then cut away all fleshy pieces, and soak in warm water for two hours longer.

Next, for each pair of skins of the size of a sheep or dog, take half pound of salt and half a pound of alum, dissolve in one gallon of hot soft water, then stir into a tubful of cold water, in which soak the skins for a night, then hang over a fence to drain, after which nail them to a board or frame building, stretching and pulling each one while drying. While still damp, turn the flesh side out and cover with a mixture of alum and saltpetre (finely pulverized), or powdered quicklime, rubbing well in with a scrubbing-brush; then fold them together, pile one skin upon another and place them in the shade for three days, changing the position daily, so that the lower ones are on the top.

Next, taking each one on a piece of board or common table, scrape off all the loose rough skin, and, if not perfectly clean and free from flesh, again sprinkle with the alum, etc. When clean, have a quantity of powdered pumice or rotten-stone, and with a piece of chamois-skin, a soft pad, or the hand, give the surface a thorough rubbing, when it will become perfectly smooth and soft.

Now if a handsome rug is to be made, all that remains to be done is to acquire the art of sewing fur properly, which merely requires the edges to be cut evenly with a sharp knife, such as shoemakers use taking care merely to divide the skin and not cut into the fur. Make the hair to run in one direction, and keep it well away from the under side, and sew with "over-stitching" very closely. Small pieces no larger than a fifty-cent piece may thus be inserted into a large skin, and by using dark brown spots in a tawny foundation, or black in white, beautiful effects are obtained. Lined with soft old ingrain carpeting, heavy rugs are made, which, finished on the edges with a scalloped border of scarlet flannel pinked out around the edge, make handsome floor covers.

Bird skins should be carefully wiped and sprinkled with pulverized alum and salt in equal parts, then placed two together (the skin sides contiguous) for a night, when, if gently wiped and brushed, all fleshy skin will disappear, then a little arsenic should be sprinkled over, and the skins placed in a cool, airy closet for a day. The surface may then be sponged off, and, when dry, be gently rubbed with pulverized pumice, using the fingers instead of a pad.

Such skins are well suited for a sofa afghan, and by saving the breasts of fowls possessing handsome plumage, one of large size may be secured in a few months; while in places where birds are obtained in large quantities the finest skins may be thus treated, and made into articles at once elegant and useful.

Single feathers of rare beauty, such as those from the cardinal grosbeck, peacock, millard duck, etc., may be arranged in figures and sewed on a muslin foundation and then lined, making handsome rugs, lambrequins, and other similar household articles.—Harper's Bazar.

CELERY.

Our own experience is that nearly all the giant, or tall kinds of celery are unprofitable to raise. Not only does their culture entail twice the labor, but they are almost always wanting in solidity and flavor. While some hundreds of acres of celery are now grown for the market of New York, the kinds are mainly the half dwarf Sandringham. The Boston Market variety has never been a favorite for the New York market, as its tendency to throw up suckers, or side shoots, considered the merit of that variety in Boston, makes it objectionable here. Hood's dwarf red is the best variety of celery in cultivation, but the American public, with few exceptions, will not use red celery, while in England it is highly valued, as it should be, for it is not only much better flavored than the white sorts, but it keeps better; and surely when used as an ornamental vegetable, as celery often is, its bright crimson and white color make it more attractive than the white.

MAKING CELLARS SECURE.

One-tenth of the time spent in banking up cellars will suffice to put the foundation wall in a condition to totally exclude the frosts from the cellar. Cellar windows should be double, with tight-fitting frames and sashes. These windows can be opened on mild days in winter especially towards the south, thus giving ventilation a part of and light all the time. It is much more agreeable to be able to enter your cellar at any time without a light, than to go around with a lamp. A well-lighted cellar is very likely to be a clean one, while a dark cellar is generally (if not always) damp, dirty, disagreeable and decidedly unwholesome.—N. Ritter, Onondaga County, N. Y.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

SEMINOLE'S DEFIANCE.

Bless with your serried columns!—Injun no more bend the knee and white man's shackle shall no more bind Injun's arm. I've sealed it with the thunder when the tempest muttered low, and when it falls something must drop, as the pale-face says. I've scared you in the city. I've lifted your hair on the plain, and Injun is still carrying on the same business at the old stand; your patronage respectfully solicited; satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. I scorn your proffered treaty, because those fellows at Washington are a gang of scalawags who would rob Injun's squaw of her last blanket and turn it over to the Government and collect $150 for it. Oh, no indeed! Revenge is stamped upon my spear, as you will see if you examine it closely, and "blud" my battle cry.

Some strike for hope of booty, some to defend their all, but I do not do that kind of business. I battle for the joy I have in seeing the white man bite the dust. Ye've trailed me through the forest, ye've trailed me o'er the stream, but the first thing you know some of you won't know nothing; for I stand as should the warrior, with his rifle and his spear, or his shot gun and meat axe, as the case may be; also the scalp of vengeance still is red and warns you to look a little for your top-knot.

Think ye to find my homestead? I gave it to the fire, and I didn't have it insured for twice its value either. But, should ye seeks life's nourishment, enough I have and good—I live on hate, with just enough of white man's fire water to keep up the circulation.—Please excuse my candor, but I loathe you with my bosom, I scorn you with mine eye, and I think you are, on a general average, the doggondest dead-beat and low-lived skinflint that I have met in a month's travel. I ne'er will ask for quarter, and I ne'er will be your slave, but I'll swim the sea of slaughter till my eyes stick out like ink bottles. Ugh, big Injun eat railroad iron!—Oil City Derrick.

A boy about ten who had been caught out in the soaking rain and well drenched, was standing in the doorway wiping his eyes and nose by turns, when a second lad about his own age came along feeling a good deal worse. "What ails you?" sobbed the second, as he halted and looked the other over. "I—I got all wet, and I've l—lost a cent!" was the reply. "Is that all?" indignantly demanded the first; "then you'd better run home—you hain't got no right to cry!" "But you are crying too!" "I—I know it, but my father run for office yesterday and g—got left. When I cries I have suthin' to cry about—suthin' that effects the hull fam'ly!"

Most people, in cleansing lamp chimneys, use either a brush made of bristles twisted into a wire or a rag on the point of a scissors. Both of these are bad, for without great care, the wire or scissors will scratch the glass, as a dimond does, which under the expansive power of heat soon breaks, as all scratched glass will. If you want a neat little thing that costs nothing and will save half your glass, tie a piece of soft sponge the size of your chimney to a pine stick.

Miss Susan and Miss Rachael Reischenbouch, of Providence, R. I., were the first ladies for a long time who found under the bed, the man for whom the sex so constantly looks. He was hauled out and tried for going in. It cannot be denied that the number of men found under beds is totally disproportioned to the number of women looking for him, and it is encouraging that at last he has been found.

"Every man should provide liberally for his family," says Mr. Smith. "Ever since my marriage I have kept my wife provided with a sewing machine, surmounted by a fine mirror." "What is the mirror for?" inquired a person present. "Well," said the oracle, "I tell her that when she gets so lazy she can't run the machine, she can sit there and see herself starve to death."

It is the man who stays out at the lodge late at night who most feelingly sings, "Home, Sweet Home."—N. Y. Herald.

POETRY.

TEN YEARS AGO.

Ten years ago, when she was ten,
I used to tease and scold her;
I liked her, and she loved me then,
A boy, some five years older.

I liked her, she would fetch my book,
Bring lunch to stream or thicket,
Would oil my gun or bait my hook,
And field for hours at cricket.

She'd mend my cap, or find my whip,
Ah! but boys' hearts are stony!
I liked her rather less than gyp,
And far less than my pony.

She loved me then, then heaven knows why,
Small wonder half she hated.
For scores of dolls she's had to cry
That I decapitated.

I tore her frocks, I pulled her hair,
Called red the sheen upon it;
Out fishing I would even dare
Catch tadpoles in her bonnet.

Well, now I expiate my crime:
The Nemesis of fables
Came after years: to-day old Time
On me has turned the tables.

I'm twenty-five, she's twenty now,
Dark-eyed, pink-cheeked and bony,
The curls are golden round her brow;
She smiles, and calls me Johnny.

Of yore I used her Christian name,
But now, through fate or malice,
When she is by, my lips can't frame
Five letters to make Alice.

I, who could joke with her, and tease,
Stand silent now before her;
Dumb, through the very wish to please—
A speechless shy adorer.

Or if she turns to me to speak,
I'm dazzled by her graces;
The hot blood rushes to my cheek,
I babble commonplaces.

She's kind and cool—ah! heavens knows how
I wished she blushed and faltered;
She likes me, and I love her now;
Dear, dear! how things have altered!

ZEKE AND HIS POLLY.

HOW A COUNTRYMAN PROPOSED TO ENJOY HIS WEDDING TRIP.

"Jest ye fellers fall right back an' let a body out, or there'll be music," he replied to the army of hack drivers at the depot, dragging his bride through the crowd, to the infinite danger of her slender arm. "I'm a man that reads the newspapers and I know all about ye and yer low lived tricks on strangers. Ye may skin sum folks but ye don't rob me without a rumpus," and leading his timid partner to the other side of the street, he told her to freeze to the hitchen-post while he went to look after the baggage. He soon struck a bargain with a hand expressman, and after helping him with the trunk into the cart, and trying the key in lock to make sure he had the right one, he told the sable propeller to keep him in sight, and giving him to understand that if he undertook to "scoot up any back alley with that 'ere box, he'd never live to see specie resumption," he went back to his Polly and found her in tears, frightened almost out of her senses by a crowd of boys and express drivers gathered around her, engaged in a vociferous competitive test as to who should have the honor of conducting her to her destination. Her gallant groom recovered the basket from a couple of fellows who were trying to make it go in two directions at the same time, and choking the boy until he gave up the satchel, he shoved his hat over till it rested on his right ear, took the basket in the other, and telling Polly to wipe her eyes and come along, or everybody at the tavern would think she wasn't happy, they set off up Plum Street. By this time the darkey had got half the way up the hill, and fully believing that they were about to lose the trunk, which contained all the store clothes of both parties they set off on a dead gun with a dozen small boys and three dogs, chasing in the rear—the boys filling the air, with remarks suited to the occasion, punctuated by the barks of the curs.

"Hold on thar! ye long-legged, black skinned rustabout!" yelled the enraged bridegroom, bounding thirty feet ahead of his companion. "Drop that 'ere trunk, or I'll break every solitary bone in yer old Injun-rubber carkiss, ye livered colored son o' darkness!"

The darkey, hearing a hub-bub in the rear looked round, saw the commotion, and stopped the wagon, until the breathless couple came up, the bride gasping and crying, and wished she was home.

By some special providence they at length brought up at the Grand Hotel, made their way into the exchange, and asked the porter and pretty much everybody else if the landlord was about, and then seeing a benign old gentleman with silver hair and beard, passing the tiling with head downward and hands under his coattails—

"There he is now," said Zeke, and to him they at once made their way, and set down their traps at his toes.

"I say, 'Mister Grand,' what's the show for a few days' board and lodgin' with ye? We have no team to look arter. Just our two selves—kim in on the keers.

"There's the man you want to see," said 'Mister Grand,'" pointing to the desk.

"Well, I'm real downright glad to see ye," said Zeke to the clerk. "How's things been movin' along with ye—and I say—what d'ye think?—we want to tie with ye for a spell, if yer prices is reasonable. Polly an' me has just been gittin' spliced, and seein' as she's never 'nocked around the world any to speak of, I just thought we'd kim down to see the fountain, an' the bridge, an' have a peep at the animals in the garden, with the jaw-breakin' names, an' see how prices stood on house-keepin' traps. There ain't much style about us, an' so you needn't go to any trouble on our account. We can eat jest whatever ye set before yer reg'lar boarders, so it's fresh an' the vittles ain't too high seasoned. We both take milk and sugar in our coffee, an' if it's just as handy, we'd like to have it three times a day. We'd like to have a carpet, handy to the pump—for I may not be around all the time, and Polly's so shy she'd mos' likely git dry as a herrin' afore she'd venture out to git herself a drink, if she couldn't see the well from the winder. We're not partic'lar what time we have our meals, an' wouldn't want ye to make no change in our account. Our time ain't pressin,' and we can easy fix our program to suit the rules of the house. We'd like to eat at the fust table, if it won't interfere with the rest of the arrangements, an' if you should all happen to be gone to bed when we git home from the theatre, we can go round to the back door or climb in at the winder—if ye have a room down stairs. Polly will make the bed, of course, and sweep out the room herself, so if the hired gal want's to run over and see her mother, I don't know as we'll raise any objections, pervided she gets back in time to peel the pertaters for dinner. If there's any shindig comin' off in the house while we're with ye, we won't mind slingin' a heel in it, but then I don't mean to insinuate that ye ought to git up a dance on account of our comin'. We're both young and like fun, but we don't want to have a good time at anybody else's expense. I've got plenty of money with me, and I intend to pay as I go—still we're not big feelin', and if ye have any extra cheap tickets we're not above acceptin' a few, as I b'lieve tavern keepers often has a few [illegible] with such consarns, 'specially if the show [illegible] up with 'em."

"We shall want to commence eatin' in the mornin', and ye won't have to keep the table waitin' for us at any meal. If we're not here every time the bell rings, go right along an' dish up, an' we'll take our chances with whatever cold vittles the cook can shake up when we git round. No—we shan't want any supper to-night; we've got two whole chickens, the best part of a duck, six or eight pies, a whole raft o' tarts, pickels an' things, an' seven different kinds o' cake in our basket here, left from our lunch on de kears, an' if ye'll jist step out an' git us a tincup o' water, we'll sit down here presently an' eat our bite, an' if ye'd like to polish them store teeth o' your'n in a little prime country cookin', yer welcome to join right in with us, an' what we don't git away with ye can lay out before the boarders to-morrow.

"But to come right down to business—for I see by the way Polly's bitin' her lip—an' thinkin' o' home, that them 'ere new shoes is jest e'en a'most kill'n her, an' she'd give her last winter's bonnet to have them burnin' feet o'hern in the hoss trough—so now the question, what'll ye tax us for a week's keepin', includin' the washin' of a shirt an' handkerchief for me, an' a little toggery for Polly? There won't be any mendin', ye know, for our traps is all bran new; but we'll want a snack o' cold meat an' biscuit to take along sometime when we go to see the sights an' to the theatre. An' there, ye've got it all now, how much be ye goin' to charge for a week's keepin'?"

"Seventy five dollars," said the clerk, disposing of a peach with neatness and dexterity.

"Great jimson-weed and plow-shares! What air ye thinkin' about, man? We only want to stay a week—not all winter, said Zeke, leaning over the counter with eyes as big as the clerk's diamond pin.

"I told you correctly, sir. Seventy-five dollars is the charge, not including extras."

"Mighty burr-oak!" said Zeke, turning to Polly. "Did you ever! The price o' three cows for a week's sleepin' an' eatin'. The man is crazy an' thinks I want to buy the house, or else somebody's told him just how much I've got an' he wants the hull pile. Kim along, let's get out o' here, or if we stay ten minutes longer we won't git away wid the chickens."—Cin. Breakfast Table.

FOR THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

"GOOD-BYE."

BY "CAUSIDICUS."

A little word of but two syllables, and yet what a world of significance they contain! A word familiar in both the hovel and mansion; sometimes causing the deepest pangs of sorrow, and yet at times the most infinite pleasure. The word made use of by the laborer, who simply goes to his employment to return in a few hours; the good-byes of schoolmates taking their vacation. There are cases when the good-bye is not necessary; but when Amyas Leigh sailed westward, when Raleigh crossed the then so perilous ocean, when travelers were not secure twenty miles from London, when every wind knocked from rickety roofs tiles, and here and there a chimney pot, then in those brave and merry old days the friends who parted were ill assured of meeting again; and then it was that the parting salute was of necessity. God be with ye! We are safer now, and perhaps we are given to throwing our religion to the background more than did our ancestors of three or four centuries ago. At any rate the old form of parting has been abbreviated until we think little what we say as we carelessly utter the good-bye which seems now to signify, as far as its form goes, little or nothing. What our good-bye has lost has, however, been abundantly made up to it. Never were there two words which meant so much. There is the good-bye of mothers and sisters; when the son of the family leaves his home for the first time, perhaps for college only, perhaps to seek his livelihood in a new and far country,—never are deeper and purer sentiments expressed than in such a good-bye. There is the good-bye to fatherland, mourned by the traveler as he sees his familiar hills sinking below the horizon; and there are good-byes sadder and more hopeless; it may be spoken from the pillow, where youth or maturity or old age is succumbing to mortal weakness; these are dismal leave takings, each different from the other, yet each able to embody its hopes or fears, or hopelessness in these two wonderful syllables. But leave-takings are not always so sad. Parting is sweet sorrow as we know, or some of us know. There is a youth and a maiden walking over yonder hill; they have walked through the glen and the woods; they have climbed the short ascent to see the golden sunset, and their forms are clearly outlined against the evening sky. Now it is evening, and the dew is falling, so they hasten toward her ancestral gates. There they linger a moment. I know not how many times she has raised his soul to most ambitious hopes, and then with her small finger, dashed him to the ground in deprecation of her ladyship's small displeasure. But now, at this moment, she gives him her hand and a kind look into his eyes, while both sadly say, "good-bye." I think he and she look forward to their last moment and their last words at the end of their not unaccustomed walk. Many, many are the instances which might be enumerated, tending to show the power of that little, yet all powerful word, "good bye."

"ONE TOUCH OF NATURE MAKES THE WHOLE WORLD KIN."

A true woman's heart is always responsive to the touch of tenderness. Sometimes a very little thing strikes the chord and the whole sympathetic nature is awakened, as a little gleam of sunlight upon a landscape often calls out the beauties of a picture and surprises and charms the beholder. A lady in Newtown took up the last Bee, and glancing over the first page her eyes fell upon that little poem, "Yawcob Strauss," by Charles F. Adams, and not relishing the style she turned to her husband and said, "Why do they put such stuff in the paper?" "Stuff!" said he, "just let me read that for you." He took the paper and read the first verse describing the busy childish vagaries of the boy and the vexation and weariness of the parent, till he came to the last verse when the little busybody had found rest in sleep:

> "But ven he vas ashleep in ped,
> So quiet as a mouse,
> I prays der Lord, 'Dake anyding,
> But leaf dot Yawcob Strauss.'" the sympathetic chord of a mother's heart was touched, and turning suddenly away she buried her face in her hands and burst into a flood of tears. She had lost two jewels and had seen them hidden away in the grave, and had missed the patter of their tiny feet and the music of their cheery voices. There 's a touch of pure nature in those simple words.—Newtown (Conn.) Bee.

"I wonder, uncle," said a little girl, "if men will ever yet live to be five hundred years old?" "No, my child," responded the old gentleman, "that was tried once, and the race grew so bad that the world had to be drowned."

HEZEKIAH.

Just then stage rolled up to a house at the cross-roads and stopped. Our driver got down and watered his horses in a melancholy way, and groaned as with a deprecating gesture he came to the door and informed us that there was another passenger. A large, bony and rubicund woman came forth, bringing three bandboxes, and followed by a short, chubby man who can be best described as a "kerchunkatty." He had only one eye, carried an arm in a sling, and his nose was irresolute.

"Now, Hezekiah," said she, "you look out for yourself. You hear me? You keep outer the fire, and don't you go near nothin'. I never seen such a critter! I'm goin' away and can't look arter you! You hear me!"

Then she climbed in and sat down where Jim's legs had been.

"Gents—wy how fare ye! I thought they wan't nobuddy aboard, but he's the tryinest man! Got good sense; yes; ben to the Legislater; fust clock man; but he's allus gettin' hurt. I never know when he's safe! He's the tryinest man!" And she gave her bandbox a hearty thump with her fist.

"Sick a good deal?" I ventured to ask.

"Sick? No he aint. Never sick! He tumbles into somethin', or somethin' tumbles on him or somethin'."

"Perhaps you will tell us about it," remarked Jim.

She was evidently ready to relieve herself on that point. She put her feet up on the opposite seat and began:

"Wall—le's see—he didn't hurt hisself very often until a year ago. Then, one day he was out in the woods chopin. He falled a big tree on the sapin, then he hit the sapin a clip and he didn't know nothin' for three 'r four days. When brought in they say he was a sight to look at. They thought he was dead fust. I was away. I'm allus away when he gets hurt. Then I cum hum and doctor him up and most use up my strength in recoverin on him, wen, fust I knows, I bein called away over to a neighbors war Sprony was sick, he went out to split logs and put a blast into one, and thoughtlessly crept right up and pecked in and it most blowed his head off. He was senseless for three days more, and one eye was put out completely. I wore myself out agin gettin him onto his legs, wen wot should he do but go in the paster wen I was away and one of the bulls histed him. They say he lifted him quite unseal. It unsettled him a good deal, and he was senseless for three days. He's allus senseless for bout three days. I cum hum and poultice him til you couldn't rest, and kinder nust him up, and 'twant a bit mor'n a fortnit wen he went out loadin hay without any permission (I was away), and he ketched a sunstroke and tumbled offen the load and lit on his head on a pile er stuns. Wen I got back I told him he was a dumb fool, but he didn't understan a word till his three days was up. I put iodium poltices on him agin and made him smell of hartshorn, and bimeby he revived. Will you believe within one week, wen I was away that man managed to get in the millpoand? Why he didn't git drowned to death I don't know—he ought ter; but they fished him out and laid him on the bank and rolled him, and when I cum he was settin up his elbows askin about how the lection went in swampscot. I was pretty mad, I tell ye. The bees got him next time. They swarmed right on his head—mistook it for a knot, I s'pose, I can't hardly tell ye how he looked after that—some like a pile of tomaters. Howsomedever, Hezekiah still lives; but I expect, jest much's I expect to live, that a sheep 'll bite him dangerously afore I git home!"

USEFUL IN ANY LOCALITY.

Owing to the increase in the number of cases of scarlet fever, the New York health department has sent out the following sanitary regulations against small-pox, scarlatina and measles:

Every case must be reported to the city sanitary inspector upon its first recognized appearance.

Care of Patients.—The patients should be placed in a separate room, and no person except the physician, nurse or mother allowed to enter the room or to touch the bedding or clothing used in the sick room until they have been thoroughly disinfected.

Infected Articles.—All clothing, bedding, or other articles not absolutely necessary for the use of the patient, should be removed from the sick room. Articles used about the patient, such as sheets, pillow-cases, blankets or clothes, must not be removed from the sick room until they have been disinfected by placing them in a tub with the following disinfecting fluid: 8 ounces of sulphate of zinc, 1 ounce of carbolic acid, 3 gallons of water.

They should be soaked in this fluid for at least one hour, and then placed in boiling water for washing.

A piece of muslin, one foot square, should be dipped in the same solution and suspended in the sick room constantly, and the same should be done in the hallway adjoining the sick room.

Feather beds and pillows, hair pillows and mattresses, and flannels or woolen goods, require fumigation, and should not be removed from the sick room until after this has been done. Whenever the patient is removed from the sick room, notify the bureau of sanitary inspection, when the disinfecting corps will as soon as possible thereafter perform the work of fumigation.

All vessels used for receiving the discharges of patients should have some of the same disinfecting fluid constantly therein, and immediately after use by the patient be emptied and cleansed with boiling water. Water closets and privies should also be disinfected daily with the same fluid, or a solution of chloride of iron, one pound to the gallon of water, adding one or two ounces of carbolic acid.

All straw beds should be burned, but must not be removed from the sick room without a permit from this department. They will be removed by the disinfecting corps.

It is advised not to use handkerchiefs about the patient, but rather soft rags for cleansing the nostrils and mouth, which should be immediately thereafter burned.

The ceilings and side walls of the sick room, after removal of patient, should be thoroughly cleansed and lime-washed, and the wood-work and floor thoroughly scrubbed with soap and water.

DON'T FORGET IT.

Your enemy is at your feet, and it is in your power to crush him! Don't do it! Better is an ounce of forgiveness than a thousand tons of vengeance! If hardness and bitterness still linger in your heart—if actual and deep wrongs have been inflicted upon you—go and look into the nearest grave—you will not have to go far—and see what is the end for your enemy and for you. Go and think for a moment beside the nearest gravestone how little worthy it is for an immortal soul to be cherishing the passions of a wolf or a tiger, and then forgive your enemy as you need to be forgiven.

Plainfield is colonizing the State of Georgia. Geo. T. Young, Dr. Brown, Herbert Murphy and their families are among those who have recently settled there, and now Jas. E. White, formerly of Newark, late in the dry goods trade, after prospecting about there returns to make preparations to take his family and locate in the same part of the State. The location where these "planters" have settled is about one hundred miles southwest of Savannah. —Exchange.

The Times asks—"Why should Plainfield be obliged to borrow money for its general city purposes any more than for its school fund, or its poor fund?"

Just so. There is no necessity of such a recourse. Former Councils have run the city government successfully and satisfactorily with the means placed at their disposal by the taxpayers and citizens, and there is no reason why the present one should not do the same. Watch the polls and vote right next Tuesday.

Our beautiful sister city Elizabeth is bankrupt, having failed on Saturday last to pay her bonds which matured. The debt of the city is $5,685,190.24. and her police and school teachers are unpaid, and it is fearful that the public schools will have to be closed in consequence. The Gas Company also threatnes to shut off the supply of gas. All this comes from extravagance in conducting municipal affairs. We sympathize with our neighbors in their affliction. Let other cities look after their internal affairs and not fall into the same pit that Elizabeth has. Plainfield has no debt. Be careful you do not commence saddling one on her next Tuesday.

The recent cold weather destroyed the trout fishery of I. C. Frazier, between Truckee and Lake Tahoe. The trout require fresh running water, and when the supply is cut off it is impossible for them to survive more than two or three days. On Tuesday night the temperature was twenty-four degrees below zero. Solid ice filled all the ditches from the reservoir to the fish ponds. Ice covered the various ponds to a great depth, and all the outlets were choked with massive cakes of ice. Not a drop of fresh water could reach the imprisoned fish. When holes were cut in the surface of the ponds the large beautiful trout would leap clear out of the water in their efforts to get the oxygen which the water lacked.—The fishery was the finest one in the Sierra Nevada.—Truckee (Nev) Rep.

Recent elections have settled beyond peradventure the fact that the next Senate will have a Democratic working majority of eight, and that the Democrats in both branches of Congress will then direct legislation for the first time in twenty years. There were recently elected twelve new Senators. The next to be choosen will be in Arkansas and New Hampshire. It is likely that while Republicans will be elected in New Hampshire a Democrat will be returned from the other State. The twenty-five Senators will hold office for six years, and will stand fourteen Democrats to eleven Republicans. If David Davis is ranked as a Republican, those whose terms expire in 1881 will be in same proportion. Of the twenty-five Senators whose terms of office expire next March, Conkling, Cameron, Morrill, Gordon, Jones and Allison have been re-elected. It will thus be seen that all talk of a Republican supremacy in the Senate in 1881 is the veriest nonsense. Not only will the Democrats then have a working majority, but in their ranks will be found some of the best debating talent that body has known for years.—True American.

NOT LEGAL.

The action of the Common Council at its last meeting, in reference to the nominations of the Mayor, was illegal according to the following facts. At their first meeting they adopted the following, on motion of Councilman Redfield;

Resolved, That until otherwise ordered the "Rules of Order" of the last Common Council be adopted for the government of this.

Rule 21 of last Council reads as follows:

"All appointments or confirmations to office by the Common Council shall be by ballot, unless dispensed with by unanimous consent; and six votes shall be necessary for a choice."

At a subsequent meeting of Council the Committee on Rules, previously appointed, made their report, "That they recommend the use of the rules of order adopted by the Council at their first meeting, with the following amendments," which amendments have no reference to the rule in regard to confirmation of officers. The report of the Committee was unanimously adopted. It therefore follows that all appointments or confirmations to office must be by ballot, unless dispensed with by unanimous consent, and the proceedings of the Council, in not following that course, was therefore null and void, as not in accordance with their own rules.

The New Brunswick Board of Trade will, at its next meeting, be disbanded. It has had a short [illegible]

"NON PARTIZAN."

The above was the heading of the ticket on which was printed the names of the successful candidates for Councilmanic honors at the last City election. In the private caucuses, parlor entertainments and primary meeting, the talismanic words to insure success in the approaching election for eleven men to rule the affairs of the beautiful city of Plainfield, were—"NON-PARTIZAN." It was claimed by the managers of the successful ticket that they wanted eleven virtuous, honest men who would be non-partizan in their every action; the affairs of the city were to be conducted in a manner hereafter that would cast in the shade any action pursued by former Councils. To that end they magnanimously gave their Democratic adherents their choice for Mayor, Nathan Harper, Esq., whom the Republican press lauded to the skies as an honest, upright and conscientious citizen, one who would rise above party, and nominate for city officials, in all cases coming within his jurisdiction, men of worth and fitness for office. They were careful, however, to nominate a majority of the eleven Councilmen, gentlemen of Republican proclivities. The "rum question," had nothing to do with the election, they said, the object point being to secure eleven men of intelligence who would faithfully and carefully administer the affairs of the city coming within their jurisdiction. On those grounds the "Non-Partisan" ticket receives a handsome majority. What has been the result? At the second meeting of the Council, the vexed question of "License" came up. Instead of grappling with the monster and dealing with him in a "non-partizan" spirit, they dropped the question like a hot cake, and ask their constituents to vote their opinion on it at a special election, entailing a still further burden on the people in the way of taxation. Before that question could be settled, however, His Honor, Mayor Harper, sends in names for city officers, as the Charter provides, and here again the "non-partizan" spirit shows itself. There are five important offices within the gift of the Mayor, that of Corporation Counsel, Street Commissioner, City Physician, Overseer of Poor and Captain or "Chief" of Police. The latter officer is selected from among the three regular policemen who guard Plainfield's streets and thoroughfares, by the Committee on Police, after the names sent to Council by the Mayor are confirmed. In this instance the name of Philip Breen, an ex-Chief of the city, was sent in. He is a Democrat. He was rejected. For Corporation Counsel, Hon. Wm. B. Maxson was presented. He was not confirmed. He is a Democrat. The names of the nominees for Street Commissisioner, Mr. Geo. Angleman, City Physician, Dr. H. H. Lowrie, Overseer of Poor, T. J. Gillies, were confirmed. They are Republicans. If the nominees of His Honor, Mayor Harper, had not been men of intelligence and worth, some palliating excuse might be rendered for the actions of Council last Monday evening. Mr. Maxson for Corporation Counsel and Breen for Police, were good and wise selections, yet this "non-partizan" Council rejected them by a strict party vote, because they were Democrats.

At the organization of the Council, the Democrats voted for a Republican President of Council, City Clerk and the appointment of a Republican janitor.

Money election next Tuesday. Do not fail to go to the Polls.

THE MONEY ELECTION.

It seems to be the general impression among our citizens that the $5,000 asked for by the Common Council will not be granted next Tuesday. Not because they think that more money is not needed to successfully and satisfactorily administer the affairs of the city, but the average taxpayer is not in favor of increasing his taxes, when the amount askpd for can be raised through another channel. Great stress is laid upon the fact that with the growing demands upon the city's exchequer, $10.000 is too small an amount to pay necessary expenses for successfully carrying on the affairs of the city, Granted. But the last Council not only did that but paid off nearly all the city's indebtedness, with the amount given them. They did not call for an extra $5.000, but took the $4,600 offered them for Licenses, and gave our citizens a good administration, leaving a balance in the Treasury at the close of their term of office. According to an estimate made by the present Finance Committee and presented at the last meeting of Council, about $2,000 more will be required this year, in their estimation, than that of last year, to run the city. A larger amount than that can be received bo granting licenses, and therefore what need of the extra $5,000.—There is more than enough uncollected taxes due to pay off the small debt against the city. It is only necessary to collect the same. Again, we have an order from the Council to go into an election to determine whether an amount of money shall be taxed for their use, and the moral sense of the community aroused with the proviso—that the result shall determine their license powers, at once plainly recognizing their obligation to this moral issue. The demand of the Council stands upon its merits, and should receive the people's sanction, yes or no, but instead a demand is made upon them that if not acceeded to their moral convictions must surrender to the alternative.—Therefore, if the people do not respect the opinion of Council as to their need of more money their convictions as to licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors must surrender to their acts, as the money has to be raised. Such legislation is sure to work mischief to a community in the end.

It is stated that the enormous sum of $20,000 was spent in the Hunter murder case at Camden, by the prosecution and defence. The County of Camden is out about 15,000 by the murder, and the taxpayers have this sum to pay. The Hunter family spent money so freely that a more than equal expenditure was required on the part of the State.

HOW THE CIPHERS WERE DESTROYED.

It is a matter of history that the first demand made upon the Western Union Telegraph Company for the political dispatches sent during the campaign of 1876 came from the House committee. Within a few days after the subpœna duces tecum of the House committee was served, Morton's Committee on Elections of the Senate issued and had served a similar demand upon Mr. Orton, then President of the Western Union Company. This corporation, which was managed in the interest of the Radical party, under cover of a desire to protect private correspondents, resisted these subpœnas at first, but it was merely a pretense to gain temporary relief from the pressure of the House. Mr. Orton issued commands to the telegraph operators to send all the political dispatches to the principal office in New York, and, as soon as this was done, he had them placed in a trunk, and turned over to the attorney of the company, who brought the trunk to Washington. He took refuge at the residence of Prof. Holden, then and now Professor of Mathematics at the United States Naval Observatory, where the trunk of telegrams was concealed for several days. Mr. Orton was in Washington himself, and directed every movement of his employe, who had possession of the telegrams over which the two Houses of Congress were struggling. Finally, by orders of the President of the company, the attorney delivered the trunk of dispatches at the room of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, and it was received by Mr. Burbank, the then clerk of that committee, and immediately turned over to George E. Bullock, messenger of the committee. Senator Morton was promptly notified of the receipt of the trunk, and he lost no time in repairing to his committee room and making an examination of the contents. He took with him several Republican Senators, members of the Elections Committee (whose names will come out during the investigation), and together they examined all the dispatches. Bullock took the telegrams from the trunk and assisted in assorting them. Mr. Morton was personally interested in getting possession of the telegraphic messages of that campaign, because he had sent and received, in his management of the Pacific States for Hayes, dispatches that he did not want to see the light. All the telegrams which compromised the Republican party in any serious degree were seperated from the others, and the balance were returned to the trunk. The honorable Senators then left the room, leaving the Republican dispatches in the hands of Bullock, with an understanding that he was to put them where they could never do any harm. Bullock locked the door and made a bonfire of the bundle of telegrams which had been left with him. He then arranged the others in good order in the trunk, and next day Mr. Morton called a meeting of the full committee, informing them that it was to examine the telegrams which had been turned over to him by the Western Union Company. Of course nothing was found that the Republicans cared to conceal, but there were telegrams which perplexed the Democratic members of the committee. Morton, with an assumed air of magnanimity, suggested that the trunk and its contents be kept a secret, and this was tacitly agreed to. Subsequently Gen. Butler mysteriously found himself in possession of a package of these cipher dispatches, and now he proposes to turn them over to the Potter Committee. It turns out Prof. Holden was the man who translated the cipher dispatches for the New York Tribune, and as this experience doubtless furnished him with the key, he has been selected by Gen. Butler to continue the translation.

George E. Bullock performed his part of the work to the entire satisfaction of the Radical Senators who were engaged with him in the job. He was promised reward in the shape of official position, and he got it in due time. He was appointed as a Consul to Cologne, and was confirmed through the influence of the very Senators who examined the contents of the trunk, with the exception of Morton, who died before the job could be completed.—Washington Post.

NEW JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

TRENTON, FEB. 5TH.—In the Senate executive session to day, the majority of the Judiciary Committee presented a report saying that they agree fully with the sound public policy expressed in the Governor's special message in favor of a non partizan judiciary, and, in order to carry out more fully his views, they recommend that the nominations for Law Judges of Essex, Mercer, Monmouth and Middlesex Counties be not confirmed, because they would, if confirmed, make those courts exclusively Democratic. A minority report was presented by ex-President Ludlow, commending the policy of the Governor and accusing the majority of obstructing a non-partisan policy. The nominations were laid over until tomorrow. The Senate will confirm the eleven Lay Judges and reject the four Law Judges.

The bill to prevent suits on the bond when the sale of mortgaged premises does not satisfy the loan was debated an hour and referred to the Attorney-General for an opinion.

In the House the Jersey City Bridge bill was referred to a third reading without amendment and without opposition.

The Galveston News prints a petition, addressed to the Governor and Legislature, asking that the charter of the city be declared null and avoid, owing to the fact that the city's indebtedness is $15,387.48 above the $1,200,000 allowed by the city charter. The News says: "The time has arrived when the people must rise up, in their sovereign capacity, and rescue the remnant of their possessions from the grasp of the despoilers." It calls on the Legislature, as a last resort, to extricate the city from its unpleasant predicament.

Election next Tuesday.

THE COAL QUESTION.

It has been the subject of much comment among the consumers of coal in Plainfield for years past, regarding the difference of price in coal per ton between the dealers of this city and that of Elizabeth, a city situated some 15 miles farther away, the price being so much less per ton at the latter city than in this. The reason assigned is that the freight on coal is more per ton delivered at Plainfield than at Elizabeth, which seems strange when the fact is made known that the railroad company have to transport the coal some fifteen miles farther. We have taken pains to enquire into the facts of the case and find that the tide rates for coal from the mines, for the month of February, are as follows:—Egg size, $2.85, Stove, $2.90, Chestnut, $2.80 per ton. Tide rates mean delivery at any point where tide water exists, for instance, Elizabethport.—Dealers at Bound Brook pay 15 cents per ton more, while our Plainfield dealers pay at least from 90 cents to $1.30 per ton more, consequently they are compelled to charge more for coal than the dealers of the above mentioned places. The same state of affairs exist also at Roselle, the first station this side of Elizabeth. Consumers there purchase their coal, to a great extent, at Elizabeth, carting the same from that city to their homes. Also, the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Co. are selling Chestnut size coal at Washington, N. J. at $2.75 per ton net, screened and delivered. The result is the tonnage on the Central R. R. is affected from 20 to 30 miles on each side of that point in consequence of this excess of tolls over the latter road. The rates per ton over the Packer road is also less, judging from the fact that certain of our citizens purchase their coal in large quantities at New Brooklyn, through which the latter road runs, and which is situated only about 3½ miles from Plainfield, at $1 a ton less than the same can be purchased here. We have heard it stated that the reason this difference of price in tonnage, between Bound Brook and Elizabeth, exists, is in consequence of there being no room for cars to stand on side tracks in this city while they are being unloaded. That certainly cannot be, as there is plenty of room and tracks here for that purpose. Our dealers are censured for the high price asked for coal in comparison with the dealers in the above mentioned places, and a remedy should at once be applied to relieve them from the onus and that is, a reduction of the freight tariff on coal per ton delivered at Plainfield. Why they should be charged more per ton in this city than at Elizabeth is something beyond our comprehension. We hope Receiver Lathrop, who has so ably managed the affairs of the road since his appointment to that office, will give the relief to the coal dealers in this city that is earnestly asked for and needed, by reducing the freight on coal delivered at this city, so that our citizens may purchase that commodity as cheap here as can be had at Elizabeth, 15 miles away.

Are not your taxes high enough now? If so, don't vote to increase them next Tuesday.

THE EXECUTIVE NOMINATIONS.

We commend to our readers the following from the True American, of Jan. 29. Read it carefully:

We publish in another place a corrected list of the nominations for Judges of the Common Pleas, sent to the Senate on Monday evening by Governor McClellan.

As will be observed these nominees in the case of the Lay Judges are, in every instance, Republicans, being either re nominations or the naming of one Republican to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of another.

By the amended Constitution, the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas have, since 1877, been nominated by the Governor.

Under this plan, the political complexion of these Courts in all the counties has gradually changed. Previous to 1877, they were composed entirely of Republicans, there being, if we remember correctly, not a single Democrat in commission as a Judge of the Common Pleas in the entire State. The next year, by the Governor's appointments, there was a Democratic minority in all the courts; the next year a Democratic majority.

At the present session of the Legislature the question presented itself for solution, whether the Courts should again be altogether composed of members of one political party, or whether the appointing power should recognize the rights of a minority and the acts of his predecessors and retain the Republicans left in the several counties?

Governor McClellan has chosen the latter of these alternatives.

The policy, or rather principal, thus adopted by him was inaugurated, we believe by Governor Parker, who gave heed to the strong demand for the reappointment of Justice Depue, whose high standing as a Judge marked him as one worthy to be retained in his position, under any administration.

Governor Bedle followed the precedent thus set in regard to Justices of the Supreme Court, and extended it to Judges of the District Courts, in cases where there were two to be appointed in one city, selecting a Republican as one of them.

Governor McClellan is the first to whom has been presented the alternative of extending the principal, established in all other cases, to the Common Pleas Courts, or of reversing it, and he has met it fully and fairly. So far as he has the power himself, and so far as his example may lead his successors, he has decided that the entire Judiciary of the State shall be non-partisan.

This is a policy which will commend itself to our best citizens, and we feel assured that the precedent is one which cannot be ignored by his successors of whatever political party they may be. The principle, as a principle is not only correct in theory, but it is sound in practice. The whole course of public affairs in this State is in the direction of some representation of minorities. The demand has been [illegible] made for it in township committees, and it has prevailed for years in election boards and other local municipal machinery, with good results apparent to all.

It is but right that the principal fund to work so well in minor matters should be extended to that most important of all concerns—the administration of justice.

There can be, and, so far as we can learn, there has been, but one objection urged to the system, and that applies not to the system itself, but to what may be its practical working. All are willing to admit that as an abstract proposition it would be better if the judiciary should not be entirely partizan, but it is feared that the precedent established by Democratic administrations may not be followed by their opponents should they come into power.

Whether this is true or not, it is impossible to say, but whether true or not, the only question to be considered is, is it right? Is it the proper thing to do? If it is, then it must be remembered that the party which has the power has also the responsibility. It cannot shield itself by reciting what its opponents have done in the past or expressing its fears of what they may possibly do in the future. It must use its best judgment in determining what is right, and act up to it manfully.

The people will judge it according to its acts, and will applaud and sustain it in doing the right, as they will condemn its failure so to act. In the present instance, a proper deference to public sentiment will secure the Democracy against the contingency feared, and we believe that this action of the Governor, besides being what is considered the right thing to do, is in response to a well founded demand of good citizens.

It is not generally known that a one-cent stamp attached to a postal card will carry it to all countries in Europe having a postal treaty with the United States. Great Britain and Germany are among the countries having such treaties.

The Money Election.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

Some of the reasons why a temperance man cannot vote for the extra five thousand dollars:

1st. Because the question is not put upon a fair moral basis.

2nd. That the question of the rum traffic for the present year is already established for its sale by the licenses already granted by the old Council.

3rd. That money or no money will not remove the nuisance.

4th. It makes no moral difference to the people whether four or five persons or fifty supply this evil to the inebriate, and to draw men and women down to destruction.

5th. That if the nearly $10,000 uncollected city taxes were collected, the city, with the $10,000 allowed, would be provided for, for present emergencies.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

At an Elocutionary contest in Somerville on Thursday Evening of last week, Miss Emily May See, of North Plainfield, received a handsome silver medal. Her subject was "Famine." The Somerville Unionist in speaking of the affair, says, "the judges, no doubt, were right in their adjudication, though to the writer, the rendering of 'The Famine' seemed to bear the palm over that of 'After the Battle.'" The latter reader, Miss Isabella M. Smith, of Bedminster, received a gold medal.

A young son of Rev. T. Logan Murphy, named Clarence, narrowly escaped fatal injuries on Front St., Plainfield, a few days since; a heavily loaded wagon passing over his body as he was playing about the wheels of the same. He was badly bruised but fortunately no bones were broken.

Mr. Hudson advertises in another column that he is prepared to receive and pay the highest market price for hides, &c. See his card.

Martin Christy, Esq., contemplates renewing his residence in North Plainfield, in the spring.—He will be welcomed back by a host of friends.

Excitement over the attempt of Mr. Green to extort royalties from all owners of Driven Wells in North Plainfield, has again broken out, and a number of the citizens of that Town have held a meeting and resolved to test the matter of collection of these royalties in the courts. Mr. Green has engaged Mr. J. C. Clayton, of New York to defend him, and has commenced suit at Trenton against Messrs. Wm. E. Gardner, P. M. French, Wm. Smalley and Daniel Van Winkle, who are summoned to appear at Trenton on Monday next. Messrs. Van Winkle & Maxson have been retained by the latter as their counsel. The citizens of North Plainfield are in earnest about this extortionate demand upon them, and are determined to test the case to its full merits. Apropos of this subject, we copy the following from the Newark Journal;

Editor Journal:—I saw a communication published in the Newark Daily Advertiser, a few days since, headed "Driven Wells," stating that in the United States Circuit Court at Trenton, Judge Nixon had just granted injunctions against McVoy of Plainfield, and Hewitt of Bloomfield, restraining them from making, using, or selling driven wells. The suits were brought by the assignees of Green's patent, issued in May, 1871.

Through your widely circulated paper I would like to set forth a few facts in regard to these suits about driven wells. These two men, Hewitt and McVoy, were selected, knowingly by Green, as being utterly unable, financially, to employ counsel to defend these suits, neither did they in any manner whatever do so. Why did not Green first attack such men in Newark as Yates & Wharton, James Aikman & Co., Simon Bros., I. Hensler, or the Elizabeth Steam Cordage Company, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Singer Manufacturing Company at Elizabethport, or the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, all of whom have a number of these driven wells in use? Because Green did not want a suit with any party who was able to defend themselves. Green went to one of the most prominent business men of this city and offered him if he would furnish the capital to prosecute parties making use of these wells, that he would give him one half of the royalties, and he says he told him that he would have nothing to do with it at all. He says they have retained a lawyer in New York, by the name of Clayton, to help them carry on their suits. If they do establish the Green patent, they will take over a million dollars from parties in this State. I can find wells of this kind made in this state, driven more than 20 years before Green or any other party applied for letters patent. In 1870 I applied for and received letters patent for driving and drilling for water, dated August 2, No. [illegible], and five years before that James Baggett obtained a patent for driving wells. I drove the first well in Plainfield, N. J., for a man from Massachusetts, who owned the patent right for three counties in this State bought of James Baggett.

Mr. Editor, I want to advise the readers of your paper not to pay these parties any sum whatever, but club together, as we are doing here, and contest a suit in court, where both sides of the question will be heard and fairly determined.

Yours with respect,
S. S. AYERS,
No. 40 Union St., Newark, N. J.

A Healthful Hint.

A diet largely of fish seems in its effect to be sedative, and therefore adapted to the nervous, overworked and overworried. COD-LIVER OIL as a fatty food is now viewed as a household essential to restore depleted energy. Peter Moller's Norwegian preparation of this article has been pronounced the best by the Judges at the Paris Exposition.

Cut this out—It May Save your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderous cures astonishes every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggists, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents.

Escape from Robbery

Last Sunday evening, the coachman in the employ of Jacob Kirkner, Esq., residing at Evona, had occasion to go into the cellar of the latter gentleman's house for the purpose of putting fresh fuel on the furnace fire. Hearing a noise in the rear of the furnace, he stepped behind the same and was confronted by a stout man, whom he instantly grappled, and after a lively tussle of a minute, the coachman threw the stranger and struck him a stinging blow in the face. As he was in the act of repeating the dose, another man stepped forward and kicked the coachman in the side, completely knocking the wind from his body. Both strangers then made their escape by the cellar door from which they had effected an entrance. Their object no doubt was to secrete themselves until the family had retired and then to rob the house.

Josh Billings in Plainfield.

Josh Billings, the renowned humorist, entertained a very respectable audience last Thursday Evening, in the Congregational Church. The lecture as announced was for the benefit of the widow of Jas. L. DeCamp and we understand the netted proceeds make a satisfactory sum. The lecture was something of a novelty, in fact it was no lecture at all, but Billings read selections from his multitudinous writings. Upon the theory that "variety is the spice of life," the audience was regaled with essays on natural history, answers to correspondents, proverbs and wise sayings, letters, &c. Laughter was the presiding genius and to laughter did everybody bow. If laughter will make fat, then Plainfield gained at least a ton last Thursday night. Billings has a droll and decidedly queer way of speaking and then add to this the rich humor of his writings—the effect was side-splitting. It is impossible to pick out and specify any one thing as being particularly good. There was so much that was rich that any discrimination is utterly impossible. We hope earnestly that the day is not far distant when Plainfield shall again have an opportunity to hear this most capital of all American Humorists.

A Fast Train

Is needed between Plainfield and New York, for the accommodation of our commuters, one which will compete with "rapid transit" in New York city, which eventually must induce many of our New York merchants and clerks who reside in Plainfield to seek homes in the upper part of New York, if they cannot get to their business sooner from Plainfield. We are satisfied the Central Railroad Company will furnish the train, if the commuters themselves will only agree upon a particular time when this train shall leave Plainfield. In connection with this also, it is a grievance complained of that our citizens cannot get their morning papers from New York early enough, our news dealers being compelled to drive over to Metuchen and receive their supply there, transported over the Pennsylvania road, in consequence of the rates being lower over that road than the Union News Company will transport over the Central, that News Company having the right of the road.— When Dunn & Case had the Central Road, there was no such trouble, they delivering papers to dealers here at reasonable rates. Let our commuters settle on a time when the fast train shall leave and arrive at Plainfield, and we believe Judge Lathrop will give the train.

The New York Symphony Society.

Steinway Hall, last Thursday afternoon, Jan. 30, was filled by a large and appreciative audience, the occasion being the Public Rehearsal for the Fourth Concert of this season. The programme presented was especially interesting by the rendering of the new symphony by Saint Saens, a work which the composer has given to the public full of sunny and refreshing variety. The orchestra executed with great skill and taste and under the intelligent management of Dr. Damrosch the true sentiment of the music was revealed. But decidedly the chief attraction was the appearance of Wilhelmj; with the inspiration derived from his audience, and with the support of such an orchestra, the artist held his auditors spell-bound as he rendered the Concerto by Beethoven. His skill and manly tenderness of sentiment secured for him the perfect storm of applause which followed his effort. He seemed to have completely fired his audience and again and again was he recalled. To attempt to equal the achievements of this man with words is almost presumption itself, suffice it however to say that he seems to us to surpass any other violinist, and we have only to regret that we have heard so little from him.

Bagging His Game Well.

The papers are showing up Rev. John D. Bagwell in an admirable manner, or else he is a much-abused man. John D. formerly hailed from Plainfield, and was usually trotted out at Republican meetings held by the colored troops, who, as has so often been remarked, fought bravely. He had a newspaper for awhile, printed in this city, but didn't get along very well with his pale-faced brethren, who, according to his ideas of matters and things, were not friendly enough to the black man, whose vote was good enough, but whose fitness to hold office was often questioned. We had almost lost sight of our sable friend, but all of a sudden he, or a man bearing the same name, turns up at "the Hub," where they have more admiration for that class of geniuses than in this vicinity. There he figures as Secretary of the Boston Dessicated Cocoanut Shipping Company, intended to wheedle people of his color out of their superfluous cash. The real assets of the $50,000 company are virtually nothing but printed circulars and cards, and lectures have led thousands of poor colored people to be deluded—having explicit confidence in these "Artful Dodgers" of their own hue. Their operations were conducted under the cloak of religion—the meetings all being held in churches of that people. Rev. Mr. Bagwell preached a sermon some weeks ago in Boston, and is said to have told his hearers that the National Dessicated Cocoanut Company was the stepping-stone to Heaven. Those who invested were told that their money would be refunded any time on writing to Washington, and they would also receive the ... [illegible] ... as the company was "[illegible]."

Mr. Depew presented the following from His Honor Mayor Harper:

TO THE COMMON COUNCIL;

Gentlemen:—I herewith lay before you copies of correspondence had with the Attorney-General of New Jersey in relation to the question of State Commissions for the City Judge and Mayor of Plainfield, and would respectfully suggest the propriety of having the Attorney-General's opinion entered at length upon the minutes of Council.

NATHAN HARPER, Mayor.
Plainfield, Feb. 3rd, 1879.

PLAINFIELD, UNION COUNTY, N. J.
JANUARY 6th, 1879.

DEAR SIR:—As the recently elected Mayor of this city, I respectfully solicit from you, the highest legal adviser in our State, an answer to the interrogatory hereinafter submitted.

The original Charter of the city of Plainfield, approved April 2nd, 1869, provided among other officers for the election of a Mayor and three Aldermen, and enacted (Sec. 4) "That the Mayor and Aldermen of said city shall be Justices of the Peace, ex-officio, within the said city for all purposes contemplated by this act, and shall be elected by the legal voters of said city, the Mayor for two years and the Aldermen for three years, to be commissioned by the Governor in the same manner as the Justices of the Peace throughout the State are commissioned."

An act to amend said City Charter, approved April 4th, 1872, dropped the Aldermen entirely from list of officers to be chosen, and provided (Sec. 2) for the election of a Mayor and City Judge, without mentioning any commission requirement whatever, and concluded with this repealing clause—"That all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed."

In view of the foregoing quoted facts, is it necessary or proper for the Mayor or City Judge of Plainfield to be commissioned by the Governor?

A reply at earliest convenience will be appreciated.

Very respectfully,
NATHAN HARPER, Mayor.

To HON. JOHN P. STOCKTON,
Attorney-General,
Trenton, N. J.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
OFFICE OF ATTORNEY-GENERAL,
TRENTON, JAN. 16th, 1879.

MY DEAR SIR:—Your letter of the 6th inst. was duly received by me on the 11th inst., upon my return from Belvidere, where I have been engaged for the past ten days.

It seems to me that the Governor has no power to commission the Mayor and City Judge of Plainfield except by statutory provision, as neither office is a Constitutional office, and as the act of April 4th, 1872, to amend the Charter contains a general repealer, which repeals Sec. 4 of the act of April 2d, 1869, which authorized the Governor to commission such officers, therefore I am of the opinion that the Governor has no authority to commission the Mayor and City Judge of Plainfield.

Yours, very truly,
JOHN P. STOCKTON, Att'y-Gen.

To HON. NATHAN HARPER, Mayor,
Plainfield, N. J.

Mr. Depew moved that the above be spread upon the minutes. Carried.

Mr. Depew presented the following nominations from His Honor Mayor Harper:

To the Common Council:

Gentlemen—I herewith submit for your consideration and appropriate action, the following nominations:

Corporation Counsel—Wm. R. Maxson.
Street Commissioner—Geo. M. Angleman.
City Physician—H. H. Lowrie, M. D.
Overseer of the Poor—T. J. Gillies.
Regular Policemen—Philip Breen, Edward Laing, George Eaton.
Special Policemen—Albert F. Randolph, Wm. V. Mundy, Steve R. Cope, Michael Conway, John Harding, George Smith, George W. Moore, Hugh McDonnell, Thomas Baron, George Henry, Thos. Callahan, John Powers, Wm. Manning, Wm. B. Ayres.

NATHAN HARPER, Mayor.
Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 3, 1879.

Mr. Stover moved that we now proceed to the election of the above gentlemen. Car'd.

For Corp. Counsel—Wm. R. Maxson. Upon the call of the roll, the result was as follows: Ayes—Depew, Mayer, Simpson, Stewart, Stover—5. Noes—Coriell, Finch, Lithgow, Potts, Redfield—5. Tie vote, the Pres. declaring Mr. Maxson not confirmed.

The next name on nomination was that of Geo. M. Angleman, for Street Com'r.

Mr. Lithgow arose and asked who this Mr. Angleman was? He is an entire stranger to me; the Mayor had promised to confer with the members of the Council as to these nominations, so they could act understandingly in the matter, but the Mayor had not kept his promise. Perhaps Mr. Simpson can give me some information as to Mr. Angleman.

Mr. Simpson stated that he knew Mr. Angleman; was once a partner with me; he is a good man, a good Republican, and a good Methodist. (Laughter.)

Mr. Lithgow said he was glad to be informed that Mr. Angleman was a good Republican and a good Methodist. He would surely get to Heaven. (Laughter.)

Mr. Simpson then stated that the party movement was showing itself again. At the outset the ticket was headed "No Partisan," but it does not show itself so now. If it is going to continue on in this way, "I'm going to git out!" I'm a Democrat, and I want to see the best men appointed to office, irrespective of party.

Mr. Lithgow said he did not want to draw the party line, and he intended to stand by the "non-partisan" movement, but he would like to be made acquainted of the gentlemen in nomination here this evening, so he might vote understandingly.

Messrs. Depew and Stover would like to be made aware of what promises the Mayor had made in reference to these nominations, to members of the Council.

Mr. Lithgow then stated that (if the gentlemen had not lost their memory or placed it on file) at a meeting held at the "Engine House," the Mayor promised to acquaint the members of the Council as to his nominations, and everything be settled satisfactorily, and he had not kept that promise.

Mr. Stover said he had never heard of the Mayor making any pledges. He believed he was entitled to nominate whom he saw fit and it was for the Council to confirm or reject. He was at the meeting at the Hose House, his ears was good and he did not hear the Mayor make any pledges. He was sorry to see matters take a party shape, but it was plain to be seen that the vote on Mr. Maxson was a strict party vote. If this is not the intention let any one say a word against Mr. Maxson's fitness for the office.

Mr. Coriell said he knew Mr. Angleman; was a good man; he wanted to do what was right; he was, at one time, a hearty supporter of Mr. Breen, but he could not support him at this time; he thought the present police force was good enough, but, of course, it was not for him to say as to that.

Mr. Stover then asked, how about Mr. Maxson? What was the matter with him?

Mr. Lithgow thought that that matter had already been settled, and would call for the vote on Mr. Angleman, which was as follows: Ayes—Coriell, Depew, Finch, Lithgow, Mayer, Redfield, Simpson, Stewart, Stover—9. Noes—Potts, 1. Mr. Angleman was then declared confirmed as St. Com'r.

For City Physician—H. H. Lowrie.

Who is Mr. Lowrie? was the question asked by a number of the Councilmen. Mr. Potts said he knew the gentleman; was an old resident and a good citizen, &c.

Mr. Stewart stated he would vote for all the names that Mayor Harper had sent in this evening; he had no doubt but that gentleman had carefully considered his nominations, and selected none but good men.

Mr. Finch would vote for those that he knew.

The vote on this nomination was as follows: Ayes—Coriell, Depew, Lithgow, Mayer, Potts, Redfield, Simpson, Stewart, Stover—9. Noes—Finch—1. The Pres. then declared H. H. Lowrie confirmed as City Physician.

For Overseer of the Poor—T. J. Gillies. Unanimously elected.

For Regular Policeman—Philip Breen. The vote on this nomination was as follows: Ayes—Depew, Mayer, Simpson, Stewart, Stover—5. Noes—Coriell, Finch, Lithgow, Potts, Redfield—5. Tie vote, the Pres. declaring the nomination not confirmed.

The remaining two names for Regular Policemen, Edward Laing and Geo. Eaton, were confirmed, they receiving a unanimous vote.

As to the Special Policemen, Mr. Stover moved they be elected in a body, which was agreed to, the vote being unanimous.

Mr. Finch presented report of City Judge Good for month of January, 1879. The number of arrests have been 8; men, 7, women, 1; crimes committed, assaults, 4, drunkenness, 2, rape, 1; reprimanded, 3, county jail, 3, discharged, 1, fined, 1; Nationalities, Irishmen, 3, colored Americans, 3, American, 1, German, 1. No tramps for the month. Applicants to the Poor Fund, 54, divided among the following nationalities: Irish, 18, colored Americans, 17, Americans, 12, Germans, 3, Frenchmen, 1, Scotch, 1, Nova Scotia, 1, Denmark, 1. On motion, report received and placed on file.

Mr. Redfield presented report for month of January, of T. J. Gillies, Overseer of Poor, stating that $193 18 had been expended for provisions, &c., for poor of the city. On motion, filed.

By the same—As correct from Alms Com., the following claims: Plainfield Relief Association, $4; Alex. M. Runyon, $15; D. Boehm & Bro., $6. On motion, claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Depew then offered the following in reference to the Rogers' claim:

Plainfield, Feb. 3, '79.

E. H. DEPEW,
Chairman Finance Com.

On motion, filed.

Mr. Lithgow, from Com. on Fire, Water and Lamps, reported favorable upon petition of Evan Jones to erect a one-story frame building on North Ave., opp. depot.

By the same—As correct from Com. on Sals., Offices & Elecn's, claim of Chamberlain & DeCamp, $20.

Mr. Lithgow stated that the Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps had received no proposal from Plainfield Gaslight Co., and would ask the Council what they should do in the matter.

Mr. Stover offered a res. that the Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps be instructed to make the same arrangements for lighting the lamps with this Company, the price not to exceed that paid per light last year. On motion, adopted.

Mr. Lithgow presented proposal of N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gaslight Co., wherein they state they will light their lamps for two months or one year, for $21 per lamp. On motion, referred to Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps.

Mr. Coriell, from Police Com., reported as correct the police claims presented this evening. On motion, claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Stover stated that no action had been taken by the Council as regards the report from Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps to the petition of Evan Jones to erect a frame building of one story on North Ave. He would therefore move that the recommendation of the Com. be adopted. So ordered.

Mr. Simpson, from Aud. Com., reported the following claims as correct: D. Boehm & Bro., $6; Chamberlain & DeCamp, $20; Alex. M. Runyon, $15; Plainfield Relief Ass'n, $4, and the police claims presented this evening.

Mr. Depew moved that these claims lie upon the table, as there was no money to pay them.

Mr. Lithgow thought that warrants should be ordered drawn, &c. After some further discussion, the motion of Mr. Depew was adhered to.

Mr. Finch presented a lengthy communication from Mr. A. D. Holmes, residing on Fifth St., referring to bad condition of cesspools, wells, pig sties, &c., in his immediate vicinity. On motion, referred to Com. on Sts. & Pub. Health.

Mr. Stewart moved that the vote on the resolution presented by Mr. Lithgow, in reference to the money election to be holden Tuesday, Feb. 11, 1879, at last meeting of Council, be reconsidered.

Mr. Stover thought that Mr. Stewart could not call for a reconsideration, as he voted against the resolution.

Mr. Stewart replied that he voted against Mr. Stover's amendment, but on the res., as amended, he voted with the majority, and would call for a reconsideration.

The chair sustained Mr. Stewart.

Mr. Stewart's motion not being seconded, Mr. Coriell moved that the amendment to the res. of Mr. Stover's, be reconsidered, as it was foreign to the res., &c. This motion was not seconded. After further discussion, and Mr. Stewart asking Mr. Coriell to second his motion, in order to get it before the Council, which he did, Mr. Stewart then stated that he was willing to admit of it when he made a mistake, and after careful consideration and a talk with a number of citizens on the subject, (of which two or three only had consented to vote for money) he thought the best thing the Council could do would be to reconsider the vote. Former Councils had attended to this matter of license without much trouble, and he thought the action of this Council on the license question, was cowardly, &c. Upon the question being called upon Mr. Stewart's motion, it was lost.

Mr. Stover offered a res. that the salary of the different officers of the city for the year 1879, be as follows: Corporation Counsel, $300; City Clerk, $300; St. Commissioner, $200; City Physician, $200; Overseer of Poor, $200, Janitor, $50, and special meetings, $2 extra. On motion, referred to Com. on Sals., Offices & Elec'ns.

Mr. Finch presented a res. that the Com. on Sts. solicit bids for the grading of Front St., filling up of gravel pits, &c. Adopted.

Mr. Finch offered the following:

Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 3, '79.

Whereas, The Collector has now a full list of all the delinquent taxpayers, therefore,

Resolved, The Corporation Counsel be directed to inform the Common Council at its next meeting, of the law in reference to printing in the city papers the names of all delinquent taxpayers, and the amount they owe for each year.

Mr. Lithgow moved as an amendment, "that the same be referred to Com. on Laws and Ordinances, and that said Com. act in conjunction with the Corporation Counsel." On motion, res. as amended, adopted.

Mr. Stover presented the following:

Whereas, It is understood that there are several applications or petitions in relation to certain streets of this city, which was referred by the Council of 1878 to their Street Committee, which were never acted upon, but still remain in the hands of the chairman of such Committee, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the City Clerk be instructed to obtain from the chairman of such Committee all petitions and papers in his hands pertaining to such matters, and present them to the Common Council at their next meeting, for their action.

On motion, adopted.

Mr. Stover moved that when this Council adjourn it adjourn to meet two weeks from to-night, (Feb. 16.) Carried.

Mr. Depew presented bond of Jeremiah VanWinkle, City Treas., which, on motion, was accepted and placed on file.

On motion, Council then adjourned.

Mr. Wm. Young.

The recent action of the New York Stock Exchange in placing the shares of mining companies on their Board to be dealt in on the same terms and with the same privileges as Railroad shares and Government bonds, opens a future for mining enterprise in this City which will rapidly make it a far better market for mining companies than San Francisco ever has been.

The Homestake Mine, the first mine whose shares were placed on the Board about a month ago, is a significant evidence of this. The shares of this company previous to its being placed on the Board were having a limited sale, and within the following four weeks one member only of the Stock Exchange sold over five thousand shares at an advance of eight dollars per share.

It is well to know that this radical change in the views of the managers of the Stock Exchange has been effected by the persistent efforts of a few of its members who knew the advantages it would bring to the mining interests of the country.

Mr. Wm. Euclid Young, of 60 Broadway, is one of those few who have succeeded in overcoming the prejudices of the Stock Board, and as a Mining Stock Broker and a highly esteemed member of the New York Stock Exchange, he has established a peculiarly strong claim on the support of the mining interest, and it is one which mine owners will not be slow in recognizing. Mr. Young has made the subject of forming and incorporating mining companies and placing them on the Stock Board his special study, and no man in New York is better able to conduct such negotiations to a successful issue. We understand that Mr. Young will lend his valuable assistance to the recently established Miners' Exchange, an institution—the only one of its kind yet formed—which is supported by many leading Western mine owners, and which is about to take a prominent part in mining enterprise in this city.

We take the above from the American Railroad Journal. Mr. Young, alluded to, has resided in Plainfield the past two years, and it is a pleasure to us to record such a flattering notice to him.

A Card.

The widow of the late James L. DeCamp desires us to thank the public through these columns for their kindness in assisting her in a pecuniary point of view through the Josh Billing's lecture given in her behalf, and especially to Postmaster Vail, the firemen, the Press and those who generously lent their aid and assistance in her behalf.

Driven Wells.

Whereas, B. F. Green, of New Jersey, is attempting to enforce the collection of royalties from parties using or making any kind of Pipe Wells; therefore all persons who feel interested are invited to assemble at Board of Trade Rooms, Plainfield, N. J., Friday evening, Feb. 7, at 7 o'clock, to take into consideration the best method of resisting this payment of royalties, of any amount whatever.

Dramatic Entertainment

The members of the Plainfield Reading Society will give a Dramatic Entertainment in aid of the Muhlenberg Hospital Fund at Assembly Hall, Thursday evening, Feb. 13, at which time our lovers of drama may be assured of witnessing a fine performance. AT the regular meeting of Gazelle Engine Co. No. 1, held Wednesday evening, Feb. 5th, Mr. Samuel R. Mooney, 1st Assistant foreman, was elected foreman of said company, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Wm. H. Egbert. Mr. A. Ten Eyck, declining the nomination for 1st assistant, David Lennon was elected to the position, and V. L. Frasee, Treasurer.

At the last regular meeting of Plainfield Lodge No. 44, I. O. O. F. the following was unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, Death has entered our midst and removed from among us, our beloved brother James L. DeCamp, as we earnestly trust to that Mansion not made with hands, Eternal in the Heavens; therefore,

Resolved, That under this dispensation of the Great Ruler of the Universe, in so suddenly removing from among us our esteemed and beloved brother, we cannot fail to recognize the warning, "be ye also ready."

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to this affliction to him "who doeth all things well," we sincerely tender our heartfelt sympathy and consolation to his family in this our mutual affliction;

Resolved, That our Lodge room be draped in mourning for the space of 30 days;

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his bereaved family and entered in full on the minutes of this Lodge and published in the city papers.

REPORTS OF STATE OFFICIALS.

INTERESTING FACTS AND FIGURES.

The State Treasurer's report for the year ending October 31st, shows that the State Fund received $1,282,619.21 during the year; the School Fund amounts to $2,901,017.44, of which $1,193,667.42 was derived from the school tax of 1877; the Agricultural College Fund $116,000; the Library Fund $4,661.58, and the War Debt Fund $2,196,300. The receipts from the State tax of one mill were $859,249.81, including $40,000 from 1876; from railroad $666,648.42; total, including receipts from other sources, $1,741,288.50. The disbursements during the year were $1,723,480.72, leaving a surplus of $17,752.78.—Among the disbursements were: For public schools $209,000; public debt $172,208.59; court expenses, $80,591.02; Legislature $74,719.89; State Lunatic Asylums $68,257.72; militia $66,020.44; advertising $61,912.23; printing $42,191.26; salaries State officials $31,111.24; county lunatic asylums $30,128.32; pensions $19,047.87; State Prison maintenance $61,904.52; ditto extension $58,994.12; ditto salaries $54,658.71; ditto repairs $14,436.02; Home for Disabled Soldiers $57,290.37; support of deaf, dumb, blind and feeble-minded $54,384.95; Reform School $45,613.67; preservation of the peace $33,690.38; State House expenses $15,308.09; Normal School $15,000; fisheries interests $6,742.71. The report is very interesting in its numerous details. Among the notable facts is that 14 members and officers of the Legislature drew a portion of their salaries amounting to $2,030, within two weeks of the beginning of the session.

THE SINKING FUND.

The report of the Sinking Fund Commissioners does not contain a very clear statement of the condition of the fund and is in strong contrast with other State documents in that respect. From it there appears to have been $1,331,849.62 to the credit of the State Oct. 31st, 1877, while the amount on hand Oct. 31st. 1878, was $1,379,797. Of this amount $1,227,717 is out on bond and mortgage, on which $80,042.96 interest is due. The remainder of the amount is invested in lands bought in under foreclosure, balances in bank, notes of various parties, with $90,837.50 in Government bonds. The fund appears to be in a condition which would make it difficult to realize upon under a long period of time.

REFORM SCHOOL.

The fourteenth annual report of the State Reform School has been presented to the Legislature. Regarding the epidemic of typhoid fever the report states that it was due to bad water and defective drainage, which have been remedied. Of the 125 patients, only three died. The number of boys in the institution Oct. 31st, 1877, was 247; number received 124; number disposed of during the year, 94; remaining Oct. 31st, 1878, 277. The expenses during the year have been $35,284.53, and receipts from the shirt factory and other sources were $9,936.55. The cost of inmates per capita per annum was $92.27, and per day twenty-five cents. The number of boys committed from Essex county during the year was 16.

The State Industrial School for Girls cost $6,249.94 for the year ending Oct. 31st, 1878. At the last report 28 girls were under the care of the school; 18 have been admitted since; 6 have been returned; 10 have been indentured or returned to their homes, and 1 died, leaving 39 now in school. The children have made a large number of garments, and have been instructed in wholesome knowledge.

The Commissioners to select a site and build an Asylum for the Insane (at Morristown) report that they have spent $40,808.56, and have a balance of $5,241.75 on the appropriation.

The State Librarian reports 23,713 books now in the library, an increase of 1,691 since last year, of which 161 were from purchase. The affairs of the library are now managed by a Board, consisting of the Governor, Chancellor, Chief Justice, Secretary of State, Treasurer and Comptroller.

Judge Settle gave a just but startling display of the majesty of the law by sentencing the members of the Democratic Canvassing Board of Brevard county, Florida, to the penitentiary for falsifying the election returns. It is the first instance that we can recall when such an offense has been published in the South since the war, and the fact that the Democratic officials who have been so suddenly overtaken by justice simply imitated the frauds of the Republican Canvassers of Florida in 1876, is an aggravation rather than an excuse for the crime. True, the Republican officials of Florida who committed like frauds of a much graver nature have been rewarded with public honors and emoluments by the President whose place was secured by their lawlessness, while the Democratic Canvassers who followed the Republican precedents in so humble way have gone to prison; but justice had to begin somewhere, and it matters not what the political faith of the accused parties is if they are guilty. Judge Settle has made a wholesome precedent, and one that is likely to become a finger-board for both Federal and State courts in the South in the prosecution and punishment of election frauds. The statue of limitations protects many who have set the boldest and most flagrant examples of election frauds in the South, and the criminals are filling lucrative official positions as the reward of their crimes; but time makes all things even, and the day is not distant when the Brevard county convicts will find their prison a refuge from the hissing scorn that will make the electoral criminals of 1876 shunned by every decent citizen and driven out as wanderers upon the earth.—Philadelphia Times.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

PUBLISHING THE LAWS.

Apropos of the periodical grumbling on this subject, the Newark Register says with truth and force:

We believe that all laws and ordinances should have the widest publicity, and that the State and city should pay therefore. It is information of value to the general public of a public nature. By publishing the laws of the season in each legal paper in the State every citizen knows exactly what it is unlawful for him to do. Ignorance is no plea for justification, but at the same time we believe it the duty of the State to inform its citizens of the passage of laws affecting their interest of welfare.

NEW JERSEY NOMINATIONS.

TRENTON, Jan. 28, 1879.

The joint republican Legislative caucus to-night nominated George M. Wright, the present incumbent, for State Treasurer for a term of three years. His opponents were ex-Senators Hays, of Essex, and Hill, of Morris. The first ballot stood—Wright, 22; Hays, 13; Hill 9. Second ballot—Wright. 29; Hays, 11; Hill 4. Chas. A. Butts, of Burlington county, was nominated for State Director of Railroads and Canals.

The democratic caucus nominated A. P. McMichael, of Burlington, for State Treasurer, he receiving 21 votes to 8 for B. C. Bogert, of Bergen. The present incumbent (Paterson) was nominated for State Director of Railroads and Canals. The republican nominees will be elected, as their party are in the majority.

THE LAW OF NATURE.

A very rich old man who had married a young wife died suddenly, upon which the widow raved like a maniac, and exclaimed, to the doctor, who stood by the bedside of the departed, "O, I'll not believe that my dear partner is dead; he could not die and leave me! No, no, he's alive; I'm sure he's alive. Tell me, doctor, don't you think so?" "Madam," replied the medical man, with much gravity, "I confess that I have the means by which he may be revived. I will apply the galvanic battery." "O, no, no!" cried the grief-stricken widow. "Hard as it is to bear my fate, I will have no experiments against the law of nature. Let him rest in peace."

NEW YORK, Jan. 27,—The strange disappearance of numbers of letters from the post-office of this city led Special Agent Sharretts to station men in the gallery which overlooks the rotunda, where the employees are at work, who were rewarded by seeing a carrier named John Flood, leave the table where he was sorting his letters and walk towards another table some distance away. When passing along the sorted boxes they saw him take several letters from each and slip them into his pocket. Mr. Sharretts at once arrested the carrier, and in his pockets found twenty-one letters, some opened, and others unopened, all of which he had abstracted from the mails. When arrested, the prisoner was completely overcome and made a full confession. In his pockets were found $42 in money, which he said he had taken from letters. He confessed that he had been stealing letters for over two months, and had taken therefrom about three hundred dollars.

USEFUL TO THE HOUSEWIFE.

FOWLS IN WINTER.

TO HAVE EGGS WHEN EGGS ARE DEAR.

I assume to be at the great secret of successful poultry keeping, and outside of the ranks of those specialties whose business and aim is to breed and sell valuable and fancy varieties of fowls, it is the laudable ambition of a majority of poultry keepers. For this reason I have given most attention to the egg producing side of the poultry question. I have often thought that there was a certain parallel existing between the production of eggs and that of milk, and that if poultry keepers would recognize it, they would be more generally successful. For the profitable production of milk, a certain race, a certain system of feeding, care and handling have been shown to be absolutely necessary. The Jerseys, Ayshires and Holsteins are celebrated for milk; the Short-Horns, Herefords and the Scotch polled for beef—and though the breeders and specialists of each claim for each, the qualities of all, common sense and common experience teach that for the best butter we must go to the Jersey or its crosses, for cheese to the Ayrshire or the Holstein, for heavy beef and fat beef to the Short-Horn, for better beef to the Hereford, and for the choicest beef of all, to the Scotch Polled race. So in regard to fowls; the non-sisters, the Black and White Spanish, or Leghorns, the Houdans, Crevecoeurs and LaFleche, originally bred in Catholic countries, where eggs as an article of food have a value and significance we cannot justly estimate, have so exclusively been bred with the principal aim at eggs, that the natural tendency to sit has been pretty nearly obliterated—these are, par excellence, the egg-producing races; while the Asiatics, recently taken from a region of almost perpetual summer, and having had insect and other food without limit, have developed the muscular and locomotive system, and in the matter of egg-production and an obstinate determination to sit, they are little removed from the wild fowl of the jungle. After these facts and considerations, it would seem as reasonable then, that if a poultry keeper wanted eggs, he should select from the non-sitting races, and if dressed fowls for market, he should choose from the Asiatics, and it is for the dairyman to obtain for his business the Jersey, Holstein or the Ayrshire, or the grazier and feeder to confine himself to the Short-Horn, the Hereford or the Scotch Polled.

I obtained, the other day, a striking illustration of the similarity there is in food best suited to egg and to milk production, in course of a brief talk with a milkman of a neighboring city. To my inquiry as to what he was feeding his cows during the present scarcity and high price of grain and fodder, he said, "Bran and timothy hay." I farther inquired what food had he the choice, his experience had taught him would make the most and best milk, and keep the cows in good healthy milk producing condition. His instant answer was: "Ground and wheat screenings and carefully cured and dried clover hay!" What he had found best for making fowls lay. But then his experience tallied with in another direction—in this, that my fowls are as fond of clover as his cows, and will pick off every leaf, and even the young blossoms, when it is distributed to them as a part of their rations. But I must not neglect to state that according to the authorities, early cut and cured clover contains from 6 to 8 per cent. of phosphate.

In concluding this letter, but not in finishing this subject, let me state how my fowls have been fed and cared for since the the 1st of November. They are confined in a low, rough built shed, say 20 feet square. It is banked up two feet, except on the south side, which is stalled up so as to admit the light and air. It is divided in the middle—the fowls feeding on one side and roosting on the other. Under the roosts it is littered, so the fowls can stand with comfort, or sit with warm feet, in the coldest weather. Twice a day they are fed wheat screenings, at 7 and 4 o'clock, and their rations are so short that a considerable share of the chess seed there contained is eaten. They are supplied with hard water at the time of feeding, heated as warm as they can sup it. Every other day, a hodful of soft coal ashes, taken from a slow-consuming, open Franklin stove, is thrown on the feeding side of the shed. Two or three times a week, they are fed chopped onions (of which they are extravagantly fond), or scalded potatoes or turnips, and as often clover hay. About every four days, they are supplied with a piece of old, uneatable, but not decomposed, clear pork—they eating a 4-inch cube of it during that time. They are not allowed to go abroad when there is snow on the ground, or when it rains, or when they will get their feet wet—in short, they seldom go out except in such weather as it would be agreeable for you or me to saunter leisurely about. I have given the reason for feeding wheat screenings; why I feed onions and scalded vegetables, hard, warm water, soft coal ashes, salt pork, and keep them up in all but the pleasantest weather, I will try also to give the reason for by and by.—E. F. J., in the Country Gentleman.

CAUTION!
The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.
"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and council were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

TWO KISSES.

When I made a visit home,
And stole up stairs, good fortune leading,
I saw, or rather thought I saw,
My sister in the study reading.

With noiseless tread I forward crept,
With schemes of mischief most imprudent;
And leaning o'er the arm-chair's back,
I softly kissed the gentle student.

She turned to fly with burning face,
As if a brother's kiss polluted—
Rapture! 'Twas not my sister Lu,
But Cousin Amy I'd saluted.

Of course I then began to beg
She would excuse my having kissed her;
Protesting that, upon my word,
I really thought it was my sister.

A conversation followed next,
Whose theme, be sure, was not the weather;
And then a very blissful pair
Seated well, rather close together.

And Amy with her roguish way,
When for the second time I kissed her,
Said, archly looking up to me,
Are you quite sure it's not your sister?"

Copied for THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

HUMOROUS ACCOUNT OF AMERICAN WHITEWASHING.

BY THE LATE DR. FRANKLIN.—NOT PUBLISHED IN HIS WORKS.

SIR:—My wish is to give you some account of the people of these new States, but I am far from being qualified for the purpose, having as yet seen little more than the cities of New York, and Philadelphia, I have discovered but few national singularities among them. Their customs and manners are nearly the same with those of England, which they have long been said to copy. For, previous to the revolution, the Americans were from their infancy, taught to look up to the English as patterns of perfection in all things. I have observed, however, one custom, which, for aught I know, is peculiar to this country. An account of it will serve up the remainder of this sheet, and may afford you some amusement.

When a young couple are about to enter into the matrimonial state, a never failing article in the marriage-treaty is, that the lady shall have and enjoy the free and unmolested exercise of the rights of whitewashing with all its ceremonials, privileges, and appurtenances. A young woman would forego the most advantageous connections, and even disappoint the warmest wish of her heart, rather than resign the invaluable right. You will wonder what this privilege of whitewashing is; I will endeavor to give you some idea of the ceremony as I have seen it performed.

There is no season of the year in which the lady may not claim her privilege, if she pleases; but the latter end of May is most generally fixed upon for the purpose. The attentive husband may judge by certain prognostics when the storm is nigh at hand. When the lady is unusually fretful finds fault with the servants, is discontented with the children and complains much of the filthiness of everything about her—these are signs which ought not to be neglected; yet they are not decisive, as they sometimes come on and go off, without producing any farther effect. But if, when the husband rises in the morning, he should observe in the yard a wheel-barrow with a quantity of lime in it, or should see certain buckets with lime dissolved in water there is then no time to be lost; he immediately locks up the apartment or closet where his papers or his private property are kept, and putting the key in his pocket, he takes himself to flight; for a husband, however beloved, becomes a perfect nuisance during this season of female rage; his authority is superseded, his commission is suspended, and the very scullion who cleans the brasses in the kitchen becomes of more consequence and importance than him. He has nothing for it, but to abdicate and turn from an evil which he can neither prevent nor mollify. The husband gone, the ceremony begins

The walls are in a few minutes stripped of their furniture; paintings, prints, and looking-glasses, lie in a huddled heap about the floor; the curtains are torn from the testers, the beds crammed into the windows; chairs, and tables, bedsteads and cradles crowd the yard; and the garden fence bends beneath the weight of carpets, blankets, cloth cloaks, old hats, and ragged breeches. Here may be seen the lumber of the kitchen, forming a dark and confused mass; for the fore-ground of the picture, gridirons and frying-pans, rusty-shovels and broken tongs spits and pots, joint-stools, and the fractured remains of rush-bottomed chairs. There a closet has disgorged its bowels, cracked tumblers, broken wine-glasses, phials of forgotten physic, papers of unknown powders, seeds and dried herbs, handfuls of old corks, tops of tea-pots, and stoppers of departed decanters; from the rag-hole in the garret to the rag hole in the cellar, no place escapes unrummaged. It would seem as if the day of general doom was come, and the utensils of the house were dragged forth to judgment. In this tempest the words of Lear naturally present themselves, and might with some alteration, be made strictly applicable:

Let the great gods that keep this dreadful pudder
o'er our heads;
Find out their enemies now; tremble, thou wretch
That hast within thee undivulged crimes unwhipt of justice; close pent-up guilt
Raise your concealing continents and ask these dreadful summoners grace!

This ceremony completed, and the house thoroughly evacuated, the next operation is to smear the walls and ceilings of every room and closet with brushes dipped in a solution of lime, called whitewash; to pour buckets of water over every floor, and scratch all the partitions and wainscots with rough brushes wet with soap-suds, and dipped in stone-cutters' sand. The windows by no means escape the general deluge. A servant scrambles out upon the pent-house at the risk of her neck, and with a mug in her hand, and bucket within reach, she dashes away innumerable gallons of water against the glass-panes, to the great annoyance of passengers in the street. I have been told that an action at law was once brought against one of these water nymphs, by a person who had a new suit of clothes spoiled by this operation; but after a long argument, it was determined by the whole court that the action would not lie, in as much as the defendant was in the exercise of a legal right, and not answerable for the consequences; and so the poor gentleman was doubly non-suited; for he lost not only his suit of clothes, but his suit at law.

These smearings and scratchings, washings and dashings, being duly performed, the next ceremonial is to cleanse and replace the distracted furniture. You may have seen a house-raising, or a ship-launch, when all the hands within reach are collected together; recollect, if you can, the hurry, bustle, confusion and noise of such a scene, and you will have some idea of this cleaning match. The misfortune is, that the sole object is to make things clean; it matters not how many useful, ornamental, or valuable articles are mutilated or suffer death under the operation; a mahogany chair and carved frame undergo the same discipline; they are to be made clean at all events; but their preservation is not worthy of attention. For instance, a large engraving is laid flat on the floor; smaller prints are piled upon it, and the superincumbent weight cracks the glasses of the lower tier; but this is of no consequence. A valuable picture is placed leaning against the sharp corner of a table; others are made to lean against that, until the pressure of the whole forces the corner of the table through the canvas of the first. The frame and glass of a fine print are to be cleaned; the spirit and oil used on this occasion are suffered to leak through and spoil the engraving; no matter; if the glass is clean and the frame shine, it is sufficient; the rest is not worthy of consideration. An able arithmetician has made an accurate calculation, founded on long experience, and has discovered that the losses and destruction incident to two whitewashings are equal to one removal, and three removals to one fire. The cleaning frolic over, matters begin to resume their pristine appearance. The storm abates, and all would be well again; but it is impossible that so great a convulsion, in so small a community, should not produce some further effects. For two or three weeks after the operation the family are usually afflicted with sore throats or sore eyes; occasioned by the caustic quality of the lime, or with severe colds from the exhalations of wet floors or damp walls.

I knew a gentleman who was fond of accounting for everything in a philosophical way. He considers this, which I have called a custom, as a real periodical disease, peculiar to the climate. His train of reasoning is ingenious and whimsical; but I am not at leisure to give you a detail. The result was, that he found the distemper to be incurable, but after much study he conceived he had discovered a method to divert the evil he could not subdue.

For this purpose, he caused to be erected a small building in his garden, about twelve feet square, and furnished with some ordinary chairs and tables, and a few prints of the cheapest sort were hung against the walls. His hope was that when the whitewashing frenzy seized the females of his family, they might repair to this apartment and scrub and scour, and smear to their hearts' content; and so spend the violence of the disease in this out post, while he enjoyed himself in quiet at headquarters. But the experiment did not answer his expectations; it was impossible it should, since a principal part of the gratification consists in the lady's having an uncontrolled right to torment her husband at least once a year, and to turn him out of doors, and take the reins of government into her own hands.

There is a much better contrivance than this of the philosopher; which is to cover the walls of the house with paper; this is generally done; and though it cannot abolish, it at least shortens the period of female dominion. The paper is decorated with flowers of various fancies, and made so ornamental that the women have admitted the fashion without perceiving the design.

There is also another alleviation of the husband's distress; he generally has the privilege of a small room or closet for his books and papers, they key of which he is allowed to keep. This is considered as a privileged place, and stands like the land of Goshen amid the plagues of Egypt. But then he must be extremely cautious and ever on his guard. For should he inadvertently go abroad and leave the key in his door, the housemaid who is always on the watch for such an opportunity, immediately enters in triumph with buckets, brooms and brushes, takes possession of the premises and forthwith puts all his books and papers to rights, to his utter confusion, and sometimes serious detriment. For instance: A gentleman was sued by the executors of a tradesman, on a charge found against him in the deceased's books to the amount of 30 l. The defendant was strongly impressed with an idea that he had discharged the debt and taken a receipt, but as the transaction was of long standing, he knew where to find the receipt. The suit went on in court, and the time approached when judgment would be obtained against him. He then sat seriously down to examine a bundle of old papers which he had untied and displayed on a table for that purpose. In the midst of his search he was suddenly called away on business of importance; he forgot to lock the door of his room. The housemaid who had been long looking out for such an opportunity, immediately entered with the usual implements, and with great alacrity fell to cleaning the room and putting things to rights. The first object that struck her eye was the confused state of the papers on the table; these were without delay bundled together like so many dirty knives and forks; but in the action a small piece of paper fell unnoticed on the floor, which happened to be the very receipt in question; as it had no very respectable appearance, it was soon after swept out with the common dirt of the room and carried in a rubbish pan in the yard. The tradesman had neglected to enter the credit in his book; the defendant could find nothing to obviate the charge, and so judgment went against him for the debt and costs. A fortnight after the whole was settled and the money paid, one of the children found the receipt among the rubbish in the yard.

There is also another custom peculiar to the city of Philadelphia, and nearly allied to the former; I mean that of washing the pavement before the doors every Saturday evening. I at first took this to be a regulation of the police, but on further inquiry, find it is a religious rite, preparatory to the Sabbath, and is, I believe, the only religious rite in which the numerous secretaries of this city perfectly agree. The ceremony begins about sunset and continues till about ten or eleven at night. It is very difficult for a stranger to walk the streets on those evenings; he runs a continual risk of having a bucket of dirty water thrown against his legs; but a Philadelphian born is so much accustomed to the danger, that he avoids it with surprising dexterity. It is from this circumstance that a Philadelphian may be known any where by his gait. The streets of New York are paved with rough stones; these indeed are not washed, but the dirt is so thoroughly swept from before the doors that the stones stand up sharp and prominent, to the great inconvenience of those who are not accustomed to so rough a path But habit reconciles everything. It is diverting enough to see a Philadelphian at New-York; he walks the street with as much painful caution as if his toes were covered with corks, or his feet lamed with the gout, while a New Yorker, as little approving the plain masonry of Philadelphia, shuffles along the pavement like a parrot on a mahogany table. It must be acknowledged that the ablutions I have mentioned are attended with no small inconveniences; but the women could not be induced for any consideration to resign their privilege. Notwithstanding this, I can give you the strongest assurance that the women of America make the most faithful wives, and the most attentive mothers in the world; and I am sure you will join me in opinion, that if a married man is made miserable only one week in the whole year, he will have no great cause to complain of the matrimonial bond.

I am, &c.
DR. FRANKLIN.

—The Boots Magazine, May, 1787.

* * *

A matter-of-fact man was told by his doctor to put a check on his stomach if he wished to live long and to be happy. He went immediately to his tailor, who filled the prescription by making him a plaid vest.

THE FIRE-FIEND.

Grandfather Lickshingle broke the silence as follows:

"I tell what it is, children, there's no use talkin'. The newspaper men of to-day can't sling ink with their grandfathers. They're degeneratin'. This country sees no graphic writin' like it did when your grand father was ridin' the editorial tripod like a witch astride the gale. I know of no place that affords a better field for descriptive writin' than these very oil regions. Why the fires you have here can't be beat—exceptin', of course, beyond the tomb.

When I hear of one of these conflagrations I just ache to take my pen in hand and describe it in my own graphic style."

Grandfather closed his eyes, swayed to and fro on his easy chair, while his face glowed with enthusiasm. He seemed to be in a transport of joy.

"Bring forth my good gray quill," he said, "and let me paint the burning town."

One of the children said he thought grandfather was going to have a fit; father said he was only in the newspaper business, in his imagination, at a salary of a thousand dollars a week, but would soon be all right.

"'Tis night. Fire! fire! fire!" said grandfather, rapidly tracing a sheet of imaginary paper with a goose-quill of the mind "Fire! fire! fire! and the affrighted winds took up the cry. The fire-fiend, with his sword of flame, was seen leapin from the back window of a bake-shop, breathin' smoke and forked lightnin' from his nostrils. In an instant the sleepin' city was out on the floor barkin' its shins on chairs and things in a mad hunt after its pantaloons Hush! hark! The fire-fiend rushes on and on like a war-horse leavin' destruction in his trail. Look! he scales the side of yonder grocery, even as a kitchen maid would scale a fish, an' with his fiery, forked tongue licks the paint offen the buildin'. See! like the hungry holocost that he is, he is lickin' up the sign: 'Salt mackerel, bacon, flour, feed an' provisions,' as if he hadn't tasted a bite for a month. See him leap to the eaves of my ladies bower an' gorge himself upon the gingerbread work of the cornices. Now he hurls his body through the windows of yonder residence, ransacks the premises, an' escapes like a rocket through the roof. He turns somersaults from housetop to housetop, knockin' off chimney pots, dances a jig on the hot shingles, like the boy on the burnin' deck, and without as much as a 'look out behind' raise a shower of sparks upon the heads of the panic-stricken populace. But see him now! He spits upon his calloused hands and scoots up the liberty-pole like a cat up an apple tree. Up! up! up! Higher! higher! higher! Higher and yet higher! Higher than the price of butter, until now with one fiery foot he tip-toes it upon the topmost tip, the while he flings his arms of flame about him like a village lawyer makin a Fourth of July oration. Now he places his thumb to his nose, and with his extended fingers describes a circle in the face of the man in the moon, while he laps his forked tongue about the American flag and swallows it before a loyal people can shoot him on the spot."

THE BABY.

"What animal is this?"

"This is a baby. He is now about 3 years old, and at the wickedest point of his earthly career."

"What countries does the baby most inhabit?"

"He can be found in every inhabited country on the globe, the same as mosquitoes and boils."

"Can they be tamed?"

"Yes, quite easily. After a little judicious discipline they cease to struggle, and become subservient to the will of man."

"Does the baby eat grass?"

"Yes, or anything else. They swallow pocket-knives, thimbles, buttons, spools or any other object a little smaller than a teacup. If offered milk they seldom refuse it."

"Do they graze during the day, or only at night?"

"They are always grazing, paying not the least heed to the hour. When not actually eating they generally give utterance to a peculiar cry. Strong men often jump out of bed at midnight in the coldest weather when hearing this cry."

"What meaning is attached to this cry?"

"Men of deepest thought have agreed that it signifies to wake up the neighborhood and have some fun."

"Of what benefit to man is a domesticated baby?"

"They are of no earthly account for the first few years, but by and by they can slide down cellar doors and carry articles out of the house and trade them for a wooden sword or lose them in the grass."

"Do you know any instances where the baby has attacked the household and killed or injured anyone?"

"Such instances have been related by such eminent naturalists as George Francis Train and Texas Jack, but we don't put much faith in them. However if the baby was maliciously and persistently provoked there's no knowing what it might do."

"Are they a healthy animal?"

"No, on the contrary, no druggist could make enough profit in a year to buy him a pair of Arctic overshoes but for the presence of the baby in every household. There is hardly an hour in the day that the baby does not demand peppermint, paregoric, milk, sugar, cordial, cod liver emulsion, ipecac, or something else costing money."

"What machinery is made use of to compel the baby to take a dose of castor oil?"

"There are several patent machines for the purpose, but most people follow the old rule of knocking him senseless and getting the dose into his mouth before he recovers."

"Is the bald-headed baby more domestic than others?"

"Not a bit. He kicks around after the same fashion, and has even a worse time fighting flies and mosquitoes."

"What music do they seem to prefer?"

"A bass drum is their first choice, but they have a heavy leaning towards the sound of the stove handle knocking the nose off the pitcher with the emptyings in it. This is all about the baby. Take another look at him, for next week we shall write of some other reptile.—Detroit Free Press.

WHAT IS "TUCKING?"

A bothered-looking citizen came into the Gazette office and respectfully asked to be let look at the dictionary. He sat down and rather anxiously thumbed Webster awhile.

"What word are you looking for?" asked a reporter, seeing that the stranger had failed to strike the trail.

"Well," said the man in a burst of confidence, "you see I've only been married a short time, and my wife's gone up to Truckee on a visit, and she's written to me to look in the bottom of her trunk for a lot of 'tucking' and send it to her. Now, what I want to know is what in blazes is 'tucking?' It ain't in the dictionary."

"Tucking?" said the reporter, briskly, "why, tucking is the stuff that girls make by poking a sort of short-turned fish-hook through a hole and catching the thread and drawing it back again."

Then the editor spoke up contemptuously, and said that a man who was so ignorant as that ought to hold his tongue. What the reporter had described was crocheting. Everybody ought to know what tucking was. The ladies in making it use a little contrivance shaped like a mussle, with thread wound up inside of it. Tucking could be purchased, he believed, for 10 or 15 cents a yard, and why intelligent girls should waste a whole day in making what they could get for a short bit was more than he could understand. In answer to a question from the admiring reporter, the editor said he had been told that tucking was used in trimming the undergarments of the fair sex, but why things should be ornamented which a fellow would get licked for trying to look at—or perhaps shot—was beyond his comprehension.

The married stranger said the editor was mistaken; but that the article he mentioned was not tucking—it was tatting. This he knew for a fact.

The editor observed that when a man came to the Gazette office for information the editor, when he gave it, didn't like to be told he lied. If the stranger wanted to avoid trouble he had better get out and go to the d—l. As the editor had grown red in the face and his eyes were blazing the married stranger coughed feebly and slunk down stairs.

The deadlock in the Common Council of Elizabeth was broken Thursday evening. Alderman Cory was declared elected President. Much excitement prevailed upon the announcement.

Mr. Paddie has introduced in the House of Representatives a bill to aid in the construction of a ship canal across Bergen Neck, in the county Hudson, in the State of New Jersey, to connect with the waters of the Bay of New York with the waters of Newark Bay, and to shorten the water route between the port of New York and the port of Newark, N. J.

The New Jersey Southern Railroad having passed into the possession of the New Jersey Central, a special meeting of the directors of the latter was held on Saturday, to decide upon plans in connection with the consolidation. The result of the meeting was refused for publication, but Judge Lathrop intimated that full details of all arrangements would be given out at an early date.

It is a remarkable fact that from 1789 down to the present time—a period of ninety years—the post of Secretary of the Senate of the United States has been held by but six persons. Massachusetts and New Hampshire furnished the Secretaries from 1789 to 1825 or thirty-six years; Pennsylvania from 1825 to 1868, or forty-three years; and California since 1868, with Gorman, the present incumbent.

The Finance Committee of the Board of Freeholders of Middlesex county, N. J., have been instructed to examine the books of the county collectors from 1872. Freeholder Sweeny, mover of the resolution, contends that there is a deficiency of $28,000 somewhere. This allegation has brought out a prompt denial by Hart Moore, the late County Collector, who states that he holds vouchers for every dollar expended during his term of office.

Some inquiry having arisen as to whether the Governor could fill the vacancies after the Legislature adjourns, if the Governor and Senate cannot agree upon the Law Judges to be appointed in the counties of Essex, Mercer, Middlesex and Monmouth, it will depend upon whether or not the vacancies occur while the Legislature is in session. If the terms expire before the Legislature adjourns sine die, the Governor cannot fill the vacancies.

A complete re-organization of the Hudson County Democracy has been effected. By a mutual understanding the Democratic General Committee resigned, and a Constitution and rules, providing of a new Committee, adopted, the delicate task of appointment being imposed upon United States Senator McPherson. That gentleman cheerfully accepted the duty, and fulfilled it to the satisfaction of all concerned.—New Committees have been formed, under the management of which it is hoped that the Democracy of Hudson will be hereafter united and harmonious.

The citizens of Orange N. J., have issued a call, irrespective of party, for a public meeting to take action with reference to the approaching charter election. They believe the affairs of the city can better be administered by a non-partisan Council. The Journal says:—"We have always believed in and advocated non-partisanship in matters appertaining to the municipality, believing it to be the only plan by which the best interests of the city can be served." So did we believe and advocate a few months since in Plainfield, and a large majority of our citizens elected a "non-partisan" Council, but oh, Lordy, how they went back on the "natives" when voting time came on Democrats. You, might try it, however, Mr. Journal, and if you succeed, and your non-partisan Council turns out any better than ours, why publish it.

The Passaic City Herald which last Fall was an earnest advocate of the Greenback cause, and did its best to gain voters for that party now has this to say:

"The Greenbackers as a party, may be set down as defunct—played out—and as dead as a leading party as last year's rag weed. We dislike to speak disrespectfully of our friends; but we will say this, that of all the fools attempting to form a party, our late Greenback fools was the greenest and most foolish. In our State the thirty-nine thousand Greenbackers outside of Smith's (Trenton) district, were drawn almost entirely from the Democratic party. The figures show this. The effect was to elect several Republican Congressmen and to give the Republicans the Legislature of a State which is Democratic by at least fifteen thousand. No Democrat, unless of the sort wearing the ears of a political mule, will be hoodlumed like this again. The Democrats in the movement honestly believed in the sincerity of their Republican Greenbackers. Almost to a man the Republicans on election day voted with their party, whilst the Democrats acted in good faith. The result is the Democrats lost everything and the Greenbackers got nothing, and the Republicans carried off the spoils of victory, and at Trenton failed to recognize a single Greenbacker in organizing the Legislature, and even gave the doorkeepership to a negro whilst refusing the slightest recognition of the Greenback element—which really won them the election."

This is just the way we argue dwith the Democratic Greenbackers and the shallow results only carried out our expectations.

THE VERDICT OF THE PEOPLE.

The election thrust upon the people by the Common Council last Tuesday, resulted, as we predicted it would, in a majority of the people voting against "Money." Despite the fact that misrepresentations have been made regarding the financial condition of the city, the question of "License" brought into the canvass to mislead the temperance voters, pulpit orations, extra newspapers and circulars issued, and every means available brought to bear on the election by the prohibition party, the people have rendered a verdict against them in emphatic terms. As it was claimed by the advocates of "Money" that the question of License was the issue, and the people having thus thrown the question back upon Council, it now remains for that body to accept the issue and act accordingly. It is no misfortune that the Council have been refused the extra appropriation of $5,000 asked for, when it is understood that they have the means within their power to raise sufficient funds for expenses the current year, not only by granting licenses but by collecting the unpaid back taxes. It was against the people's moral convictions to vote to further tax their purses, when the Council had not the moral courage to perform their duties as it was expected they would when they were elected to office. The lesson of the election is a plain one. Let our City Fathers profit thereby.

MR. TILDEN'S DENIAL.

NEW YORK, FEB. 8.—The Cipher Investigating Committee met this morning. At 11:15 ex-Gov. Tilden came in, accompanied by his brother, and Messrs. Bigelow and Dimmock. Mr. Tilden came in smiling, and took his seat quietly. He was at once sworn by Chairman Hunton, who said:

Governor, we received your note, expressing your willingness to testify.

Governor Tilden—I have a cold and cannot speak very loud. He then proceeded to testify as follows: The publication and translations of ciphers in New York papers I have read; I did not recognize a single document, either in cipher or translation, that I had ever seen before; I never entered into any arrangements to purchase the votes of South Carolina or Florida; I had no information, no suspicion that any such communications were being carried on until I saw despatches published in the New York Tribune; I had no knowledge, no dealings with any parties to these negotiations. On the morning of November 20, 1876, Mrs. Pelton mentioned in my presence that her husband had gone for the day. I did not know he had gone, or was going out of the city. He went to Philadelphia, I believe. Later in the day I was called upon by Mr. Cooper, who was on his way down town, and was told by him that he had received an offer from some party offering to obtain for money the vote of South Carolina. I said I would authorize no such transaction, nor spend money for any such purpose. The whole conversation occupied only a few minutes. I obtained Colonel Pelton's address in Baltimore, and telegraphed him to come back. I knew nothing of the ciphers that had been passing between him and others, and I could not have translated them. With regard to Florida, I never saw one of the telegrams, either in cipher or in translation. I did not know I was not informed even, that any negotiations were going on in regard to obtaining illegally the certificates of the Returning Board. Sometimes Mr. Marble called on and told me in a casual kind of way about the corruption of the Florida Returning Board. I never saw, I here repeat, any, a single one, of those despatches relating to Florida, either in cipher or translation. In relation to the Oregon despatches I did not know they came in cipher, until after the meeting of the Committee appointed to investigate them. Some of the despatches were addressed to my residence, No. 15 Grammercy Park. I do not know that any of those despatches were ever delivered there. Colonel Pelton's habits of mind and mine are very different.—A day or two after election General Grant wrote me a letter recommending that the Committee should go South to see a fair count. I had nothing to do with the selection of those Committees. I never heard from them but once, and that was in a communication signed by Mr. Ottendorfer and others. I was very busy all that time, and did not undertake to correct matters. The idea that they were my personal agents has no foundation whatever. They represented the Democratic party.—None of them as far as I know went to these States authorized to do anything that gentlemen might not do.—From the 7th of November, 1876, and December 6th of the same year, under no circumstances did I enter into any competition to secure an electoral certificate by venal inducements. There was never one hour nor one minute in which I entertained any such thought. To the people who, as I believe, elected me President of the United States, and to the 4,000,000 citizens who were defrauded of their right of suffrage, I owed the duty of proclaiming that I would not yield one jot or title of my right. Whatever evils may result from this subversion of the electoral system, I resolved I would enter into no auction for the purchase of the Chief Magistracy of the Republic. (Loud applause, which was promptly checked by the Chairman.) I was resolved that I would continue to protest against the wrong by which the people had been defrauded out of their rights.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Feb. 10.

The Courier Journal of this morning says it has reliable information from Mississippi and Tennessee that the yellow fever has broken out in those States, and that there are a number of cases in each. It is believed the disease has been carried by the disinterment and removal of bodies of persons who died from the disease. These cases indicate that the germs of fever were not killed by the recent severe weather, and create uneasiness as to the consequences next Summer.

Sussex County Freeholders have appointed an investigating committee to examine alleged irregularities.

THE LEGISLATURE.

In the House Monday night, an act to provide for licensing of hacks by town committees, was passed, 40 to 0.

Mr. Vail introduced in the Senate a bill, No. 112, for the relief of cities where there are financial embarrassments, enabling them to make compromises.

Mr. Schenck, No. 113, to enable township committees to change the time of holding township elections from the second Tuesday in March to the second Tuesday in April—five days' notice being first required to be given of a resolution changing the time of holding such election.

Mr. Pidcock, Senate No. 114, which provides that every private banker, and every banking and insurance company doing business in this State, shall annually report to the Comptroller on the first Monday in October, under oath, the amount of net earnings or income, received by them, and that they shall pay a tax of one per centum upon such income in addition to all other taxes paid by such individual or corporation.

In the House, Mr. Axtell, Fisheries, reported, act for preservation of game and game fish, (H. 201); supplement to act for the preservation of fish, (H. 203); supplement to act for preservation of fish, (H. 187); supplement to act for the preservation of clams and oysters, (H. 141); recommitted.

On Tuesday, Feb. 11th in the Senate. Assembly bill, No. 43, changing the name of Red Bank, Monmouth County, to Shrewsbury City, passed 18 to 3. Also, Senate, No. 2, increasing the jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace. Assembly No. 61, repealing the act of last winter, making the ward and Assembly lines in Essex county the same, passed. 11 to 8; Assembly No. 60, repealing the two ward bills relative to Newark, passed last year, passed, 11 to 8. On motion the Senate went into Executive session, during which Joseph Cook was confirmed as Lay Judge for Salem.

In the House, Senate Bill No. 1—the general Redistricting bill, setting back the apportionment of the Assembly Districts to that of 1871—repealing all the acts of 1878—was taken up and after a long and bitter discussion, the bill was ordered to a third reading, taken up and passed by a strict party vote, 27 to 32. Mr. Duryea offered a protest against the passage of the bill, signed by all the Democratic members, which was ordered spread upon the minutes. In the afternoon Mr. Vernon offered a resolution that the protest be expunged from the minutes, which after a long debate was adopted by a party vote of 32 to 27.

The great railroad fight was begun Wednesday afternoon and continued during the evening over the House bill providing for the building of the bridge over the Morris Canal at Washington Street, Jersey City. Mr. Deacon made a long speech in opposition, as did Mr. Robinson and Mr. Meeks. Messrs. Rouse and Duryee favored the bill. It was finally made the special order for Monday evening next.

Following is the message of Governor McClellan in relation to his Judiciary appointments. As may be expected the Governor takes high ground in the matter, and his message will be found clear, pointed and brief:

STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
TRENTON, JAN. 27, 1879.

To the Senate:

The amendment to the Constitution which removed the appointment of the Lay Judges of the Inferior Courts of Common Pleas from the joint meeting of the Legislature and committed their selection to the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, was intended to elevate the character of those courts, and to remove the appointment as far as possible from merely partisan influences. The feeling of the great mass of the people of this State is, I believe, strongly against a strictly partisan composition of the courts.

Our Supreme Court and that of Errors and Appeals have long, if not always, been non-partisan in their character, and it is not unreasonable to suppose that the high reputation they so justly enjoy is in no small degree due to this fact.

It is my firm conviction that one of the greatest evils which can befall a community, especially in a Republic, is a strictly partisan Judiciary.

Something more is necessary than that the Judiciary should be really pure, impartial and just—it is also requisite that the people should believe them to be so, and that they should be convinced that no unintentional or unconscious party prejudice should work injury to any seeking justice.

I believe that, if the Judiciary of any nation or State is entirely composed of any one political party, it will often be difficult to convince members of the adverse party that they can always obtain even-handed justice.

The inferior Courts of the Common Pleas are now composed of two members of one political party and of one member of the other, and it happens that it now for the first time falls to the lot of a Governor of this State to decide whether this condition of affairs shall continue or whether only one party shall be represented in these courts.

With a deep sense of my duty as the Chief Executive of this commonwealth, whose province it is to render exact and equal justice to all its people, I have determined to preserve the non-partisan character of the Judiciary. I do this with the confident hope and expectation that both political parties will maintain this policy in the future, and that the precedent, will be approved and followed by my successors in office, to whatever political party they may belong. Very respectfully,

GEORGE B. McCLELLAN,
Governor.

Justice Laird, of Jersey City, recently convicted of false imprisonment, was on Friday sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution and a fine of $25.

The debt of Sussex county, which was nothing in 1871 is now over $41,000. The average increase during 1876, 1878 and 1877 was $10,000 per year.

ALL ABOUT THE ARREARS OF PENSIONS.

Very many of our readers are deeply interested in the bill giving poor soldiers who were disabled by wounds, sickness or injuries received, or their widows or dependents, an arrear of Pensions as provided in the bill recently passed by Congress. Many of them are entitled to a good round sum, the amount due to those who are entitled to arrearages from the first of the war (or for 18 years back,) being $1,728, and where the pensioner is a widow she is entitled to $2 a month additional for every child under 16 years of age and until the children arrive at that age.

The law in regard to the collection of these arrears is very plain and particularly emphatic on the point that no Claim Agent will be recognized in the transaction or be allowed to receive any compensation for services in making application for arrears, the law providing that pensioners shall make their applications personally and receive their pensions in full and without the heavy shrinkage that occurs when the services of a Pension Agent are called in.

J. A. Bentley, Commissioner of Pensions, has issued a circular since the passage of the Pension act, in which he states that pensions granted previous to the 25th of January, 1879, will not require the assistance of a claim agent in obtaining the amount due them. All correspondence in relation to any claim for such arrears, will be with the person entitled, and no claim agent will be recognized in such claim.

A letter addressed to the Commissioner of Pensions, signed by the person who was in receipt of the pension at the date aforesaid, and two witnesses, in the presence of a magistrate, will be the only application required—and upon which the rights of all parties concerned will be adjusted.

The Pension Certificate should not be sent to this office—but it must be exhibited to the magistrate.

The letter should be in the following or equivalent form:

"To the Commissioner of Pensions:

I, ... a pensioner under pension certificate No. . . . . hereby apply for the arrears due me, under the Act granting Arrears of Pensions, approved January 25, 1879. My post office address is—[here insert the name of the post office, and if the claimant resides in a city, the name and number of the street and residence must also be given.] Name of Claimant.

Two witnesses.

STATE OF——, COUNTY OF——, ss:

Signed in my presence, by . . . . . who is known to me to be the person he describes himself to be, and at the same time he exhibited to me his pension certificate, which is numbered . .

Magistrate's signature."

ELIZABETH.

The Elizabeth Common Council held another meeting Friday night for the purpose of taking action on the salary ordinance. The salary of the City Clerk, which was $1,800 last year, was reduced to $1,500; chief of police, which was $1,800, was reduced to $1,500; the captain of police was reduced from $1,200 to $1,000; the sergeants, from $2.50 per day to $2.25 per day and the patrolmen from $2.25 per day to $2. After the ordinance had passed its second reading a motion was made to adjourn until next Monday night. Mr. Dunn, who is also a member of the Legislature, sprang to his feet and said that the motion was made to spite him, and asked that the meeting adjourn until next Friday night, so as to give him an opportunity of attending. Mr. Reeves objected to adjourning to suit Mr. Dunn and inconvenience other members of the Board. He said:—"Mr. Dunn thinks that unless he is present at the council meetings the city of Elizabeth will go to hell."

Mr. Reeves was called to order by the President for using profane language.

After considerable discussion the meeting adjourned.

THE GAME LAWS.

A meeting of the Society for the Protection of Game was held at No. 64 West Thirty-fifth-street last night, Mr. Robert B. Roosevelt in the chair. The counsel for the society, Mr. Chas. S. Whitehead, made a report of the various prosecutions pending for the illegal vending of game, of which there are very few, nearly all the dealers supporting the law. The counsel also reported that he is preparing a codification of the laws relating to game, to be sent to the Legislature, in compliance with the suggestion of the Governor in his annual message. He recommends no changes except the making the close season for deer and all birds to begin the 1st of February instead of the 1st of March for some and the 1st of January for others, as at present. A long discussion ensued, which was participated in by Messrs. Luddington, Halleck, Townsend Cox, Fleiss and Coleman. The club instructed the Committee on Game Laws to invite other States to co-operate with the State of New York in fixing a common time for the close of the game season.—New York Herald Feb. 11.

In the United States Court at Trenton, Thursday, Patrick Breslin was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment in the State Prison and to pay a fine of $2,000, on conviction of having carried on an illicit distillery in New Brunswick. He said he knew nothing about the illicit business, but confessed that he had advanced money to another man to conduct it. He was at one time a member of the Board of Supervisors of Kings county, N. Y., and it is said he served in the Brooklyn Board of Aldermen. He was painfully surprised at the sentence, having expected only to pay the fine. His wife was present in Court, and the parting between them, as he was being taken to the State Prison, was very affecting. Within half an hour from the time of the pronouncing of the sentence he was in convict's garb. The sentence is considered severe.

FISH CULTURE.

Seth Green, Fish Commissioner, explains that black bass cannot be propagated by hatching and then transplanting the young fry. They can be hatched easily enough. He says:

"I did not think the puny fish would prosper, after hatching, for it is just then that they need a mother's care.—If I was not pretty positive on this point, that maternal care is one of the necessities for hatching black bass, I should have been hatching them long ago. All fish making their nests and casting their eggs in fixed places, the spawners lying over the eggs as it were, fanning them with their tails, are imbued with the instinct of caring for their young. If all fish were hatched the same way there would be no need of hatching any fish artificially. Now, here is something quite remarkable.—Fish that are tended by the mother have no yolk sack, and it is the mother who teaches them how to feed; while fish that require no mother have a yolk sack that will support them when young from six to forty days. By the time the sack is absorbed they know how to take care of themselves, or have learned how to feed.

On the 1st of February a party met at the residence of Mr. Patrick Corcoran, in Flemington, to celebrate the centennial birthday of that gentleman's mother. There is no medicine prescribed by physicians, or sold by Druggists, that carries such evidence of its success and superior virtue as BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP for severe Coughs, Colds settled on the breast, Consumption, or any disease of the Throat and Lungs. A proof of that fact is that any person afflicted, can get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try its superior effect before buying the regular size at 75 cents.—It has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderful cures are astonishing every one that use it. Three doses will relieve any case. Try it. Sold by all druggists. For sale at Voorhees' Drug Store, Front Street.

TO-DAY is Valentine's Day.

DID you receive a Valentine?

WEDNESDAY was Lincoln's birthday.

DRUGGIST Voorhees is having the fronts of his two handsome stores on Front Street re-oiled.

MINSTREL Entertainment at Scotch Plains, this (Friday) evening, by home talent, in aid of Bell Fund. Go and laugh.

THE events for February are St. Valentine's Day, the 14th; Washington's Birthday the 22d; beginning of Lent, the 24th.

PROF. SAM FRAZER, Plainfield's popular musician, has recently introduced new quadrille music, set to popular tunes of the day.

REV. Clearfield Park, of Princeton, N. J., will occupy the pulpit of the Congregational Church next Sabbath morning and evening, Feb. 16.

MR. S. C. RYDER was so unfortunate as to lose one of his team of horses from colic on Monday night last. The loss is a serious one to him.

NIGHT Watchman Wright found the front door of Howatt's Stationery Store open on Saturday night last and notified the proprietor of the fact.

L. L. COMPTON has fitted up one side of his confectionery store suitable for the bakery business, in which he will engage in connection with his confectionery business.

AUCTION bills printed neatly, cheaply and expeditiously at THE CONSTITUTIONALIST office. Mr. John Sebring, whose post office address is Plainfield, is a capital auctioneer.

OLD St. Valentine, with his Cherubs, will meet their friends in the Lecture Room of the Congregational Church on Friday evening, at half-past seven o'clock. Tickets, 10 cents.

IT is reported that Mr. Baldwin, present proprietor of the Park House, is to take charge of the Netherwood Hotel the coming season. He would be the right man in the right place.

THE front of the "Masonic Hall" building on Front Street, shows its beautiful architectural design since the removal of the scaffolding. It will be ready for occupancy about May next.

THE funeral of Mr. Abel R. Manning, on Thursday of last week, was largely attended. By request of deceased, his four remaining brothers, Jeremiah, Joel, Lebbeus and Daniel H., acted as pall-bearers.

MESSRS. T. E. & J. W. Morris have now on hand at their Exchange Stables, at New Brunswick, a large lot of fine horses and mules, which they offer at exceedingly low prices. Parties in search of good work horses should give them a call.

ON our first page will be found an article copied from an ancient book for THE CONSTITUTIONALIST by a lady contributor, entitled "A Humorous Account of American Whitewashing," by the late Dr. Franklin, not published in his works, which it will well pay the reader to peruse.

FROM the architect's drawings it is said that the front of Coward's store building, now in course of erection next to Masonic Hall, will be the handsomest in the city. Mr. Isaac Melbourne has the contract for the mason work, which is a sufficient guarantee that the work will be well done.

WHY is our neighbor of the Times so very quiet on the result of the money election? We looked for an awful warning of evils to come, and lo! we had silence instead. Has it, like many others of the notorious prohibitionists, found that in the struggle between pocket and principle that pocket is the strongest?

THE "Park House" is to be thoroughly renovated and repaired, and new furniture added throughout by Mr. Geo. B. De Revere, present proprietor of the City Hotel, who will take possession of the above mentioned House on April 1st. Many of Mr. De Revere's present boarders will follow him to his new quarters.

MR. DANIEL ROBERTS, the livery merchant, corner of Second and Cherry Streets, has exchanged a piece of property owned by him at Scranton, Pa., for the handsome residence corner of Broadway and Ninth St., known as the Webster property, owned by Mr. J. T. Vail. "Uncle Dan" means to stay in Plainfield, and will take up his residence here with his family immediately.

THE blue birds are seen chirping among the trees, and now the ancient weather prophets are predicting an early Spring because these "harbingers of Spring" are around. Too thin; we have seen these "harbingers" about this section on the coldest days of the past Winter. Nevertheless, Spring, gentle Spring, cannot come too soon.

IT was a big blunder in the types of Demarest's advertisement, last week, stating that he was selling 16 pounds of prunes for $1.90; when he was selling that number of pounds for $1.00. Nevertheless the types are right this week, and Demarest has had many customers quiz him on the subject, which shows that his advertisement is read. Read the same this week.

THE 3d Public Rehearsal of the Oratorio Society of N. Y., Dr. L. Damrosch, Conductor, will take place at Steinway Hall on Tuesday afternoon, February 18th, 1879, at 2 o'clock. The 3d Grand Concert of the above Society takes place on Wednesday evening, Feb. 19, at 8 o'clock, in Steinway Hall. Mendelssohn's Oratorio "St. Paul," will be rendered by talented Soloists.—Tickets can now be obtained at Steinway Hall and usual places.

MUCH inquiry was caused last Friday evening by the sight of so many fine looking strange men on our streets, the wonder being whether there was a temperance or revival meeting going to be held in town. The strangers were the Grand Officers of the Masonic fraternity and their friends, viewing the beauties of our city previous to performing the duties of installing the officers of the new Masonic Lodge, Anchor, No. 149.

ATTENTION is directed to the adv. of Prof. W. D. Heyer which appears in another column. The Prof. purposes giving an illustrated lecture on the "Curiosities of Animal Structure," illustrated by off hand drawings, on the evening of Feb. 20, at Assembly Hall. The price of admission is fixed at 50 cents. Tickets may be obtained at the Drug Store of H. P. Reynolds, and at the door on the evening of the Lecture.

THERE is a clause in the game laws of New Jersey which imposes a fine on any person in this State having in his possession or exposing for sale any prairie chicken or pinnated grouse. This law was enacted in 1870 when a number of these birds were let loose in Morris County, with a view to stocking the State with them, the law holding good until 1880. The birds all died and none exists alive in the State. The law should be repealed for the benefit of dealers who are afraid to expose the bird for sale on account of the law.

THE Home News is the name of a sprightly daily just started at New Brunswick by Bliss & Fischer. We suspect the Bliss is our old friend "Al." We hope he won't look blue after he has been engaged in his venture a few weeks. To successfully run an establishment weekly is a hard matter now-a-days, let alone starting a daily. Nevertheless, success to the new enterprise.

A NUMBER of soldiers seem imbued with the idea that "every soldier," no matter what or who he was, whether injured or not during the late unpleasantness, will receive a pension under the new pension law. This is of course absurd. No one not entitled to a pension by reason of wounds received or from other disabilities is entitled to money from the government under either the old or new law. The arrears of pension act was intended to give present pensioners an amount that is supposed to be in justice due them, dating from the time of their discharge up to the time when they commenced to receive their pension.

THE Y. M. C. A. will hold their next Monthly Reception at Assembly Hall, this city, on Tuesday evening Feb. 18th. The programme will be quite novel, consisting of Sleight of Hand performances and counterparts of the spiritual manifestations given by popular mediums. This part of the programme will be in charge of Mr. A. G. Waring, of Brooklyn, and Mr. O. S. Teale, of this city, who has already given us a slight exhibition of his talents in this direction. The Pianist will be Mrs. Louis O. Perry, also of Plainfield. The first part of the evening will be devoted to the Mysteries of Magic. In the second part will occur the Great Light Seance, during which Mr. Teale will submit to various tests, concluding with the Great Rope Test, and will produce the astonishing results, heretofore attributed to spiritual manifestations. Admission, as usual, ten cents. Tickets may be obtained of the Librarian on and after Saturday; also at the door on Tuesday evening.

Netherwood Hotel.

The troubles of the Netherwood Hotel Company have reached a culminating point, Chancellor Runyon having last Monday placed the affairs of the same in the hands of a Receiver, Judge E. W. Runyon, of this city.

Central Railroad Accommodation.

The Central Railroad always on the look out for the accommodation of patrons, has struck a new system that will be indeed of benefit to all concerned. They now issue tickets with coupons attached, to New York by way of Newark, which allows the passenger the privilege of stopping over, transacting business, then going to New York and being allowed to come home the same way or by the main line. These tickets are sold at the usual excursion rates of fifty cents, and are good on all trains.—Elizabeth Herald

Correction.

In our issue of Jan. 24, 1879, appeared among the proceedings of the Board of Freeholders, the following resolution, purporting to come from Freeholder Hubbard:

"Resolved That this Board authorize the present Bond Committee to exchange registered for coupon bonds with the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, if it can be done without much expense to the county."

Which is not correct, the word "much" in last line not appearing in the original resolution. It should read "without expense to the county." We make this correction in justice to Mr. Hubbard.

Caught on the Rail.

On Wednesday last Capt. Dodd of the police force received a telegram from Trenton, instructing him to look out for a young man travelling on a legislative pass. Upon the arrival of the 3 p. m. train here, the gentleman was found thereon and taken into custody by the officer, who immediately telegraphed to Chief Brown of Trenton, who came on and identified the prisoner as a former page in the Legislature, named John Cannon. On his person was found one of the colored door keeper's (Schenck's) passes over the Pennsylvania, Bound Brook and Central R. R., also the Legislative Manual of Assistant Sergeant at Arms Ten Broeck. He had "lifted" the articles from these gentlemen while conversing with them. He was taken back to Trenton by Chief Brown.

Off for Georgia.

On Wednesday last Mr. Henry Linzer and son left this city for Southern Georgia, where they will select a site and make the same their future home. On Saturday next Messrs. Clarkson Hope, son of S. R. Hope, and Chas. Johnson, son of Col. Johnson, the builder, will also leave for the same locality intending to make that region their permanent home. Several other families have preceded them from Plainfield, and soon there will be quite a colony located about Glenmore, consisting of former residents of this section. On our fourth page will be found an interesting letter from Dr. Brown, a former resident, but now comfortably located on a promising farm in Georgia. Mr. Murphy, the builder, who recently left this city for the above locality, we are informed, has the contract for the erection of a large hotel at Glenmore.

Dr. Vincent's Lecture.

To explain to Plainfield people who Dr. Vincent is, is foolishness; to say that his lecture last Thursday night before the Y. M. C. A. was first-class, is unnecessary, but to add our little drop to the vast current of praise which now flows toward him, we certainly can do. With the smooth, well-rounded, perfectly balanced sentences of this lecturer one can never tire, while the grand and practically good suggestions make indeed a "feast of fat things." Probably we, in this fair city, never take advice from any one so kindly as from Dr. Vincent. It is not an unlikely state of affairs that the advice of no one is needed more. We can but trust that the kind and especially needed advice given to "That Boy's Sister" and to her mother will be acted upon, and that a corresponding improvement in the young lady's department will be noticed.

The City Judge Again—The Whys and Wherefores.

The term of office of City Judge, by virtue of an amendment of the city charter, approved April 1st, 1873, is three years; and by reason of section 10 of an amendment approved April 4th, 1872, which reads, "And be it enacted, That in case of a vacancy happening in any office created and made elective by this act, by death, resignation, removal, or otherwise, except in officers of election on the day of election, it shall be filled by the said Common Council within thirty days thereafter, and the said appointment shall continue until the next annual election, and no longer." The Common Council can fill the office of City Judge in case of a vacancy by resignation or otherwise, by appointment; but the said appointment and vacancy ceases at the next annual election, and then the city again elect for three years. Now, to the point, and the reasons for the quo warranto proceedings just instituted against Peter P. Good: In December, 1873, J. Harvey Ackerman was elected; he served until September, 1874, and then resigned; the Common Council then appointed Peter P. Good to fill the vacancy until December, 1874, at which time Mr. Good was elected City Judge. He went in office on the first Monday in January, 1875, and his term expired January 1st, 1878. There being no election in December, 1877, the office really remained vacant for one year until December of 1878, when Mr. J. C. Bolton having received a majority of the votes cast for that office, was duly elected. These facts having been laid before his Honor, Judge Van Syckel, on Monday last, he immediately granted a rule directing Judge Good to show cause before the Supreme Court at Trenton on the 25th inst., by what authority he holds the office of City Judge of Plainfield.

Mission in Westfield.

The eloquent Redemptorist Fathers, who recently preached a Mission with such good effect in St. Mary's Church, this city, will commence a Mission of eight days in Trinity Church, Westfield, on next Sunday week, 23d inst.

The City Park Again.

It would seem that after all the expense and litigation incurred by the city of Plainfield, in establishing a legal right to the tract of land situated within the city limits and known as the "Park," there is a prospect of the same being wrested from the city by the passage of the following bill, which is now before the State Senate, introduced by Mr. Hobart, and known as Senate No. 73:

An Act respecting lands dedicated to public use.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever any lands in this state have, in any manner, been dedicated to public use as parks, or squares, and said lands have not been enclosed or improved by public funds, and the township committee of the township, or the board of aldermen, or council, or other governing body of the city, town or borough wherein said lands lie, shall consider that the public good does not require such lands for use as a park or square, it shall be lawful for said committee, board, council, or other governing body, by resolution passed by a majority of the members of said committee, board, council, or other governing body, to release all public rights or interest in and to such lands, and upon the passage of such resolution, the owners of such lands shall thereafter hold the same freed and discharged of and from any public easement, right, interest or use whatever, and any copy of such resolution, accompanied with the affidavit of the clerk or secretary of such committee, board, council, or other governing body that the same is a true copy, may be recorded in the records of deeds of the county where such lands lie, and the said record, or a certified copy thereof, shall be received in evidence in any court in this state, and shall be as good, effectual and available in law as if the original resolution were produced and proved; provided, that this act shall not apply to any parks or squares situated in any county having a population by the last census of over one hundred thousand inhabitants.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

As will be seen by the provisions of the bill, the act does not apply to any parks or squares situated in any county having a population of over one hundred thousand inhabitants. As Union county's population is 51,758, of course the law will apply to the Plainfield Park. After the long legal contest over the right of the city to possess this property, the higher courts of the State having decided the right to so possess. The above law, which seems to have been framed for the object of dispossessing our city of its rights, is unjust, and should not be allowed to pass. We do not imply that the present, or any Common Council hereafter elected by the citizens of Plainfield would prove so unworthy to their trust as to legislate in accordance with the provisions of the act, but the passage of the same would give them the power to so do, which is dangerous to the city's interests.

Instituting a New Masonic Lodge.

Last Friday evening was an occasion of interest to the Masonic fraternity of this city, the occasion being the formal instituting of the new Masonic Lodge, "Anchor, No. 149," recently formed here, and the Installation of its officers. The interesting ceremonies were performed by the Grand Officers of the Grand Lodge of Masons of New Jersey, Most Worshipful Grand Master Wallis presenting them their Charter.—All the Grand Officers were present as follows: M. W. Hamilton Wallis, G. M.; Rt. W. W. Dudalsie, S. G. W.; Rt. W. H. Vosslage, J. G. W.; Rt. W. C. Betchel, G. Treas.; Rt. W. J. H. Hough, G. Sec.; Rt. W. T. H. R. Redway, Dep. G. Sec.; Rt. W. B. C. Lippencott, G. Chap.; Rt. W. J. W. Corydon, S. G. D.; W. C. Russ, G. Marshal; W. Benj. Squire and W. J. Frye, G. Stewards. Also P. G. M. Henry R. Cannon and P. G. M. Isaac Van Wagoner. After the ceremonies the Grand Officers, and other members of the fraternity were entertained by the members of the new Lodge in a sumptuous manner in Flagg's building, North Avenue. The collation gotten up by Crawford, of New York, was elegant in every particular and reflected credit upon that well known caterer. Interesting and instructive remarks were made while sitting around the festive board by the Grand Officers, members of "Jerusalem" No. 26 and "Anchor" No. 149, the company finally dispersing about twelve o'clock to their respective homes. "Anchor" Lodge starts off with a fine membership, composed entirely of demit members. Its officers are: Wm. A. Freeman, W. M.; H. E. Harris, S. W.; W. P. Scott, J. W.; James S. Nason, Treas.; James Lyons, Sec.; T. L. Murphy, Chaplain; Chas. Crawford, S. D.; C. J. Taggart, J. D.; H. D. Burlinghame and Fred. Rottman; M. of C.; W. Lithgow and L. E. Finch, Stewards.

Personalia.

The report circulating throughout the State among the papers to the effect that Capt. Gill of Elizabeth has received and accepted a Government appointment at Washington, is erroneous. The Capt. did go to Washington, but only on business, after the transaction of which he returned to his home in Elizabeth. He is not ambitious for an office under a Republican administration.

"Uncle Billy" Vail, who has been confined to his home for several weeks past from blindness, we are sorry to learn, does not improve in health. He has the sympathy of a host of friends in his affliction.

We are sorry to learn of the death of Samuel M. Megie, brother of Benj. G. Megie, of this city.

We are in receipt of a postal announcing the safe arrival at Denver, Col., of friend Wm. Egbert, who recently left this city for a visit West for his health. He reports the same as considerably improved.

Congressman Alvah A. Clark was in our city on Monday last on business.

Doc. Hodgkiss is postmaster in the new office located in Berkshire Valley, Morris County.

WE are indebted to Hon. Miles Ross for valuable public documents. Also to Comptroller R. F. Stockton, for like favors.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Ben Woodruff is out with a new wagon. The painting was done by Fred. Morris.

Geo. Miller will start for the West again next month. His destination is St. Paul, Minn.

Mr. John Thompson, an old resident of this village, living on the old Zabriskie place, died on Sunday last, at the ripe old age of 87 years.

One of Westfield's sons, Mr. Thomas English, a Central R. R. section boss, lost his life on Monday night last, at a place known as "Black Dan's Cut." A few years ago it will be remembered, Mr. E. had a leg broken by the upsetting of a gravel car.

Mr. Simeon Lambert, a well-known resident of Westfield, died on Monday last of old age, having nearly reached his 81st birthday. Mr. Lambert was well known in County affairs, taking much interest in them, and at one time holding the honorable position of Freeholder. The funeral will take place from his late residence, to-day (Friday), at two o'clock, P. M.

The Public School expect to give an entertainment on Friday evening, Feb. 21st. The exercises will consist of recitations, dialogues, tableaux, singing, etc., by the little ones. The admission will be 25 cents.

We came near losing our artist, Mr. Apgar Stewart. After a good deal of persuasion, he has consented to remain with us.

John Stillger was convicted last week for selling liquor without the proper license. Sentence reserved.

Mr. John Ingersoll's store was entered by thieves on Tuesday night last, and cutlery, three breech-loading guns and other articles taken therefrom. The thieves entered by the way of the cellar, the door of which was left open.

"Money" or "No Money."

The election in this city on Tuesday last passed off very quietly, a remarkably light vote being polled, only 774 votes being cast out of the 1,500 and over cast at previous elections in this city. The advocates of "Money" worked hard to carry their point, even the "colored troops" being brought into requisition, some of them being seen industriously peddling tickets headed "Money" during the day. Whether Sambo is satisfied with the "money" question involved remains to be seen. Although there has been a great hue and cry from the Times corner that the election was to be a contest between the "license" and "anti-license" factions, such was not the case. It was a question of pocket. Below we give the vote:

The Coal Onus.

MESSRS EDITORS:

GENTLEMEN—In your search after more light on the coal question, I fear you did not pursue your inquiries quite far enough, else you would not have so readily relieved our coal merchants of all the "onus" for the high prices which are demanded of Plainfield consumers. When you reached tide waters and discovered the prices to those points, you inferred that the difference between them and the prices charged in Plainfield was made up by "line rates." Now, if you will take the trouble to go a little further, I think you will discover that these innocent merchants pocket at least $1, and possibly, $1.25, for every ton of the black diamonds sold, besides having the drawback of gross weight, which pays for the cartage. The line rates were all adjusted and considered in the prices for Plainfield coal before the late sales in New York—ergo, the profits to the Plainfield dealers was proportionately increased by the fall in coal. Another thing: Why has the privilege of buying coal by the cargo been denied to our citizens? Have we a coal ring? And had they no hand in effecting this reform in which their interests above are considered?

The "Money Election."

MESSRS. EDITORS:

The money election being over, the battle having been fought and won by common sense, it is in order to review the ground upon which the struggle occurred.

In the first place, the deepest possible interest in the election was taken by the Prohibition party. They rallied every vote it was possible for them to control, and we all know now what that vote really is, just 305, not sufficient ever to carry an election; on the other hand the advocates of Licenses took no special interest in the election of Tuesday; they were perfectly indifferent as to its results; they preferred to let the question go before the people on its merits, and a victory was gained without an effort.—There must be in all this something consoling to those who were members of the Council of last year. Their action on the license question was certainly endorsed by the vote of Tuesday, notwithstanding the abuse they have been subjected to by some fanatical "moralists," headed by the Central Times. And now I propose to show you that the Prohibition party in the late campaign resorted to mis-statements and misrepresentations in circulars, Central Times, and pulpit, to carry their point; and right here I wish to say that in my judgment a cause that cannot adopt truth as its basis, necessarily is a mighty poor cause; in a circular just issued by this great "moral" party on the 5th inst., I notice they put down the expenditures of the Council of last year as having been $12,839 22, whereas, according to the statement of the Finance Committee of the Council of 1878, the expenditures properly chargeable to that year, were exactly $11,236 90. So you will see that the circular alluded to makes a mis-statement of just $1,502 32. And so with the statements published in the Times, and reiterated from the Methodist pulpit last Sunday night. It was there stated that $5,000 would be required to light our streets the current year. Let us see about that. We have 109 gas lamps and 52 naptha; the bills per month (both included) have been about $332; multiply this sum by 12, and we have the cost for lighting a year, $3,984. There have been many other misrepresentations made and circulated which I will not now occupy your space in exposing, but am prepared to do it if needs be.

OBSERVER.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS. EDITORS:

It must be apparent to every property owner on the lines of the New Jersey Railroads that their interests are now seriously threatened by the rapid progress that is making in the construction of the elevated railways in New York City, by which means residences can be secured in the upper part of the island at such cheap rents (including the great saving of time in transit) as must inevitably reduce values of real estate (without regard to location) at all points at any remote distance from the Hudson River, or within an hour's journey from it. To look this difficulty square in the face is now the immediate and imperative duty of every one who feels an interest in our growing towns, and to devise some scheme by which this formidable opposition can be successfully overcome. In view of this, I would suggest the immediate reduction of fares on the Central Road, both in the issue of commutation and excursion tickets, abolishing that unjust discrimination between the yearly and the monthly rates, exacting no greater sum than the simple difference of interest to which the purchaser of the former should be entitled, (as he would be in any other business transaction) whereas at present the fortunate possessor of wealth enjoys an undue advantage over the poor and hard working man who is compelled to make his daily trips to the great metropolis to earn perhaps a scanty pittance to sustain his family which night after night await his return with anxious expectations that he will bring home some good news that promises to better their future condition. Already many families in this town are debating at the present time upon the subject of a removal back to the city in the coming spring; and if the railroad management does not awaken to the dangers that threaten from such an event, (in the loss of patronage which would be certain to ensue) it will be sure to do so in time, but then it will be too late to avert it. It is safe to say that there is not a mechanic or a tradesman in the town who is not more or less benefitted by a system of low fares which offer inducements for New Yorkers to take up their residence among us. For business men, more speed by certain trains is demanded, and this should be furnished, not only for the benefit of this class of commuters, but for the eventual good of the corporation itself. Now, will the management act with promptness in these suggestions, or will it wait supinely and allow other competing roads to profit by its folly?

C.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

Have the Common Council enjoyed the object of their desires? In casting upon the people the responsibility of the license question, they sought to relieve their sense of moral obligation, for the present, overlooking a final and complete satisfaction of honor. If they had manfully grasped this moral question and acted upon it, from their instinct of right, which should have been, from their standpoint, as trustees of the moral, social and political affairs of their constituency. In one sense the temporary gratification, from a sense of self-love, has returned from the people, demanding yet their final action, which may restore confidence and our expectations of much common sense from these [illegible] men.

Respectfully,

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

A trial for recovery of wages alleged to be due plaintiff, occurred at Demler's Hotel on Friday last. Suydam & Jackson appeared as counsel for plaintiff, while defendant plead his own case, ably assisted by the "Attorney-General," a well-known legal light of Warren Township. Result, a verdict of $30 for plaintiff. Much amusement was created on the occasion by the legal sparring on both sides.

For some time past Messrs. J. F. Wilson, J. T. Johnson, Alex. Shotwell, Wallace Vail and others, have been annoyed by parties cutting hoop-poles from off their mountain lots, and stealthfully carrying the same away, the act being committed in the night. A watch finally resulted in discovering that two persons named Oleman and Barry were the guilty parties, the hoop-poles being traced to the market where they were disposed of. The parties were apprehended and taken before Justice Vardon, who committed Oleman to the Somerville jail to await trial in default of bail, and released Barry, who secured bail.

The Messrs. Coddington Bros. have completed the filling of their mammoth ice house with the finest crop of ice they have cut in years, from their large spring water pond in Washingtonville. The ice ranges from ten to sixteen inches in thickness.

During the late cold snap the water from the three fountains in front of Mr. William Taylor's handsome residence on Somerset Street, congealed and formed high pyramids of ice, presenting a beautiful sight as the sun's rays were reflected on the same.

The Assignee's Sale of property belonging to Wallace Vail, by E. P. Thorn, Assignee, at Demler's Hotel, on Monday last, was slimly attended, and the prices bid very low. The purchasers were A. Berry, E. A. Greig and S. Staats. The tract of nineteen building lots on Somerset Street, was not sold, the sale being adjourned for one week. The land sold was mostly mountain land.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

[Under the above head we shall endeavor each week to give items and news of interest to the lovers of fishing, gunning, trotting, athletic and other sports. We shall be pleased to receive contributions or items for this column from all interested in such matters].

Mr. Frank Herring, a resident of Plainfield, who was so fortunate as to win the prize last Summer, awarded yearly by the Pa-que Island Club, to the person taking the largest bass with rod and reel, during the season, is having a handsome $50 reel made for him as his prize. As stated in these columns before, Mr. H. succeeded in taking a 60½ lb. striped bass off Pa-que Island last Summer, which was the largest taken. Previous to that the largest of the species taken weighed 62 pounds and that was captured by Mr. Dunlap, also a resident of this city, so Plainfield bears off the palm for "bass" fishermen.

A Special Meeting of the "Central N. J. Game & Game Fish Protective Society" was held at Chamberlain & DeCamp's Hotel, this city, on Tuesday afternoon last, with the President, Col. Wm. H. Sterling, in the Chair. There was a fine attendance despite the inclemency of the weather, and considerable business of importance was transacted. The Committee on Revision of Constitution and By-Laws reported progress.—The Committee on Laws reported certain measures before the Legislature, affecting the Society, as progressing favorably. The President was instructed to communicate with the President of the New York Game Protective Society in relation to the efforts of that Soc'y in fixing a common time for the close game season in that State and this State, pledging the efforts of the "C. N. J. G. & G. F. P. S." to effect that end. The matter of petitioning the Legislature to prohibit Summer woodcock shooting and making the open season for shooting certain game from Oct. 15th to Jan. 1st in each year instead of from Nov. 1st, as now, was freely discussed, and certain papers relating to same will be presented at next meeting of Society. It was ordered that proper notices be printed and posted on the grounds leased by the Society on the Raritan river, forbidding trespassing. The names of several new members were proposed and accepted. The meeting adjourned to meet at same place on Tuesday, Feb. 18th, at 3 o'clock, P. M.

Progress at the Public Schools.

The report of the Public Schools for the quarter just closed shows an improvement when compared with that of the first quarter of the year. The average scholarship in all the departments has advanced and especially in the grammar department where out of 230 pupils, 213 have reached the standard necessary for promotion, many averaging considerably above it, some nearly perfect, while 18 are below the standard, 36 less than at the close of the first quarter when there were 54. In the High School of 131 enrolled 122 are up to the standard. Most of those who are below the standard will be allowed till the end of the year to work up to the mark. In deportment the record of the High School is unusually high and reflects great credit upon the character of the pupils. 74 have been marked perfect their entire half year and many more have fallen but little below that, while bad conduct on the part of any has been a rare exception. In the Grammar School 149 have been perfect and in the Primary 171. The number of pupils who have not been absent a single session in the High School is 30, in the Grammar School 51, and in the Primary 32. The unfavorable weather of January and the general prevalence of colds has interfered with the regularity of attendance on the part of many. The present number enrolled is 1006, the entire number thus far is 1094.

On Friday evening last another meeting of the residents of North Plainfield, opposed to Green's royalty affair was held at the Board of Trade Rooms, Mr. Chas. Dunham acting as President, and Theo. F. French, Sec. Mr. S. S. Ayers, an old and experienced well-driver of Newark was present, and produced evidence enough to convince all present that Green was not the person to collect the royalties claimed, which, of course will have to be settled by the courts, and after a lengthy recital of all the facts in his possession, the meeting agreed to appropriate the sum already subscribed to defend his (Ayres') suit, which is set down for March 3d, with Wm. B. Maxson and Wm. J. Magie, as counsel. We might enter into an argument a column in length to show the unjustness of the royalty claimed, but inasmuch as it is now before His Honor Judge Nixon, of the U. S. District Court, for his opinion, we refrain from taking sides with the question, further than to say that we consider it unjust and unfair to impose the collection of the royalties claimed.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE STOLEN AND BURNED DESPATCHES—GORING THE OTHER OX.

Three highly edifying facts have thus far been proved by the cipher investigation:

1. The ciphers were stolen by Republican leaders.

2. They were sorted and certain Republican ciphers destroyed.

3. The remainder of the stolen despatches were sent to the Tribune.

These facts being proved, the Tribune now tries to palliate the theft, and the destruction of the Republican ciphers by such a plea as this:

"There were despatches sent and received during the Fall and Winter of 1876 both by Republicans and Democrats, and it is very probable that a large proportion of them were wholly or partly in cipher. It is customary for people who are managing any enterprise, from a peanut-stand to a Presidential election, to send communications by mail or telegraph in regard to their business; and because they do not generally care to have all their plans revealed to their rivals or opponents they steal the letters that are transmitted by post and introduce various cipher devices into their despatches which are seen and heard by many persons besides those who send and receive them, and copies of which are kept beyond the control of those most directly interested in them. It is not, therefore, a suspicious circumstance to find telegrams in cipher passing between prominent Republican politicians in 1877, nor is it any more remarkable that they should feel an aversion to having an unfriendly persons hauling over and reading such despatches than that they should object to a similar examination of their private or political letters. There is not a member of the Potter Committee who would like to have his political opponents in his District turned loose among his private correspondence with political friends and supporters during a heated campaign; and such an objection would be no proof that that correspondence would disclose anything dishonorable or improper?"

THE FREEHOLDER BILL.

An important bill has been introduced in the House of Assembly which makes decided changes in the government of counties. Boards of Chosen Freeholders are to be abolished, if it becomes a law, and they are to be supplied by Boards of County Commissioners. These are to consist of three members, to be elected for three years, at the November election, one for one year, one for two years, and one for three years, each to draw lots for these respective terms. The act requires said Commissioners to meet at twelve o'clock, noon, annually, on the first Wednesday in January, and elect a Clerk and a Director. Their compensation is fixed at three dollars per day while on duty, provided such compensation does not exceed $800. In counties where such officers already exist the Commissioners shall elect for one year, a Counsel, Collector, Auditor, County Physician, Jail Warden, Steward of the Almshouse and other necessary officers. This act is intended be in the interest of economy.

THE NEXT CENSUS.

In 1880 a census of the United States will be taken in conformity with the law, the custom being to have the service performed every ten years. The last time this duty was attempted to be performed, it was poorly done, and New Jersey did not receive credit for as many inhabitants as it really contained. The newspapers generally warned the public to discredit the published figures. Let those who shall be appointed to take the next census posess more competency than their predecessors, and the result will be satisfactory. This is a work of great importance to our business interests—much more so than most people generally imagine—and it is very desirable that it should approach some degree of accuracy. It would be well for business men in their several localities to look up a man who can be trusted to discharge his duties honestly and conscientiously, and be prepared to recommend him to the appointing power.

OUR GOVERNOR.

"Gov. McClellan's message to the Legislature seems to have won golden opinions from political foes as well as friends. The State Gazette, the leading Republican organ of New Jersey calls it an 'admirable document,' 'the best message for years,' and says it 'marks out a correct line of policy'—and much more of the same complimentary sort. All of which we respectfully commend to the Cincinnati Gazette, which some little time since, went a long distance out of its way to make a most vindictive and scurrilous attack upon McClellan. Meanwhile we congratulate New Jersey upon the possession of such a chief magistrate. Able, energetic and incorruptible, the Governor of a whole people and not of a party, McClellan is displaying a genius for administration which more than confirms all the predictions of the Democracy. He is one of the very few soldiers who knew how to be statesmen."—St. Louis Republican.

The city of Elizabeth has defaulted in the payment of its interest and is in a hopeless condition financially. It has a debt of six millions, while its property assessment value is only fourteen millions. School teachers, policemen and other city officials have been unpaid for some months, and are suffering for the want of money. In the meanwhile the Council is a tie, and there is a deadlock in the city government.

The Elizabethtown Savings Bank, of Elizabeth, passed into the hands of Chancellor Runyon on Friday last.—The suspension was caused by its inability to realize upon the Elizabeth bonds and other assets. The Chancellor appointed Dr. J. S. Crane, L. B. Miller and Wm. B. Tucker, managers of the bank, commissioners to make an examination of its condition, and report.

Hon. Josephus Shann and Dr. Lakeman have been appointed by the Chancellor to fill vacancies in the Board of Managers of the Rahway Savings Institution.

The Receiver of the New Brunswick State Savings Bank has declared a dividend to depositors.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

THE NOISE OF THE FINGER.

In the current number of the Medical Record, Dr. Hammond says that when you poke the end of your finger in your ear the roaring noise you hear is the sound of the circulation in your finger. Which is a fact, as any one can demonstrate for himself by first putting his fingers in his ears and then stopping up with any other substance. Try it, and think what a wonder of a machine your body is, that even the points of your fingers are such busy work-shops that they roar like a small Niagara. The roaring is probably nothing more than the noise of the circulation of the blood. It is the voice of all the vital processes together—the tearing down and building up; processes that are always going forward in every living body, from conception to death.

AGE FOR LEGAL MARRIAGES.

There is considerable variation in the different European States in the age at which a legal marriage may be contracted. In Hungary each religious sect makes its own regulations—marriages being regarded as entirely ecclesiastical affairs. Russians can contract marriages at the age of eighteen years in cases of males, and at sixteen years in that of females. The Italian law fixes the age of eighteen and fifteen years respectively. In Turkey there is no general law. The French and Belgian codes allow marriages of young men at eighteen and girls at fifteen; but powers of dispensation in special cases are reserved. In Greece, Spain and Portugal, parties of fourteen and twelve years can contract a binding marriage; but in the latter country the consent of the parents is necessary. According to the amended paragraph of the new German civil-marriage bill, the state of wedlock cannot be entered upon under twenty and sixteen years respectively, though the existing laws of Prussia and Saxony permitted marriages at earlier periods. There is much dissimilarity in the Swiss laws, every canton having a local regulation of its own. In some of them the consent of the parents is necessary up to the age of twenty-five years. The influence of climate upon the temperament and constitution is allowed in the southern nations where maturity is reached at a much earlier periods than among the northern nations.

Judge Reed has filed in the Atlantic County Circuit Court, an opinion in the "Fish Case," argued before him on certiorari, at the last term of the court by Mr. Henry Slape for the prosecutors and Mr. Y. Johnson for the Fish Warden.

The writs in these cases brought up nine convictions for violation of the act entitled "An act for the preservation of fish," approved April 8, 1878.

The convictions were of two classes. The first class for the violation of the first section, and the second class for the violation of the second section of the act.

The first section of the act provides generally, that it shall not be lawful for any persons to fish with a net in any waters of this State (except as hereinafter provided), between May 15 and July 15, in each and every year.

The second section provides, that it shall not be lawful for any person to fish with a net, &c., in the counties of Atlantic and Burlington, between June 1st and September 1st, in each and every year.

The Judge holds that the defendants are not entitled to a jury trial, and that the statement of the facts charged brings the defendant within the operation of the statute. The convictions are affirmed with costs.

This decision is a very important one for the preservation of the fishing interests. If the act had been decided unconstitutional it would have been almost impossible to draft a general law which would have met the approbation of the people in the various sections of the State upon that question.

Five years ago there were living in Williamstown ten young ladies, beautiful, highly educated, intimate friends and moving in the best circles of society. And since then! Ah, our pen almost shrinks from telling the fate of those girls, but we must print it as a warning to others. Two of them married Congressmen, another linked her fate with that of an editor, the fourth wedded a clergyman, another writes poetry for the Waverly Magazine, the sixth married a handsome paragrapher and looks as sad as an orphan asylum and the remaining four joined a croquet club, and everlastingly ruined their sweet tempers thereby.

"Have you 'Brown Eyes?'" inquired a charming brunette, as she raised her soft and melting orbs to a clerk, whose optics are of the particular shade described, in a music store yesterday. He blushed modestly as he replied: "Yes, miss, you know I have; but of what possible interest can they be to you?" "It's the music I want," she sadly responded.—Baltimore News.

USEFUL TO THE HOUSEWIFE.

For The Constitutionalist:

COPY OF LETTER SENT TO HENRY ARMAND.

HOMERSVILLE, GA., Dec. 10, 1878.

FRIEND ARMAND:—Since writing you Mr. Stiger has been on here. He informed me that if you and your friend came on, that you might select one hundred acres of the best land, in any part of a tract of five hundred acres, for 100 dollars, adjoining my land. Now, Henry, I think you will run no risk in coming right on and bringing your family. Now is the time to come and get you a house up, and go right to work, fence in a few acres and put your Spring crop in; in this way you will save money, expense and time, be out of debt and have one hundred acres of better land than any New Jersey land, and such a delightful climate; I am sitting on a log in the woods, before sunrise, with thin Summer pants on. I have commenced in the woods and am out chopping before daylight and have just knocked off and down a big pine, and while I rest a minute, I am penciling this for Mrs. B. to copy and send to you. I can locate you within 20 rods of a neighbor, where you will be on a public road and eight neighbors within a mile of you and within one and a half miles of my little home. Bring no chairs, tables or bedsteads; no horses, cows or anything which you have to buy feed for, bring all the cash you can; tea and yeast-cakes, if you use them, (as there is none to sell here), or fine table salt, either. Bring a good axe, two iron wedges and beetle-rings, your harness, dishes and pans, a log-chain, two or three augers, a jack-plane and short jointer-saw, an ox-yoke and chain. You can buy a yoke of four-year old steers here for 18 or 26 dollars, and when you are not working them, turn them loose and they will get their own living and keep fat the year round; bring a keg of 5, 8 and 10-penny nails, a mason's trowel to build your chimney with (unless you bring a cooking stove, which is best), a piece of sole leather, a good gun, plenty of ammunition, clothing, needles and thread. I think if you take my advice and work well, in a few years you will be well off.

J. SILAS BROWN, M. D.

RECIPES.

POTATO CROQUETTES.

Take six boiled potatoes, pass them through a seive, add three tablespoons of grated or finely-minced ham, season with pepper and salt and chopped parsley. work into this mixture the yolks of three or four eggs; make with the hands into balls; roll into bread crumbs, fry in hot lard, and serve with fried parsley.

POTTED MEAT.

Remove all gristle, hard pieces and fat from some cold roast or boiled beef, and any remnants of tongue or ham; mince it very fine and pound it in a mortar, with a little butter, a little gravy, well freed from the grease, and a spoonful of Harvey's or Worcester sauce, beat it to a smooth paste, seasoning during the process with pounded clove or allspice, mace or grated nutmeg, salt and a little cayenne; put it into pots, press it down, and cover it with clarified butter.

FRIED CABBAGE.

Cut cabbage very fine, on a slaw-cutter, if possible; salt and pepper, stir well, and let stand five minutes. Have an iron kettle smoking hot, drop one tablespoonful of lard into it, then the cabbage, stirring briskly until quite tender; send to table immediately. One-half cup sweet cream and three tablespoonfuls of vinegar—the vinegar to be added after the cream has been well stirred, and after it is taken from the stove, is an agreeable change. When properly done an invalid can eat it, and there is no offensive odor from cooking it.

APPLE BREAD.

Prepare a dough exactly as if for rusks. When it is very light, roll out a cake about half an inch thick.—Spread stewed apples over it, and over that place another cake of dough like the first. Put it in a pan to lighten for a short time. Bake it. Have some thin slices of apples stewed very tender, and when the bread is baked lay these slices of apples all over the top, sprinkle them well with sugar, some small bits of butter, and either nutmeg or cinnamon, whichever you like. Put it back in the oven long enough for the sugar to form a coating on the top. Take it out, and when cold slice it nicely for tea.

IS BATHING OVERDONE?

A writer in the London Medical Times argues that the general opinion that frequent cold and warm baths, and washing the skin with cold water, accompanied by friction, are conducive to health and can do no harm, is a conclusion that cannot be admitted; for, on the one hand, millions of men take no baths of any kind, or at most slightly wash their face and hands once a week, and yet live to an old age in the enjoyment of good health; while, on the other hand, no one is able to prove that the use of the various forms of baths wards off disease, or that washing in cold water furnishes any protective power against catarrh, rheumatism, etc., the diseases which are supposed to particularly arise from catching cold. A comparison, too, says this writer, of the frequency of disease in towns where baths are frequently resorted to, and in the country, where they rarely can be got, says but little for their prophylactic power; and although it cannot be said that their frequent employment in towns is a cause of the greater mortality therein, neither can it be said that washing "all over" with cold water prevents disease.

We are not obliged to believe everything we hear. Stanley was told at Keragwe of a strange people "who had long ears descending to their feet, one ear forming a mat to sleep on, the other served to cover them from the cold, like a dressed hide."

It's hope that keeps us up.

It's hope that keeps our memories green.

It's hope that makes our lives sublime,

It's soap that keeps us clean.

CAUTION!
The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.
"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago, to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement has been clearly proved.

ANNIE'S LESSON.

BY MRS. MARGARET A. BRITTIN.

Annie, grandmother and I
Were seated at the kitchen fire
When Minnie laying on the floor
Concluded she would crawl up higher.

I placed her on the table there
And shook a pencil at the kit,
And dragged it round and round again
While pussy followed after it.

She'd stretch her paws and try to grab
The pencil as I moved it round,
Then drop her head as if asleep,
Then try to catch it at a bound.

Well, well, said Anna looking up,
I cannot see much fun in that,
To spend an hour in making sport
With a lead-pencil and a cat.

But I would then a lesson teach;
Anna, said I, do you not know
If I have foolish been to-night,
That all the world has done just so?

It seeks its joys in little things,
Pleasure in trifles, talk that's flat,
I'm practising the way of life
With a lead-pencil and a cat.

Then Anna wore a serious look,
And grandmother looked up and smiled;
And Mattie came into the room
And wondered what could ail the child.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

ONLY A PRINTER.

BY FANNIE A. STALL ALDEN.

"Oh, Kate, what does this mean?"

And Mrs. Nelson turned smilingly toward a fair, blue-eyed girl, who sat sewing by one of the sitting-rooms windows. The speaker held in her hands a dainty boquet of fresh buds and blossoms, which pleasant faced Nancy had just received at the front door for "Miss Kate."

"For me? Oh, aunty, how lovely!"

And the contents of a pretty work-basket were scattered unheeded over the floor, as the young girl sprang up, with hands extended to receive the treasure.

"Yes, for you, pussie. To whom are you indebted for the gift, pray?"

"I wish I knew," was the reply, as she proceeded to loosen the confining ribbon and place her flowers in water.

Well might the maiden exclaim at their beauty. Fragrant tuberoses, starry jessamine, drooping fuchsias, and pure pond lilies, set in sprays of fern and moss. Strange grouping of flowers, and yet how exquisite. So thought Kate Waldron, seating herself near the table on which she had placed the flowers in order to inhale their fragrance as she worked.

"I tell you what I think, Kate," exclaimed her black-eyed cousin Lucy, "those flowers came from Esquire Dunlere's, I am sure of it."

"And why from Esquire Dunlere's Lucy?" quiered Kate, raising a pair of wondering eyes to her cousin's face.

"A good reason 'why,' Miss Innocence," laughed Lucy. "There ain't no such flowers to be had in this village as those in Esquire Dunlere's green-house, I know, because I have seen them, so have you, and I wonder you don't think as I do about it. The new squire has been expected home for some weeks, but time flies, and he hasn't been seen as yet. Papa called there yesterday or day before, thinking the gentleman had arrived, but was disappointed."

"I wish Squire Dunlere had sent them," quietly remarked Mrs. Nelson.

"Why, aunty?"

"Because love, he is said to be a very superior young man, and I should rather like to see my bonny Kate installed as mistress of Dunlere mansion," replied the aunt.

"You shouldn't wish me to marry for money or position, Aunt Sybel?"

"Not for money or position alone, my dear Kate, but if you found a good, worthy husband who could throw these luxuries into the bargain, I should surely make no objections."

The rosy flush in the young girl's cheek deepened as she bent lovingly over the flowers, her sunny curls sweeping the dark green leaves of the pond lilies.

"I should rather die an old maid than marry a rich man, Aunt Sybel. Indeed, before I would bear the name of having married for money, I'd link myself to the poorest printer in Mr. Lane's office." And Kate's eyes gleamed dangerously.

"My child, the very idea of your marrying a printer," and Mrs. Nelson's face was the picture of dismay. She was at a loss to know what mad caper Kate would suggest next.

"What's the matter with the printers, aunty?" persisted Kate, enjoying the situation.

"Nothing the matter with them as a class, love, but I should be sorry to see my Kate united in marriage to a mere journeyman printer."

"Mere journeyman printer," mimicked Kate, as Mrs. Nelson left the room. "I wonder if Uncle Harold wasn't a poor man once? It seems to me that mamma used to say 'a noble man elevates his occupation,' not that the occupation elevated the man if he was naturally either a knave or a fool. Bah! mere journeyman printer, indeed!"

It was well that Kate did not see the tall, good-looking young man who just at this moment closed the gate gently behind him and stole away through the orchard with an amused smile lurking about his fine mouth.

"Won't marry a rich man, eh, Miss Kate?" he murmured, a tender light shining in his dark eyes. "Dear little golden head, we'll see about that."

* * * * *

"Kate, Kate, see here!"

"What, Lucy?"

And Kate Waldron, came flying down the broad stairway, looking very lovely in her white muslin, caught up here and there by knots of ribbon as blue as her eyes.

The young girl's question was answered by Nancy, who came forward with a smile on her round, good natured face.

"Another boquet for you, Miss Kate," holding out the mass of beauty and fragrance as she spoke.

"Oh!"

Kate's sparkling eyes and glowing cheeks were sufficient evidence of her delight as she received the boquet, and turned into the parlor, followed by Lucy.

"Why, Kate, as sure as I live there's a note—a bona fide love billet, tied with crimson ribbon. Do let me see it," pleaded the mischievous girl.

But Kate tucked the note in her pocket, and quietly attended to the arranging of her precious flowers, with, however, a deeper glow in her soft cheek, and an added sparkle to her eyes.

As soon as possible she escaped from the room and her cousin's bantering, mounting the stairs to her own cozy boudoir, located on the second floor of Dr. Nelson's handsome residence.

The next we see of Kate Waldron she had tied a broad-brimmed hat over her golden curls, and was crossing the yard to her uncle's office.

"Read it, please, Uncle Harold, and tell me what you think!" And Kate laid a tiny, perfumed note in his palm. Dr. Nelson complied.

"Well, pussie," with a smile, as he finished reading, "what do you propose doing about it, eh? Shall you grant an introduction to the printer?"

"Whatever you say, uncle," replied the flushing girl, resting her head upon his arm.

Dr. Nelson drew his niece closer to him, and tenderly kissed her cheek.

"Well, then, Katy-did answer it by all means. I rather like that note, it has the ring of true metal in it. A young man not ashamed of an honest profession, however humble, and the friend of such a man as I know our squire to be, is a rarity in these days. Let him call and present his credentials to me. If they are all right I will favor him with an introduction to my bonny Kate. What does aunty say?"

"She doesn't know anything about it," was Kate's demure reply. "Aunty doesn't like printers, and so I——"

"Ah! I understand, you minx. All right. Write your note and give the chap permission to call to-morrow evening. I will attend to this case."

A fond kiss and a smile were his reward, as Kate bounded off to do her uncle's bidding.

The next evening after tea found our heroine in her own room kneeling by the window.

"Where are you Kate?" asked Lucy, coming into the room. "There is a gentleman in the parlor with papa, who wishes to see you. I'm dying with curiosity to learn his name. Perhaps it's your knight of the flowers, Kate," she called after her.

But Kate did not hear. She was already pausing at the parlor door.

It was a lovely moonlight night, and as Kate entered the parlor, a soft ray, stealing in at the open window, rested on her white dress, and enveloped her sweet face and golden hair in its pale glory.

Dr. Nelson arose from the sofa, where he had been chatting with a tall, handsome stranger whom he introduced as "Mr. Ray De Lile."

Mr. De Lile bowed low over the plump, white hand, Kate extended in her frank, bewitching way.

"Miss Kate, I cannot find words in which to thank you for your kindness in granting the favor I asked."

What Kate replied we cannot tell you, but when Dr. Nelson slipped out of the room a few minutes later, and joined his wondering wife and daughter in the back parlor, we doubt if he was soon missed by the two conversing so pleasantly upon the sofa.

Ray De Lile became a constant visitor at Dr. Nelson's. He had asked and received permission to present his friend, Esquire Dunlere, to the doctor's family, and few evenings passed that did not find one or both of the young men chatting with Lucy and Kate upon the moonlit piazza, or watching the evening primroses unfold their petals with a breath of fragrance, down by the garden gate.

"Lucy's black eyes have captured the Squire, Mr. De Lile," laughed Kate, late one Saturday afternoon, as she suffered the young man to draw her out of the parlor, upon the cool, shady piazza, inclining her head toward the door as she spoke.

"I am not so sure of that, Miss Kate," replied the gentleman addressed, with a look and smile that was lost upon the merry girl, who suddenly discovered a red-bird's nest hidden away among the glossy leaves of a honey suckle, that climbed up one side of the piazza hiding the white columns with its quivering foliage and spikes of fragant bloom.

"Down, Rolla, down!" exclaimed the girl, as a beautiful dog bounded up the steps and fawned upon her. "Down, sir! If you ever disturb those scarlet songsters you and I are no longer friends."

The dog crouched at her feet in an instant, and raised his bright eyes pleadingly to his face.

"There old fellow, I didn't scold you."

And Kate patted his head tenderly.

"Come, Sir Rolla, this will never do. Miss Kate may I claim your company for a stroll? It is to lovely to remain within doors."

"If Rolla is allowed to make one of the party," replied Kate mischeviously.

"Brother Rolla! Do you know I am half inclined to be jealous of that dog, you little tease?"

"No, sir; I confess to a better opinion of you," retorted Kate. "Come, Rolla."

And with a merry glance at Ray, the young girl bounded down the steps, followed by the dog, bent on a race to the gate.

Ray De Lile drew her hand through his arm a few moments later.

"Will you walk with me now, or do you intend entertaining Rolla?" he asked quietly.

"I guess I'm tired of running," with a laugh. "Where are we going?"

Ray answered her by directing their steps towards the Dunlere's. They often strayed thither, all four of the young people—Ray and Kate, Squire Dunlere and Lucy, therefore the girl was not surprised when Ray led her to their favorite seat beside a fountain, whose laughing waters, in ceaseless motion, bathed Kate's golden curls in its cloud-like stray.

For a time Ray was silent. He leaned back in his rustic chair and watched his companion as she romped with Rolla, flinging her handkerchief out on the waters of the mimic lake, and laughing gleefully as the dog dashed after and laid it at her feet.

Presently Ray spoke.

"Kate will you listen to me for a few moments?"

"I'll try," with a mirthful glance.

"Then listen. I love you. Will you be my wife?"

"Here, Rolla, here! It is time you were on guard."

But even in the pale moonlight, Ray could see the deepening flush in the girl's soft cheek, and note the drooping of her eyes. He drew her gently to him.

"Kate, am I mistaken? have you no love for me?"

The bright head dropped upon his shoulder, but she did not answer. Ray would have a 'yes' from her, and very soon a slender gold ring gleamed upon her finger.

"It was my angel mother's," whispered Ray.

"Ray, she bequeathed it to me on her death-bed, saying she wished it to be my betrothal ring if I ever loved. A christian mother's blessing seals our troth!"

And the young man pressed his first kiss upon the sweet face raised so trustingly to his own.

"I have something to tell you, Kate," added he, presently. "Dunlere and Lucy are engaged. We can all be married at the same time. Won't it be splendid?"

"Married! Mercy, Ray! Don't take away my breath. We shall not marry for ever so long."

"Shan't we? Do you hear that, Rolla?" patting the head of the noble animal, who stood gravely regarding them. "I don't think you will be Kate Waldron three months hence little golden head."

"But you haven't asked Uncle Harold."

"Haven't I, though? Darling," and Ray pressed the little hand resting on his arm. "Uncle Harold gave his consent before I dared speak of love to you."

* * * * *

There was to be a double wedding at Dr. Nelson's, Esquire Dunlere and the merry Lucy, De Lile and our bonny Kate, were to be united on the same evening and at the same hour. Both girls were as busy as bees, and Aunt Sybel, sufficiently delighted with the match Lucy was making to be able to overlook the fact that Kate was marrying a "journeyman printer," bustled about with an air of smiling importance; while the Squire and Ray managed to be in the greater part of the time losing the girls' spools and scissors, and tangling their silks in a manner which might have been provoking under other circumstances.

At last the eventful evening arrived, and Kate and Lucy, robed alike in pure white, with misty veils and wreaths of orange blossoms, descended to the library, where they were awaited by the bridegrooms elect.

"Come, Ray and Kate, Dunlere and Lucy—are you ready?" called Doctor Nelson's cheery voice, and very soon the lovers were standing before the minister who had been selected to perform the ceremony.

Ray and Kate were united first, and at once exchanged places with Dunlere and Lucy, who were speedily proclaimed man and wife. Then followed congratulations of relatives and friends.

The bride's cake was cut, and just before entering the supper-room the minister gave each of the brides a folded paper. They immediately intrusted the same to the care of their husbands, and thought no more about it.

It had been arranged that Ray and Kate should accompany Dunlere and Lucy to their residence that night, remaining with them until Ray's "bird's nest," as he fondly styled the home he said he was getting in readiness for his darling, should be open to receive them.

Accordingly, at a late hour the newly wedded lovers where seated in a carriage, and driving rapidly toward the Dunlere mansion.

Arrived there, Kate was surprised to see Dunlere draw back, and allow Ray to lead the way.

The parlors were brilliently lighted, and the old housekeeper, arrayed in her best, stood smiling to receive them.

She addressed Ray, as Master, and murmured a blessing on the young mistress' golden head.

"Welcome home, darling!" exclaimed Ray, fondly.

"Why, Ray, what does this mean?" queried the wondering Kate.

"Simply, that you are Mrs. Esquire Dunlere, and that my friend Merton and Lucy are our guests at present," laughed the happy bridegroom.

"And your name," she asked breathlessly.

"Is Alvourney De Lile Dunlere; at your service. Forgive me, sweetest; you stoutly declared you would not marry a rich man, preferring a printer, and I having for amusement learned the art of typein the office of my friend Merton who is an editor, contrived to play a trick, in order to gain my coveted bride. We were both strangers here, you see, so far as appearances goes, and Dick had no trouble in the personating of me. Lucy was made acquainted with the whole plot by Merton, who found himself in a sorry fix for a short time, sailing under false colors with the girl he learned to love; but Lucy was true blue and loved him none the less because he was an editor instead of a squire. And now precious one, will you forgive your husband?"

The golden curls swept his shoulder as the young wife answered, with a touch of archness in her tender tones.

"Yes, Ray, I can afford to forgive you, as I have married a printer after all."

"To be sure, Katy-did, and," and, with a world of mischief in his eyes, "a rich man into the bargain."

HABITS OF A BUSINESS MAN.

A sacred regard to the principles of justice forms the basis of every transaction, and regards the conduct of the upright man of business.

He is strict in keeping his engagements.

Does nothing carelessly or in a great hurry.

Employs nobody to do what he can easily do himself.

Keeps everything in its proper place.

Leaves nothing undone that ought to be done, and which circumstances permit him to do.

Keeps his designs and business from the views of others.

Is prompt and decisive in his dealings and does not overtrade his capital.

Prefers short credits to long ones, and cash to credit at all times, either in buying or selling, and small profits in cases with little risk, to the chance of better gains with more hazard.

He is clear and explicit in all his bargains.

Leaves nothing of consequence to his memory which he can and ought to commit to writing.

Keeps copies of important letters, and has all letters, invoices and business documents put away in an orderly manner, so that on occasion may be easily referred to.

Is always at the head of his business, well knowing that if he leaves it it will leave him.

Holds as a maxim that he whose credit is suspected is not one to be trusted.

Is constantly examining in his books, and sees through all his affairs as far as care and attention will enable him.

Balances regularly at stated times, and then makes out and transmits all his accounts current to his customers, both at home and abroad.

Avoids as much as possible all sorts of accommodations in money matters, and lawsuits where there is the least hazard.

He is economical in his expenditures, always living within his means.

Keeps a memorandum book in his pocket, in which he notes every particular relative to appointments, addresses and petty cash matters.

Is cautious how he becomes security for any person, and generous when urged by motives of humility.

Let a man act strictly to these habits; when once begun they will be easy to continue.

Take pleasure in your business, and it will become your recreation.

Hope for the best, think for the worst, and manfully bear whatever happens.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

A useless life is an easy death.

The fool prays only in the storm.

Great hearts, like oceans, never congeal.

Judge no man until you have stood in his place.

Popular opinion is the greatest lie in the world.

He is no true friend who has nothing but compliments and praise for you.

Many people find their only happiness in forcing themselves to be happy.

Return equity and justice for evil done to you, and buy goodness by goodness.

Think not of faults committed in the past when one has reformed his conduct.

Real virtue consists in integrity of heart and loving your neighbor as yourself.

The man who studies to be revenged only manages to keep his own wounds green.

The wealth of a man is the number of things he loves and blesses, that he is loved and blessed by.

Without the virtue of humility one can neither be honest in poverty nor contented in abundance.

Evil is like a nightmare—the instant you begin to strive with it, to bestir yourself, it has already ended.

Choose thou for thy friend, or as husband to thy daughter, a poor and righteous man, rather than one rich and unrighteous.

How great one's virtue is best, appears in seasons of adversity; for such occasion do not make a man frail, but show what he is.

If you have built castles in the air your work need not be lost; that is where they should be. Now put foundations under them.

BREVITIES.

You can no more make good by doing evil than you can get wool from a hydraulic ram.

Ill temper and smoke are about equal in their ability to drive a man out of the house.

A Paducah (Ky.) paper says money is so scarce in that place that even the change in the weather is hailed with pleasure.

"Bredren," said a darkey in a prayer meeting, "I feel's if I could talk more good in five minutes dan I could do in a year."

It may be slightly Hibernian, but it is nevertheless true, that the best way to look at the faults of your friends is to shut your eyes.

A gossip ought not to rank as the equal of a sagacious clam; for the clam knows to a nicety when to shut up, but the gossip does not.

If you would be clear and forcible, don't use foreign words. Be natural. A man never stops to hunt up a foreign word when he is stung by a hornet.

Actual occurence in a Chicago street-car; Stylish lady holding a lap dog is about ready to leave the car. Dog manifests impatience. Lady says in her sweetest tones, "Wait, darling, till mamma puts on her glove." Passengers roar with laughter.

An old bachelor was recently heard saying to a young lady, "There is more jewelry worn now than when I was young, but there's one piece I always admire which I don't often see now." "What is that?" asked "miss." "A thimble," was the reply.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said an Irish barrister, "it will be for you to say whether this defendant shall be allowed to come into court with unblushing footsteps, with the cloak of hypocrisy in his mouth, and draw three bullocks out of my client's pocket with impunity."

"Where was Bishop Latimer burned to death?" asked a teacher in a commanding voice. "Joshua knows," said a little girl at the bottom of the class. "Well," said the teacher, "if Joshua knows he may tell." "In the fire," replied Joshua, looking very grave and wise.

A schoolmistress, while taking down the names and ages of her pupils, and the names of their parents, at the beginning of the term, asked one little fellow, "What's your father's name?" "Oh, you needn't take down his name, he's too old to go to school to a woman," was the reply.

An agent who had sold a Dutchman some goods, was to deliver them in the afternoon at the residence of the purchaser. The dutchman gave him the following directions: "You shoost goes behind the church; den you turns up to the right for a while till you see a house mit a big hog in the yard. Dots me."

It was a very honest old Dutch Judge in Schoharie county who listened for several hours to the arguments of counsel, and then said: "Dis case has peen ferry ably argued by counsel on both sides, and dare have peen some ferry nice points of law brought up. I shall dake dree days to gonsider dose points, but I shall eventually decide for de plaintiff."

A young man from the country was in town and entered a photograph gallery to have his picture taken. After seating him, the operator told him to assume a pleasant expression. "Think of something cheerful," he said, "think of your girl." A terrible scowl took possession of the young man's face, and jumping up he exclaimed: "Think of the duce. She went home with another feller last night, and she can go to thunder for me!" He evidently thought of her, but the pleasant expression was not forthcoming.

The River and Harbor Bill contains the following appropriations for the Third Congressional District of New Jersey: Raritan river, $60,000; Shrewsbury river, $28,000; Manasquan river, $12,000; Rahway river, $10,000; Elizabeth river, $7,500; Woodbridge creek, $4,000; survey of South river, $4,000, survey of Cheesequakes creek, $3,000; total, $128,500.

Mr. Zachariah Chandler, addressing the republican members of the Michigan legislature, after they had immortalized themselves by re-electing him to the United States Senate, declared that he would be willing that every telegram he ever sent in the election of 1876 should be published in the democratic press. A safe declaration to make after all the republican despatches have been burned!

Contrary to the hopes of the demagogues of the Republican party, the South turns up "solid" against the war claims. In the debate in the House of Representatives on Friday last, Messrs. Shelley, of Alabama, and Aiken, of South Carolina, both took sides against all these claims. Mr. Blackburn added to the discomfiture of the Republicans by recalling the fact that the only money paid for claims has been voted by a Republican Congress.

On the fourth day of March coming, for the first time in nineteen years, the Democrats will be in control of both branches of the Legislative Department of the National Government. The day should be made one of Democratic rejoicing everywhere. Meetings should be held throughout the country, congratulations exchanged, old feuds within the party lines adjusted, and the parties thereto mutually forgiven; and each individual in the great mass should consecrate himself anew to the important work in hand. There should be encouragement in the fact that complete power in the nation is so nearly attained—sufficient at least to inspire Democrats with a nerve and to an effort that will place the election of a Democratic President in 1880 beyond a peradventure.—*Hunterdon Co. Martin Coleman, the young man who four weeks ago, in the course of a quarrel with his father in Newark, N. J., stabbed his parent in the arm, inflicting a wound which resulted in death, was called up for sentence before Judge Depue on Saturday last, he having pleaded guilty. Coleman's counsel made a strong appeal for mercy, setting forth in extenuation of the young man's awful crime the fact that his father had begun the quarrel, and that the prisoner had no intention of doing his father injury, as shown by his not stabbing him in a part considered vital. On account of the youth and repentance of the culprit, and of his having conveyed to his mother his share of his father's property, the Court reduced the penalty of the crime one-half and sentenced him to five years' hard labor in the State Prison.

The letter carriers of New York were very busy on Friday delivering valentines. Mr. Gayler, general superintendent of deliveries, gives the following figures of the "love" missives delivered from the general office and various stations:—General office, 9,953; station A, 7,471; station B, 16,289; station C, 12,130; station D, 15,372; station E, 17,825; station F, 12,600; station G, 18,490; station H, 10,010; station K, 2,859; station L, 4,999; station M, 785; Morrisania, 1,917; Tremont, 263; Fordham, 294; West Farms, 91; Riverdale, 219; Spuyten Duyvil, 100, and Kingsbridge, 156—making a total of 131,458. About 16,000 of these were costly handsome boxes, containing in numerous instances valuable presents. It is also estimated that at least 25,000 valentines were sent outside of the city. Those valentines containing glass covers were held on account of the law prohibiting the carriage of the brittle material. Others were held for insufficient postage.

The House Committee on Appropriations have proposed a bill to carry out the act of January 25th inst., granting arrears of pensions. This measure will appropriate $25,000,000 to pay arrears to pensioners already on the rolls and about two millions to pay those claims which will be matured the present year. It also appropriates about $53,000 for the clerical labor to carry out the provisions of the bill. In addition to making the necessary appropriations this act will provide that the rate at which the arrears shall be computed in the cases which have heretofore been allowed, or which shall hereafter be allowed, shall be graded according to the disability of the pensioner. It is thought that this construction of the law will save the government at least ten millions of dollars, besides removing the charge that the original bill is unjust, because it gives to a new claimant a greater amount than the one already on the rolls having the same disability.

The bill granting power to construct a bridge over waters between the Communipaw Ferry and Jersey City, in the interest of the Central Railroad Company, came up for final passage in the House of Assembly last Monday night, and unfortunately was lost. We say unfortunately, because it is a misfortune to the travelling public that there is not more easy means of access to Jersey City from Communipaw. Below we give the vote on the bill.

The association have purchased thirty acres on the south side of Fletcher Lake, extended the lake to the Deal turnpike, and will lay out a carriage drive around the lake. The recent cancellation of insurance policies on account of inadequate protection against fire has greatly alarmed property owners, and they are urging the purchase of more engines.

INSANITY OF A JUROR.

Herman Dugan, one of the jurors in the Smith murder trial, in Jersey City, was taken sick with what was supposed to be malarial fever Friday night; but his illness was not thought to be serious. Saturday evening he was worse, and Dr. John Q. Bird, member of the Board of Freeholders, was called to attend him. Yesterday ten of the jurors, including Mr. Dugan, went to the morning services at the Simpson Methodist Church, on Central avenue. Dugan acted very strangely while in church, and laughed and cried by turns. When the jurors returned to the Court House Hotel, where they are boarding, Dugan's actions caused alarm, and Sheriff Toffey was sent for. He summoned Dr. Bird, who made an examination and declared Dugan insane. Dr. Bird refused to make any statement last night, as he had been pledged to secrecy. Sheriff Toffey said at midnight that Dugan was undoubtedly insane, and that the attention of the Court would be called to the matter to day. It is supposed that his insanity was caused by excitement over the trial.

THE LAWS FOR 1879.

The official authorities have issued the first installment of "the laws for 1879," and the CONSTITUTIONALIST, which has been designated as one of the newspapers in this county in which they shall be published, in this issue commences to publish the same. All laws are supposed to be of general interest, and as their publication shall be continued from week to week, or as fast as forwarded from Trenton, it will be a matter of interest for those who may hereafter have occasion to refer to them, to preserve the copies. There will undoubtedly be much important legislation this season, and if people would read the papers as intelligently as they ought, there need be little excuse for ignorance in many matters. In this connection, Governor McClellan has thus far attached his veto to four Senate and seven Assembly bills, which are the following:

To authorize the renewal of city bonds; concerning the election of trustees of orphan asylum associations; concerning monument and statute associations; respecting railroad and canal police; to defining the power of public road boards in the macadamizing of public roads and avenues; limiting the number of persons to witness execution of the death penalty to twelve freeholders, including two physicians and twelve deputies.

NO YELLOW FEVER SOUTH.

MEMPHIS, Feb. 12.

I have just had an interview with Mr. A. D. Langstaff, President of the Howard Association, and Dr. R. W. Mitchell, who was medical director of the association during the epidemic here. They both authorize me to emphatically state that the rumor about the reappearance of the yellow fever in the South is wholly untrue.

THE NEXT CENSUS.

The Senate by a vote of 46 to 4, Thursday of last week passed the Census bill, which provides for the appointment of a Superintendent of the Census, with clerks and assistants, and in every State of Supervisors of Census, who are to apportion the State and to appoint enumerators, who shall receive two cents for every person reported, two cents for every death reported, ten cents for every farm; and fifteen cents for every establishment of productive industry enumerated and returned. The sub-divisions assigned to each enumerator shall not exceed 4,000 inhabitants according to the census of 1870. The taking is to be begun on the 1st of June, 1880, and the cost is to be limited to $3,000,000.

THE LEGISLATURE.

TRENTON, FEB. 19, 1879.

The Republican caucus last night decided to cut down the salaries of the Judiciary, State Officials, County Clerks and Prosecutors of the Pleas. As a consequence in the Senate to-day Mr. Francis introduced a series of bills which takes away all fees and fixes the annual salaries as follows: Clerks of Counties of over 100,000 inhabitants, $8,000; between 40,000 and 100,000, not less than $1,200 nor more than $3,000; between 20,000 and 40,000, not less than $500 nor more than $1,200; less than 20,000, not less than $200 nor more than $500. Prosecutors of the Pleas—In Counties of 100,000 population or more, not less than $3,000 nor more than $4,000; between 40,000 and 100,000, not less than $1,200 nor more than $3,500; between 20,000 and 40,000, not less than $500 nor more than $1,200; less than 20,000, not less than $200 nor more than $500. The Chancellor, $10,000; Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, $8,500; Associate Justices, each, $8,000.

Another bill is in preparation to cut down the fees of Sheriffs. The common belief is that those officials in Hudson and Essex Counties receive less than $40,000 a year apiece.

Senator Bod[illegible] introduced a bill to provide for a State Board of Lunacy, the managers of the lunatic asylums at Trenton and Morristown to constitute such Board, which shall report annually to the Governor.

A bill was introduced providing for the more certain relief of insane paupers and indigent insane persons.

Mr. Nichols introduced a bill to prevent betting on horse racing.

Mr. Fiedler brought in an act for the better protection of depositors in banks, savings banks and trust companies; providing that the managers and directors of such institutions shall be liable for the full amount of the deposits in case there shall be a collapse.

Mr. Ramsey's bills provides that the salaries of County Superintendents shall be: In Counties of 25,000 inhabitants, $300; between 25,000 and 50,000, $600; between 50,000 and 75,000, $900, and over 75,000, $1,200.

A bill was introduced by Senator Francis curtailing the fees of the clerks of the Supreme Court and in Chancery thirty per cent.

A three story frame tenement house in Burnett street, New Brunswick, was destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. Three families lived in the house and lost all. The house belonged to Andrew Madden, and was worth $25,000. The insurance policy had run out a week ago. After the fire a fight occurred among the members of Raritan Hose Company. Chief Engineer [illegible] was struck on the head with a [illegible] while trying to quell the disturbance.

WHO BOUGHT THE PRESIDENCY?

Under this heading the New York Evening Express says that in addition to the proofs already obtained, the documents are in that city showing the bargain by which the purchase was finally consummated. It says:

The fact left no doubt that a bargain was made between some Southern Congressmen on the one hand and Republicans who acted in behalf of Hayes on the other, by which the former consented to cease their opposition to the count provided Hayes would recognize Hampton as Governor of South Carolina and Nicholls as Governor of Louisiana should he become President. A single link in the incriminating chain of evidence connecting these corrupt arrangements with Hayes was missing. That link was contained in documents which the committee could not find. They are in this city. They show that Mr. Horne, of Washington, who acted as the confidential agent of Lieutenant Governor Young, of Ohio—the intimate personal friend and representative of Governor Hayes—telegraphed to Young, who understood the distinct terms of the bargain, asking if the count could go on. Young asked, in reply, how Nicholls could be recognized. Horne replied that the whole thing could be done under a certain law of Louisiana. Young immediately answered, stating that Horne's despatch had been shown to Governor Hayes, and was approved by him. The bargain was consummated. The filibustering ceased. Hayes was counted in and inaugurated. The terms of the bargain were fulfilled by the recognition of Hampton and Nicholls. The documents proving that Hayes accepted and approved the terms of this bargain, and actually purchased the Presidency, are in this city. We state what we do know. We have seen the papers, and know other persons who have seen them.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."
MESSRS. EDITORS;

What has become of the money collected as our quota of the State and county taxes.

The Charter provides "that the collector of revenue shall pay over all moneys received by him for the City, as soon as collected, to the Treasurer of said City, who shall pay over to the Treasurer of the State, or to the collector of Union County, the full quota of taxes required by law to be raised in said City for State and County purposes, so far as the same may have been collected."

We do not see any account in the Treasurer's report that any money has ever been paid him on account of State and County purposes, and we understand that the City is largely in arrears to the State and County. Will some one who is conversant in the matter, rise and explain!

Laws of New Jersey.

CHAPTER I.

A supplement to an act entitled "An act authorizing the incorporated cities, towns and townships of this state to renew matured and maturing bonds," approved March eighth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section one of an act entitled "An act authorizing the incorporated cities, towns and townships of this state to renew matured and maturing bonds," approved March eighth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven, which reads as follows:

"1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever any bonds, heretofore legally issued by any incorporated city, town or township in this state, under the authority of law, are now due and unpaid, or shall hereafter become due, the board of aldermen or common council or township committee of any such city, town or township may renew ninety-six and two-thirds per centum of said indebtedness, or any less part thereof, by the issuing of the bonds of said city, town or township for that purpose, which bonds shall be made payable at periods of time not exceeding thirty years from the date of issuing the same, and shall draw such rate of interest, not exceeding seven per centum per annum, and be issued in such sums as the board of aldermen, common council or township committee of any such city, town or township shall by ordinance or resolution determine; which bonds shall be of the denomination of not less than fifty dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and shall be executed under the corporate seal of said city, town or township, and the signature of the mayor or chairman of the township committee thereof, and shall have coupons attached for every half year's interest until due; which coupons shall be signed by the said mayor or chairman, and numbered to correspond with the bond to which they shall respectively be attached; and all the bonds issued under this act shall be numbered, and a register of such numbers, the date of issuing, and the time of payment, shall be made by the said mayor or chairman of said city, town or township, in a book to be provided for that purpose," be amended so as to read as follows:

1. An act concerning the election of trustees of orphan asylum associations.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for any incorporated orphan asylum association in this state to change the time of holding the annual election of trustees of such association, at any annual or special meeting of the association, by the affirmative votes of three-fourths of the members present at such meeting; provided, ten days' notice of the intention to propose a change in the time of holding such annual election shall have been been given by at least two insertions in a newspaper printed and published in the county in which such association exists, within two weeks next preceding the meeting at which such change is voted upon; and if at such meeting it shall be decided, by the aforesaid vote, to hold the annual election immediately, such election may be held forthwith; and the trustees and officers whose terms of office would expire in that year shall vacate their several offices immediately upon the election of their successors.

Supplement to an act entitled "An act to incorporate associations for the erection and maintenance of monuments and statues," approved March nineteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall and may be lawful for any association incorporated under the provisions of the act to which this is a supplement, whenever there shall be in the treasury of such association moneys which have been or shall be donated for the purposes for which such association was or may be incorporated, but not sufficient in amount to accomplish such purposes, to loan such moneys or any part thereof by order of and under the direction of the executive committee of such association at the legal rate of interest, and to invest the same either upon bond and mortgage on real estate, or in securities of the United States or of the state of New Jersey, or of any county within said state, and to keep the same invested until such time as the trustees of such association shall determine that the accumulations of interest together with the principal shall be sufficient for the purposes for which said association was incorporated.

2. And be it enacted, That such association shall have power to collect the moneys so loaned or sell the securities on which the same shall be invested, and all interest growing due thereon, under the direction of the executive committee of such association, and shall apply the moneys, so derived to the purposes for which such association was incorporated, whenever the trustees shall determine, as provided in the preceding section.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

THE entertainment for the benefit of the Choir of Holy Cross Church came off last Wednesday evening before a crowded house. The programme was a good one and well performed. Too much praise cannot be awarded the "Babes in the Woods," which was a grand and decided success. The "Babes" done their parts with children style. Mr. W. C. played the part of Uncle, and he done it in fine style.

At a meeting of the taxpayers of North Plainfield Township, held in the School building, last Thursday evening, to take into consideration the advisability of raising an additional amount of $600 above that already appropriated to run the Public School, the present season, a vote was taken, after a long and spirited debate, which resulted in the citizens present voting against the proposed additional appropriation.

Geo. Demler, Jr., has been a sufferer of late months from a tumor on the jaw. An operation and successful removal of same was performed by Dr. Fields, of Bound Brook, last week, assisted by Dr. Probasco, of this city.

Sea Food.

It is conceded by the scientific that so-called "sea food" is excellent for the nervous system, and COD-LIVER OIL, once a medicine, is now more intelligently named a "fatty food." A well-known preparation, thoroughly endorsed, combining every essential for supplying the waste of the system, is Peter Moller's COD-LIVER OIL, which has again taken the highest (Gold) Medal at the Paris Exposition.

Cut this out—It May Save your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderous cures astonishes every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggists, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents.

Smalley's Defiance Asparagus.
NEW VARIETY.
The merits and claims of the "Defiance," are as follows: It is earlier, a larger grass, softer, more tender, free from wood, the flavor sweet and very delicate, far superior to all other varieties: It will produce double that of the "Colossal" and can cut it longer. It will continue to grow longer than any other sort. It has been tested for the past three years. I know my roots and seeds to be strictly pure, as I am the sole originator of it; shall not put any seed in the market this year, as I intend planting it myself. It is the best Asparagus grown, either for private use or for market. We would recommend it in preference to all others. Price $3 per 100, and $20 per 1000. No charge for boxes or packing.—Purchasers pay their express. Orders must be accompanied by a remittance, or satisfactory reference. Will be sent by express C. O. D.
ABRAHAM SMALLEY, Bound Brook, N. J.
We, the undersigned, have tested the above variety of Asparagus, and unhesitatingly recommend it as all that is claimed for it, in fact it is a marvel in the shape of this delicious vegetable:

A RECEIVING basin is sadly needed on the northwest corner of Peace and Second Sts., communicating with the sewer, so that the water will run off after heavy rains and thaws.

THE Board of Trade meets next Monday evening. Why don't that body look after the coal business of Plainfield, and ascertain where the fault lays regarding high prices?

FRED BIRD, a member of the Plainfield Athletic Club, of this city, fell from a trapeze in the Gymnasium of the Club, while practicing a day or two since, and broke an arm.

POLICEMAN Ed. Laing feels proud. He received all the votes of the City Fathers last Monday evening, on his confirmation as police officer. He is a faithful officer and deserved the vote.

MRS. M. A. HAINES slipped and fell on the icy sidewalk near the Park House, last Monday, and broke one of her arms. Dr. Hart attended the case and set the broken limb. The lady is progressing favorably.

BERRY & THORN are making decided improvement in the interior of their Hardware Store. From the number of boxes being substituted for shelving, it reminds the beholder of a Post Office—and that is what the old gentleman says it is.

ON Thursday last, Dr. Chas. A. Hart, assisted by Drs. Probasco, Buckingham and Fritz, successfully amputated the diseased leg of Mr. Wm. Sims, of this city, gangrene being the cause. The patient is doing well, with every indication of ultimate recovery.

"EDGEWOOD" is the appropriate name given the fine residence of Mr. Wm. Taylor, on Somerset St., North Plainfield. In the Summer time "Edgewood" is a truly beautiful country residence, while Mr. and Mrs. T. are hospitable entertainers of friends who visit them.

SOLOMON FLAKO, boot and shoe maker, on Front Street, corner of Church, whose card appears in this paper, receives the highest encomiums from customers for his neat fitting work and low prices. Give him a call and you will not be tortured with a tight or ungainly looking boot or shoe.

THE residence of Peter Dumont, Esq., corner of Sixth and Peace Streets, was entered by thieves on Sunday night last, while the family were at church, and all the apartments thoroughly ransacked. Entrance was effected through a window over the bay-window on the first floor. The thieves obtained but little plunder, however, only articles of small value being missed.

A RARE case of honesty we record this week. Edward Berry, a poor laboring man in the employ of Mr. Ackerman, corner of Front and Richmond Streets, this city, found a gold watch and chain on Front Street, the other evening. By inquiry he ascertained the name of the owner and returned the articles, being suitably rewarded by the lady owner for his honesty.

J. ADAMS, a pedestrian of New York city, performed the feat of walking 3 miles in 20 minutes and 51 seconds, on Front Street, this city on Wednesday afternoon last. His time made, as reported by a trustworthy time-keeper, was as follows: First half mile made in 3.05; Second, 3.25; Third, 3.32; Fourth, 4.30; Fifth, 3.30; Sixth, 3.27. Large crowds lined the sidewalks to witness the efforts of the pedestrian. A collection was taken up for his benefit after the walk.

TUESDAY evening, 18th inst., was set apart for the Normal Class, and by mistake the Monthly Reception of the Y. M. C. A. was announced for the same evening. The Reception has consequently been postponed one week, to Tuesday evening, the 25th inst., at Assembly Hall. The entertaining programme of Magical performances and Anti-Spiritualism, as announced last week, will be performed. Admission 10 cents.—Tickets issued for this week will be good at the entertainment on the 25th inst.

Trials of our Post Office Officials.

Friday last being St. Valentine's Day an actual count was taken of the number of persons who came to the Post Office, whether in quest of a large white envelope or that yellow business letter that each and almost every one expected, and from appearance got. Total number, five thousand, five hundred and seventy-five men, women and children, and "tell it not," thirty-four dogs (one in arms). When the reader considers that all had to be answered (dogs excepted) "yes" or no," and about one-third of the total number convinced by argument that "nothing" meant no valentine, they may judge whether it is a pleasure to run the Post Office in Plainfield or not. One modest individual requested Mrs. Vail to write on the end of an envelope "If not called for in ten days return to —— Plainfield."—Your reporter relieved the young man, at Mrs. V's request, and he went his way cursing Postmaster and clerks for not having a Gordon Press run in connection with the Post Office for the accommodation of the public. We noticed that the number of clerks employed by our Postmaster would be entirely inadequate, were it not that they make up in efficiency what they lack in numbers.

A NUMBER of ex-Councilman S. C. Ryder's friends assembled at his residence on Sixth Street, this city, last Thursday evening, to celebrate the 25th wedding anniversary of that gentleman. A pleasant evening was enjoyed, and a number of appropriate and useful gifts from friends presented and almost attested the fact that "Uncle Steve" has many warm friends and acquaintances.

We regret to learn that Mr. He[illegible] P. Chapman, of this city, was taken q[illegible] ill on his return from New York, on T[illegible]day of last week, and now lies very sick [illegible]ith Pneumonia.

Ex-Councilman J. B. Brown has [illegible]en confined to his home in conseque[illegible] of sickness for a week past, but is now [illegible]in able to be out of doors.

John R. Thomas, formerly a salesm[illegible] in Pope Bros. store, this city, is now [illegible] the employ of Messrs. Stoddard, Duncan [illegible]an Pelt, New Brunswick.

Mrs. Fred Caspar, whose great su[illegible]ng has been the comment of many, di[illegible]recently of the (Pyæmia) poisoning o[illegible] the blood, and not of the neuralgia, a[illegible] was stated in last week's Times.

A New Reader.

W. Bradford Williams, grandson o[illegible] the late Rev. C. C. Williams, D. D. [illegible]ho preached in this place for many year[illegible] has now quite a reputation as a Reader, [illegible] at no very distant day will be in Plainfi[illegible] to give some of his select entertainmen[illegible] It is rarely we come in contact with an [illegible]cutionist of such diversified talents. [illegible] is not only able to render some of the [illegible]et trying selections from Shakespeare [illegible]d other classic writers, but his impersona[illegible]ns of such characters as "Rip Van Wi[illegible]," "Lord Dundreary," "Shamus O'B[illegible]," &c., is said to be unusually fine. Mr. [illegible]illiams is likewise a student for the Mini[illegible]y.

Oratorio of "St. Paul."

Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday [illegible]t the Oratorio Society, of New York, [illegible]ndered Mendelssohn's "St. Paul." [illegible] Soloists selected for these occasions [illegible], Mrs. Mary L. Swift, Soprano; Mrs. [illegible] Drasdil, Contralto; Mr. Geo. Sim[illegible], Tenor; Mr. Myron W. Whitney, Basso. [illegible] interest of these occasions centered fo[illegible] most part in Mr. Whitney, who with [illegible] grand, deep Basso voice, in a telling [illegible] rendered the parts allotted to him. [illegible] Simpson fully sustained his reputation [illegible] by his Solo "Be thou faithful unto de[illegible]" aroused considerable enthusiasm. Drasdil had little to do, but what she [illegible] have was rendered in her usually con[illegible] tious manner.

St. Valentine

Was present in person at the Congregati[illegible] Lecture Room last Friday evening, [illegible] managed to make a great many people t[illegible]oughly enjoy themselves for nearly [illegible] hours. But St. Valentine himself did [illegible] have entire charge of the entertainment, [illegible] was ably assisted by a number of little [illegible] from the Sabbath School, whom he d[illegible]tized as his "Cherubs." The antics of t[illegible] individuals filled the programme with [illegible]-splitting material, while, as a sort of off[illegible] Miss Emily See and Miss Lizzie Marsh [illegible] some happy selections in an equally h[illegible] manner. Mrs. S. L. Stewart sang [illegible] feeling and skill a pretty solo which was [illegible]preciated. "A very pleasant time and [illegible] fifty cent entertainment for 10 cents" [illegible] the verdict.

That Fast Train.

Meetings of commuters have lately b[illegible] held in our city, in relation to the matte[illegible] petitioning the Central railroad officers [illegible] provide a fast train to and from Plainfiel[illegible] New York. In a recent letter from Rece[illegible] Lathrop to Mr. A. G. Conant, the for[illegible] says it is the purpose of the Company to [illegible]instate on April 1st, the 8:13 fast tr[illegible] which stops only at Netherwood and El[illegible]beth, and also propose to put on a train le[illegible]ing at 8:40 p. m. making the same time [illegible] stops as the former train. In regard to [illegible] matter of reduction of commutation, [illegible] Company can make none. It now costs [illegible] for ferriage annually, on each yearly tick[illegible] which leaves the company but $73 00 [illegible] the ticket. Petitions are now in circulati[illegible] asking for a fast train each way, that sh[illegible] make the trip between Plainfield and N[illegible] York in 30 minutes, and is being extensiv[illegible] signed. The petition may be found at [illegible] City Hotel, Post Office, Drug Stores a[illegible] THE CONSTITUTIONALIST office. It is to [illegible] hoped that the Central R. R. Company w[illegible] grant the request made by our commute[illegible] who constitute a large body of our citize[illegible]

Building Association.

The annual meeting of the Building A[illegible]ciation was held Monday evening, Pre[illegible] Harris in the chair. The annual report w[illegible] presented and read by the Secretary, [illegible] Appleton. It was very lengthy, giving [illegible] great detail the transactions of the p[illegible] year under the old and new boards of [illegible]rectors. The Board state that in view of t[illegible] condition and nature of the assets they [illegible] not feel warranted in fixing their value [illegible] that of the stock of the Association. The progress made during the year towar[illegible] closing the Association is regarded as sati[illegible]factory, and the rules of withdrawal adopte[illegible] with the list of assets given the members [illegible] the report, will it is believed, result in [illegible] still more rapid settlement of the unborrow[illegible]ed shares. The amount of fines collecte[illegible] during the year, as brought about by th[illegible] examination and the more rigid enforceme[illegible] of the rules, is in excess of fifteen hundre[illegible] dollars, being in marked contrast with th[illegible] previous regime. The Association next pro[illegible]ceeded to an election for Officers and Direc[illegible]tors for the ensuing year. Messrs. Dav[illegible] Boehm and Chas. E. Austin being chose[illegible] Tellers. After the closing of the polls, th[illegible] Tellers announced the election of the fol[illegible]lowing Officers: Pres.—John Harris; Vic[illegible] Pres.—Lewis E. Barkalew; Sec.—G. W[illegible] Appleton; Treas.—Jeremiah Van Winkle[illegible] Directors—G. Bachman, John H. Va[illegible] Winkle, Samuel H. Stevenson, Andre[illegible] Zice, Thos. Worth, Charles Graves, A. L[illegible] Force and David Boehm; Auditors—Geo. B[illegible] Lewis, Chas. E. Gunn and David Boehm.—[illegible] Notice was given of an amendment to th[illegible] Constitution, to be acted on at the nex[illegible] regular monthly meeting, allowing borrow[illegible]ers of the second series to retire upon pay[illegible]ment of ten years and ten months from the[illegible] start. The meeting was harmonious and [illegible] the balloting showed great unanimity o[illegible] opinion, the vote for the Officers bein[illegible] unanimous.

"Glimpses of the Arabian Nights."—A Beautiful Entertainment.

NEXT Thursday evening, 27th inst., our citizens will have an opportunity of witnessing the above in Assembly Hall. Some idea of the nature of this entertainment may be had from the following description taken from a New York journal: "There is great propriety in styling these 'Glimpses of the Arabian Nights,' for they seem like visions from fairy land, and are exceedingly beautiful. Eight of the tales were read and illustrated last evening—'Masour and the Lady Bedoura,' 'The Princess and the Porter,' 'Rose in Bloom,' 'Ass and the Damsel,' 'The Fairy and the Fish,' 'The King's Treasures,' 'Bedreddin Unveiling his Bride,' and 'The Crowning of Seifelmolouk.' In representing each the most gorgeous costumes were used, the persons taking part being clad in robes of the most costly and beautiful character, which were resplendent—in some cases literally covered—with sparkling jewels. The magnificence and regal splendor of the different costumes were much admired, while the surroundings were in perfect accord, consisting of rich drapery, plants, flowers, etc. By means of a Calcium light and the use of shades, the effect of the choice pictures given was further heightened by throwing upon them a volume of softly colored light, which constantly changed, each succeeding shade or color seemingly more lovely than its predecessors. Any one of the scenes was a picture that would delight an artist, and beyond all question, they were the finest tableaux ever exhibited here. The closing one, 'The Crowning of Seifelmolouk,' was accompanied by the singing of the 'Bridal Chorus,' from 'Lohengrin,' behind the scenes." On account of the rare merit of this entertainment and for the sake of the Crescent Ave. Church, for whose benefit it is to be given, we trust that it will have the liberal patronage which it deserves.

Wishing them God Speed.

Mr. John Roberts, wife and daughter, of Dunellen, sailed for Europe on Thursday, 20th inst., in the "Adriatic" of the White Star Line, Captain Jennings, head officer. On Thursday evening of last week, Mr John Handren, one of Dunellen's well-known and influential citizens, gave an elegant dinner party at his fine residence in that village, in honor of Mr. R's contemplated journey. On that occasion there was a large gathering of friends and acquaintances, both male and female, who expressed in various ways their regret in loosing, for even a short time, such excellent and esteemed neighbors as Mr. Roberts and his estimable wife. The menu was elaborate in all its details and reflected great credit upon the caterer, a gentleman from New York city. Prof. Fresse of Plainfield, furnished excellent music on the occasion, which was one long to be remembered by all those present. The eve of Mr. Roberts' departure, Wednesday last, was made the occasion of another attest of friendship by Mr. C. Schepflin, a neighbor, who quietly "surprised" Mr. R. and family with a serenade, Neilson's Silver Cornet Band of Plainfield furnishing the music. The affair was a complete surprise to the parties concerned, who, nevertheless did the honors on the occasion with a hospitality that will be long remembered by the participants. During the evening, Mr. Schepflin addressed the family and guests assembled in the parlors in a feeling manner, regretting the circumstances which deprived him and Dunellen of such estimable neighbors and citizens, wishing them God speed in their proposed journey and a safe return to their land of adoption and home. Mr. Roberts replied in fitting terms, feelingly alluding to the kind neighbors with whom he was surrounded and the pleasant memories and associations connected therewith. He was followed by Judge Drake, of New York, who, in eulogistic terms spoke of his acquaintance with Mr. R. and family, and wished them a happy voyage and safe return to Dunellen. After refreshments and music by the Band the guests returned to their homes at an early hour. Among those present from Dunellen were Dr. Endicott and Chas. Carpenter, Esq. Mr. Roberts is Marine Superintendent of the Atlas Steamship Co. of N. Y. city, and goes on his voyage in the capacity of Supervisor of Plans and Specifications for the new steamships to be built for the Atlas line on the Clyde. Himself and family have the best wishes of a host of friends for a pleasant and safe voyage and renewed health upon his return.

Who is City Judge ?

His Honor the Mayor addressed a communication to the Council at its session on the 17th inst., affirming the title of Peter P. Good, Esq., to the disputed judgeship, and desired the Council to supply Mr. Good with Counsel to aid him in his retention of the office. The Council complied with this request, and assigned the Corporation Counsel. The action of the Mayor and Council, published, as they will be, in our papers, may naturally bias the opinions of our citizens in this controversy, and as we have been solicited by friends of Mr. Bolton to give his version of the law on the subject, we present the following facts as stated by him: It is conceded that Mr. Good's title is correctly set forth in the Mayor's communication. Mr Bolton admits the appointment of Mr. Good by the Council; he further admits his election in 1874, but denies the tenure as claimed by Mr. Good; he claims that the charter gives no authority to elect a City Judge for any time other than the term of three years; that Mr. Good having been elected in December, 1874, and no vacancy having arisen, no legal election for the office could take place until December, 1877; that Mr. Good's election in 1876 was null and void, the term for which he was elected in 1874 not having expired. He is supported by a decision in a parallel case (Coulant vs. the People, 11 Wendell, 512) made by the Court of last resort in New York, in which the Court declares "that the Register of the city and county of New York when elected takes the office for three years, whether the vacancy which he is elected to fill be occasioned by death, removal or expiration of the term of office of his predecessor, and a re-election of the incumbent to the same office during the running of the three years, does not justify him in holding the office longer than three years in the whole; such re-election during the term for which he was entitled to hold under his first election being void." Mr. Bolton further claims that whenever a statute declares the term of an elective office, and fails to authorize elections to fill unexpired terms, however occasioned, an election by the people must be for the full term and no other. It is claimed by the Mayor that the notice given by City Clerk Nelson Runyon for the election in 1874, limited the term of the City Judge, than to be elected, for two years. Mr. Bolton claims that this notice so given by the Clerk, was an assumption of authority by him unwarranted by the provisions of the charter, as no section therein grants him the power to determine the tenure of an elective office. Mr. Bolton lastly claims that during the year 1878 there was an interregnum in the office, but that at the election in December, 1878, he receiving a majority of the votes then cast for City Judge, is now entitled to hold the office. The question will be speedily determined, and whatever may be our individual prejudices, it is a matter of vital importance to the city of Plainfield that there shall be an authoritative decision from the Supreme Court.

Dramatic Entertainment.

Last Thursday evening the Reading So[illegible]ciety signalized its second season by a Dra[illegible]matic Entertainment for the benefit of the [illegible]uhlenberg Hospital fund. Financially it [illegible]as a decided success, and as far as the en[illegible]tertainment was concerned, there is no one [illegible]ho has yet breathed a doubtful word of [illegible]raise. It was a thoroughly well-conducted [illegible]air, both in the acting and its management. The acting in both farces evinced [illegible]onsiderable care and study, and was doubly [illegible]joyed, from the fact that it was entirely of [illegible]ome talent.

Mr. Depew then presented the following from His Honor, Mayor Harper:

To the Common Council:

GENTLEMEN:—A writ of quo warranto having been served upon City Judge Good requiring him to show by what authority he exercises the functions of that office. I have considered it my official duty to ascertain and lay before you all recorded facts in the case, and herewith submit the result of such investigation.

The City Charter declares:—"That in case of a vacancy happening in any office created and made elective by this act, by death, resignation, removal or otherwise, except in offices of election, on the day of election, it shall be filled by the said Common Council within thirty days thereafter, and the said appointment shall continue until the next annual election, and no longer."

A supplement to said Charter, approved April 1st, 1872, enacts that the City Judge "shall be elected to serve for three years."

At the Charter Election held December 2nd, 1873, J. Hervey Ackerman was elected City Judge for the term of three years, expiring on the first Monday of January, 1877, he receiving 345 votes against 341 votes cast for George P. Suydam.

At a regular meeting of the Common Council held September 7th, 1874, a communication was received from City Judge Ackerman asking that his resignation of office be then accepted:

Whereupon, Mr. Miller offered as follows:

WHEREAS, Hon. J. Hervey Ackerman did heretofore present to this body his resignation of the office of City Judge of the City of Plainfield, and whereas, this body declined to accept said resignation, and whereas, said J. Hervey Ackerman has renewed said resignation, therefore be it

Resolved, That this Common Council, with great regret, hereby accept the resignation of J. Hervey Ackerman as City Judge of the City of Plainfield, to take effect September 15th, 1874.

Resolved, That this body takes this opportunity to place on record this expression of its appreciation of the ability and efficiency of Judge Ackerman, and of the loss sustained by this community by reason of his vacating the office so worthily filled by him.

Which were adopted.

At an adjourned meeting of the Common Council held September 14th, on motion of Mr. Dumont, Council proceeded to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of City Judge Ackerman.

Mr. Cadmus nominated Peter P. Good, who having received six votes, was declared duly elected City Judge, to hold office from 15th inst. until his successor is elected at the next Charter election and properly qualified.

Under date of November 17th, 1874, the following legal notice was published in the newspapers of this city:

CHARTER ELECTION.

The annual Charter election in and for the City of Plainfield, will be held on Tuesday, December 1st, 1874, for the election of a Mayor to serve two years, a City Judge for the unexpired term of J. Hervy Ackerman, Esq., resigned, eleven members of the Common Council, one Assessor, one Collector, one Treasurer, two Chosen Freeholders, two Constables, two Justices of the Peace, one Clerk and three Judges for each Election District, and three Commissioners of Appeal for the ensuing year.

NELSON RUNYON,
City Clerk.

At that Charter Election, Peter P. Good was elected City Judge for the unexpired term of J. Hervy Ackerman. (January, 1877) without opposition he receiving 1057 votes.

At the Charter Election held December 5th, 1876, Peter P. Good was, without opposition, re-elected City Judge for the full term of three years, expiring January, 1880, he receiving 926 votes.

Such is an authentic abstract of title to the City Judgeship now held by Peter P. Good, and why any person should assail it certainly appears strange, but the attempt having been inaugurated, I would respectfully recommend that the Corporation Counsel be authorized and directed to make necessary legal defence.

NATHAN HARPER,
Mayor.

February 17th, 1879.

A motion was made that the above be received and placed on file.

Mr. Depew thought some action should be taken, as the Mayor makes a request, &c., and would offer the following:

Whereas, A suit has been commenced in the Supreme Court of N. J. by James Clinton Bolton, on a writ of quo warranto against the City Judge, therefore

Resolved, That the Corporation Counsel be authorized to defend the said City Judge in the Supreme Court.

On motion, adopted.

Mr. Lithgow, from Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps, reported as correct claim of N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gaslight Co., $117 19. On motion, claim referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Redfield, from Alms Co., as correct, the following claims: Geo. C. Owen, $16; W. J. Roome, $20. On motion, claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Depew moved that the claims from Aud. Com., reported as correct at last meeting of Council, and tabled, be taken from the table and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts. So ordered. All aye.

Mr. Stover, from Law & Ord. Com., presented the following:

To the Common Council:

Gentlemen:—Your Com. on Laws & Ordinances, to whom was referred an amendment to the "License Ordinance," repealing sections 5, 6 and 7 of such ordinance, (the sections applying to saloons) and also repealing section 17 and substituting another in its place, the effect and intention of such amendment being to restrict the granting of licenses to Hotels only, beg leave to report that in view of the vote just taken, we deem it inexpedient and improper to pass such amendment.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

[Signed] E. M. STOVER,
HENRY REDFIELD.

Mr. Stewart said he would like to make a minority report, &c.,

Mr. Lithgow thought the motion out of order, &c., and action, in his opinion, should be on the majority report.

Mr. Stewart not having his report in writing, the Pres. directed him so to do.

Mr. Stover moved that the majority report be accepted. The vote by yeas and nays being rather faint, the Pres. was unable to decide. Upon the call of the roll, it resulted as follows: Ayes—Depew, Finch, Lithgow, Meyer, Potts, Rushmore, Redfield, Simpson, Stover—9. Noes—Coriell, Stewart—2.

The Pres. declared the majority report accepted.

By Mr. Stover, the following:

To the Common Council:

Gentlemen:—Your Com. on Laws & Ordinances to whom was referred an amendment to the license ordinance as follows, viz:

"By adding (after "shall" in the second line of Sec. 12, "between the hours of eleven o'clock at night and seven o'clock in the morning," and would beg leave to report that we would recommend that the word "eleven" be changed to "twelve," and the word "seven" be changed to "six," and that with these changes the amendment be adopted.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

[Signed] E. M. STOVER,
HENRY REDFIELD,
W. E. STEWART.

On motion, accepted.

By Mr. Stover, the following:

To the Common Council:

Gentlemen:—Your Committee on Laws and Ordinances to whom was referred the license granted by the Council of 1878 to Jas. Connolly, beg leave to report that after thorough investigation they find the facts to be as follows, viz: That Mr. Connolly made his application to the Council for a saloon license, which was referred to the License Committee, who reported that such application conformed in every respect to the provisions of the License Ordinance; that the Council by a vote of a majority of the members granted said application and ordered said license to be issued; that said Connolly has paid to the City Treasurer the amount of license fee required by the ordinance, [illegible] that the license [illegible] ent was presented to ex-Mayor Rule previous to the expiration of his term of office, but that he neglected or refused to sign the same. In view of the foregoing facts, it is our opinion, that as Mr. Connolly had complied in every respect with the provisions of the License Ordinance, and that as his application had been granted and the License ordered to be issued by a vote of a majority of the Common Council, it was the duty of the then acting Mayor to have signed the same. We would respectfully recommend that His Honor MAYOR HARPER be, by resolution, requested to affix his signature to said license, thus protecting Mr. Connolly in his vested rights, as we believe it to be the duty of this Council to do.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

E. M. STOVER,
HENRY REDFIELD,
W. E. STEWART.

On motion, accepted as read.

Mr. Rushmore, from License Com., reported the following petitions as conforming to the License ord., and moved that the licenses be granted:

Fred. Casper, Chas. Zimmer, Werner Heidloff, E. P. Thorn, Jas. H. Force.

Mr. Stover moved that we now proceed to vote upon the same. So ordered.

Upon the petition of Fred. Casper, it was granted, by the following vote: Ayes—Depew, Finch, Lithgow, Meyer, Potts, Rushmore, Redfield, Simpson, Stover—9. Noes—Coriell, Stewart—2.

Chas. Zimmer, granted, the vote being as follows: Ayes—Depew, Finch, Lithgow, Meyer, Potts, Rushmore, Simpson, Stover—8. Noes—Coriell, Redfield, Stewart—3.

Werner Heidloff, granted, by the following vote: Ayes—Depew, Finch, Lithgow, Meyer, Potts, Rushmore, Simpson, Stewart, Stover—9. Noes—Coriell, Redfield—2.

E. P. Thorn, granted, by the following vote: Ayes—Depew, Finch, Lithgow, Meyer, Potts, Rushmore, Simpson, Stover—8. Noes—Coriell, Redfield, Stewart—3.

Jas. H. Force, granted, by the following vote: Ayes—Depew, Finch, Lithgow, Meyer, Potts, Rushmore, Simpson, Stover—8. Noes—Coriell, Redfield, Stewart—3.

Mr. Stewart, from Com. on Printing, reported relative to the proposals for printing, that the same had been distributed between the two printing offices, (THE CONSTITUTIONALIST and Times,) and if satisfactory to the Council, have the printing proceeded with.

Mr. Stover moved that the printing be proceeded with. So ordered.

Mr. Simpson, from Aud. Com., reported the following claims as correct: W. J. Roome, $20, Geo. C. Owens, $16. On motion, report received and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts. All aye.

Mr. Finch offered a res. requiring the Com. on Sts., to have the gutters, &c. on Kensington Ave., and Broadway, crosswalk on Madison Ave., and board walk on 9th St., repaired, as the expense would be trivial, &c.

This res. was the occasion of considerable discussion. Mr. Lithgow said that it required money to make these repairs, which the Council had not, &c. Mr. Finch thought that $25 would cover the expense; say $1 50 for fixing gutters on Kensington Ave., and a similar amount for board walk on 9th St., and the balance of the $25 for crosswalk on Madison Ave. Mr. Stover stated that it would take a larger amount than that mentioned to make repairs in his immediate vicinity. "Uncle" John Simpson thought the repairs could be made; "plenty of money coming in to-night," mused "Uncle" John. On motion of Mr. Lithgow, the matter was referred to the Com. on Sts.

Mr. Stover offered the following:

Whereas, It appears by the report of the Law and Ordinance Committee that James Connolly has, in every respect complied with the provisions of the License Ordinance, and is entitled to his license as ordered by the former Common Council, and that such license has been issued by the City Clerk as directed by them, but still lacks the signature of the Mayor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That His Honor Mayor Harper, be requested to affix his signature to the license of James Connolly.

On motion, adopted.

Mr. Coriell called from the table the matter of Finance Com. of last Council in reference to books, &c., of late Plainfield Township, with a motion that the subject matter be referred to the present Finance Com. So ordered.

Mr. Stover, Law & Ord. Com., wished until next meeting of Council to report relative to the publication of delinquents in taxes, and other matters now in his hands.

Mr. Lithgow moved that the Com. be granted further time. So ordered.

Mr. Depew moved that the confirmations of the Mayor, acted upon at last meeting of Council, as not being in accordance with the Rules of Order adopted, namely, by ballot, that we now proceed to vote upon the Mayor's nominations by ballot.

Considerable discussion was had pro and con in this particular. The Pres. thought the matter could not be undone, and would so decide. Mr. Depew thought if we have Rules of Order we should live up to them, with all due deference to the chair, &c. Mr. Lithgow stated that he could not see how another vote could be had, quoting Cushing frequently to sustain his argument. Mr. L. thought the Council could do without Rules of Order, if they so wished, etc. Mr. Stover was of the opinion that the Rules should be lived up to, or not have any at all. He cited the manner of the election of members of Police Board, which was done by call of roll, and afterward by ballot, according to the Rules. After further discussion, Mr. Stover moved that a vote be taken as to the decision of the chair, which was not sustained, the vote being as follows: Ayes—Coriell, Finch, Lithgow, Redfield, Rushmore—5. Noes—Depew, Meyer, Simpson, Stewart, Stover—5. The Pres. declining to vote, declared the chair not sustained.

Mr. Depew moved that we now proceed to the election. Carried.

The Pres. appointed as tellers, Messrs. Lithgow and Stover.

Corporation Counsel—Wm. R. Maxson. Not confirmed, the vote being as follows: 5 in favor, and 6 against.

Street Com'r—Geo. M. Angleman. Confirmed, 10 for and 1 against.

City Physician—H. H. Lowrie. Confirmed, 10 for and 1 against.

Overseer of Poor—T. J. Gillies. Confirmed, 8 for and 3 against.

Regular Policeman—Philip Breen. Not confirmed, 5 for and 6 against. Edward Laing, confirmed, 11 for and 0 against. Geo. Eaton, confirmed, 8 for and 3 against.

Mr. Depew moved that the special policemen be balloted for in a body. Carried.

The balloting resulted in the confirmation of the special policemen presented to the Council at its last meeting by His Honor Mayor Harper.

Mr. Depew moved that the janitor be instructed to have put up suitable fixtures to hang members' coats on. So ordered.

On motion, Council then adjourned.

JOHN Ebleson, a workman, in the employ of Mr. Henry Clay Randolph, suffered such severe injury from a pair of runaway horses on Monday last, as to necessitate the amputation of his left leg below the knee. He was thrown from the wagon to which the runaway horses were attached, landing between the animals who also fell, in consequence of a collision against a tree, and during the struggles of the horses received the above named injuries. The limb was amputated by Dr. Joseph Tomlinson, assisted by Drs. T. H. Tomlinson, Long and Fithian. The patient is doing as well as can be expected.

MR. W. S. Shotwell has purchased the stock, fixtures and interest of the Dry Goods Store corner of Peace and Front Streets, of Mr. Howard Vail, and announces his intentions in another column.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The Minstrel Entertainment announced to be given at Academy Hall at Scotch Plains for the purpose of starting a fund to procure a bell for the Baptist Church in that village, took place on Friday evening, 14th inst.

The programme presented was a very attractive one and gave great satisfaction to the crowded audience present.

The music was furnished by the ever popular "Prof. Fresse" and was fully up to his long sustained reputation.

The First Part was, as is usual in these entertainments, devoted to Choruses by the Company, and to Solos by Messrs. T. J. Nickoll, J. E. Miller, P. B. Miller, J. E. Flagery, W. R. Stanbery, Jno. McNair and S. E. T. Wilbur. The reader will excuse the waste of letters in this last name, but it is so set down on the bills.

These performances were excellent both in voice and execution, and attest the care that was given to their preparation.

The Lecture by Prof. Johnning on "Poetry, Ancient and Modern," was a very learned and able production, and, as he claimed to be, himself, a disciple of the Muses, and proved the correctness of the claim by the recitation of his beautiful poem of "The Buckwheat Cake," his felicitous presentation of the subject will undoubtedly awaken throughout the community, an interest in his numerous works and create for them an enormous demand.

The remainder of the programme consisted of performances of a dramatic character, which were well conceived and sustained throughout. "The Rival Darkies," "A Sketch," "Old Black Joe," and a Farce entitled "Boarding School" followed in order and were enthusiastically received and applauded by the delighted audience. "Old Black Joe" was a gem and, as presented by Mr. J. E. Miller, merited the encore which it received.

We would like to give our impressions of the merits of some of the performers, but where all did so well it would perhaps be improper to particularize. We may however be permitted to say that the "middleman" was the right man in the right place, and that the "endmen" deported themselves with all the ease and effectiveness of veterans.

It would afford us all great pleasure to have the performance repeated, and we hope the gentlemen composing the troupe may determine to gratify us in this respect.

The members and friends of the Methodist Church, of this village, will be glad to learn that the church services will be held in the main audience room next Sunday. The old heater, which so poorly heated the place and caused so much discomfort, has been replaced by a new one, which will undoubtedly furnish sufficient heat to warm the church in the severest weather.

Since Sept. 1st the daily average attendance at the Public School has been ninety-eight.

The sidewalk leading from Front Street to Academy Hall, is sadly in need of repairs. A good gravel walk should be substituted for the planks.

Postmaster Dunn, who has been quite sick and for several days unable to attend to the duties of his office, is now convalescing and will probably be again at his post in a short time.

Rev. Mr. Taylor, of Camden, N. J., filled the Baptist pulpit last Sunday, very ably and acceptably.

Under the heading of "Officials Swindling Publishers," the New Brunswick Fredonian is by no means mealy-mouthed in paying its respects to that class of men who no sooner get in office than they forget the ladder on which they ascend. In illustration of this, it mentions the case, as narrated by an exchange, how a sheriff, so soon as he was chosen, went around among the printing offices and "farmed out" his patronage—paying twenty per cent. less than he received from his clients. His proposition was accepted in one case, and both sheriff and newspaper publisher were indicted, as they richly deserve to have been. In several counties of the State, it is understood, this plan is pursued, and several officials will be brought to grief.—Elizabeth Herald.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

Report of committee on Mill Race Bridge, Adams street, Rahway.

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Your committee appointed at the last meeting to "inquire as to who shall repair or re-build a bridge over the mill race in Adams street, Rahway," would respectfully report—

That a majority of the committee visited the location and find that Adams street is crossed by said mill race, the mill being located on the northerly side of Adams street, formerly called the road leading from Rahway landing to the ash swamp.

They were informed that some alteration had recently been made in the street, but from inquiry at the office of the City Surveyor, was informed that the street at this point is as it has been for years.

They were also shown a deed dated 1791, referring to the said road and mill.

As the county has never yet built or repaired a bridge at this point, and guided by the opinion of our attorney (which is herewith submitted) we would now report adversely to either repairing or building.

Respectfully submitted,
W. M. CROWELL,
THOMAS FORSYTH,
SAMUEL C. SMITH,
J. F. HUBBARD,
JOSEPH NOLTE.
Committee.

Feb. 6, 1879.

Accompanying the report was the following opinion from the County Attorney in regard to the matter:

In the matter of the bridge across Mill Race at Rahway.

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Your Honorable Body has requested my opinion in substance as follows:—Upon whom does the legal obligation devolve to repair the bridge made necessary by the Mill Race crossing the public highway at Rahway?

The well settled rule of law on this subject is that where a highway is located over a water course the public must make and maintain a bridge over it; but if the owner of land opens a water course across a road he must make and keep in repair a bridge over such water Course. Our Supreme Court in "Re The Trenton Water Power Company," Spencer 663, says, "That where a private corporation in the prosecution of its own objects has rendered a bridge necessary in a public highway where none was necessary before, it is their duty and not the duty of the county to erect and maintain such bridge."

It is in the pursuit of their own advantage that they render the bridge necessary, and therefore they ought not to burden the public with its maintenance.

It was long ago held in England that when a canal company authorized by an act of parliament, to make a river navigable and to enlarge certain navigable cuts, and build bridges and other works connected with navigation, and for their own benefit made a cut and deepened a force which crossed the highway, and thereby rendered a bridge necessary for the public passage and which was accordingly built at the expense of the company in the first instance, that the company were bound to maintain the bridge, and that the burden of repairs was not to be thrown upon the county. This case was decided by the Court of King's Bench, in Rex vs. Inhabitants of Lindsey, 14 East 317.

This rule of Law has not only been decided by all the Courts for more than a hundred years, but the Legislature of this State long ago by express enactment declared that "where any highway hath been or shall be laid out before the making such dam, races or floodgates, such highway if it go near to or over the said dam, races or floodgates shall be made and maintained and the bridge and bridges over the same, if they cut across the said highway for the use of such iron works or mills and the railing thereof shall be built and re-built, repaired and kept up, etc., at the proper charge and expense of the owner or possessor of such iron works or mills," and the same law imposes a penalty of twenty dollars per month on every such owner or possessor for every month that he neglects or refuses to perform such duty.

Provision, 1,004, sec. 23. It is not difficult therefore to decide the question submitted, if your Hon. Body concludes that the race over which the bridge is built, was cut after the road was laid out or become a public road; if it was the bridge must be kept in repair by the owner or possessor of the mill. Both road and mill existed some eighty years ago. Did the mill owners build their mill having in view the roads and means of access to their mill, or did the authorities lay out the road by reference to the mill?

The fact that the owners of said mill property have always kept and maintained the said bridge at their own cost and expense, and that the county has never (so far as is known) regarded it as a public charge, indicates that the bridge in question should continue to be kept repaired and maintained as heretofore.

Another question arising out of this matter is whether the duty of repairing and maintaining the bridge extends to the entire width of the road or street as it at present exists, and this depends upon the question whether the road at the point of the race crossing has been widened beyond its legal width or widened beyond its original width since the race was cut. If it has, I think the county is chargeable with repairing the bridge to the extent of the new width and no more. The question is not whether an ordinance has been passed authorizing the road to be widened, but as a matter of fact has the street been widened at that point? If it has not the fact that the street is wider than required by law can make no difference for the public in that case would have a prescriptive right to the road, and the long acquiescence by the mill owners would stop them from avoiding the responsibility of maintaining the bridge over their race, the entire width of the street. The facts of the case you are better acquainted with than I am, and guided by the law as I have endeavored to write it, I think you cannot err.

Very respectfully,
WM. B. MAXSON,
County Attorney.

Freeholder Randolph moved that the report be recived and spread upon the minutes.

Which was carried.

J. E. Marsh, Esq., Warden of the Jail, reported that the expenses for the quarter ending Jan. 31st, 1879, were $999.13.

On motion of Freeholder Roll, the report was received and placed on file.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON BONDS.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Your Committee on Bonds beg leave to report that the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, now hold $101,000 of coupon bonds of the county being nearly one-quarter of the total county indebtedness, and at their request and agreeable to a resolution adopted at the last meeting of the Board, your committee has arranged to exchange registered bonds for coupon bonds held by them at the same rate of interest, and that the exchange has been arranged without expense to the county.

Feb. 6th, 1879.

Respectfully submitted,
J. F. HUBBARD,
THOMAS H. SMITH,
WM. H. BRIANT,
Committee.

On motion the report was received and ordered spread upon the minutes.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Hubbard:

Resolved, That when this Board adjourns it be to meet on Thursday, March 6th, at 2, P. M.

On motion the resolution was adopted.

By Freeholder Hubbard:

Resolved, That there be $600 advanced to Jail Warden to pay current expenses for the present quarter.

On motion the resolution was adopted.

By Freeholder Randolph:

On motion of Freeholder Ramble the Board adjourned to meet Thursday, March 6, 1879, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

JOHN L. CROWELL.

February 8, 1879.

About a week ago Mrs. Mary Harrison, of Bloomfield, Essex county, died, leaving about $100,000, chiefly in the hands of trustees. The income of a portion was to be paid to Frank Harrison, her grandson, the principal to be given him only in the event of his having children. The next day after the old lady died Frank got married.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

SKU[illegible]S.

Real fine blacks[illegible]k skins are now worth $1.20 each, [illegible]ly striped skins are worth $1.50 an[illegible]hose with a broad band down the b[illegible] are worth $1.—These prices have b[illegible]ght the hides of the odoriferous littl[illegible]nimal in demand and many are now [illegible]ding it a paying business to hunt t[illegible]. This is particularly the case [illegible] the vicinity of Chester, where t[illegible]rs, blacksmiths, wagon-makers and [illegible]ers find the pursuit more profita[illegible] than their usual avocations and are [illegible]ntly engaged in it, and the costum[illegible] they don in their excursions would [illegible] to shame those of an army of tr[illegible]ps. The skunks usually select for [illegible]ir hiding places localities where the[illegible] little frost, and seem to live in fa[illegible]ies. Sometimes eight or ten are fo[illegible] in a single burrow, and we have [illegible]rd of one where no less than fo[illegible]en were taken, making a profitabl[illegible]ay's work for the lucky captors. W[illegible]ave heard of individuals who hav[illegible]ade from $10 to $15 in a single day, [illegible]hich is certainly enough to compe[illegible]e them for the disagreeable feath[illegible] attached to the business.

WHAT BIRDS [illegible]CCOMPLISH.

The swallow, [illegible] and nighthawk are the guardians [illegible] the atmosphere. They check the in[illegible]e of insects that otherwise would [illegible]load it. Wood-peckers, creepers [illegible] chickadees are the guardians of t[illegible]runks of trees.—Warblers and fly[illegible]hers protect the foliage. Blackbir[illegible] crows, thrushes and larks protect [illegible] surface of the soil. Snipe and w[illegible]cock protect the soil under the surf[illegible]. Each tribe has its respective duti[illegible] perform in the economy of Natu[illegible] and it is an undoubted fact that [illegible] birds were all swept off the face [illegible] the earth man could not live [illegible] it; vegetation would wither and [illegible]; insects would become so numer[illegible] that no living being could withst[illegible] their attacks.—The wholesale de[illegible]ction occasioned by grasshoppers w[illegible] have devastated the West is to a g[illegible] extent, perhaps, caused by the th[illegible]ing out of the birds, such as grou[illegible] prairie hens, &c., which feed upon th[illegible]. The great and inestimable service [illegible]one to the farmer, gardener and floris[illegible] the birds is only being known by s[illegible]experience. Spare the birds and save [illegible] fruit; the little corn and fruit take[illegible] by them is more than compensated [illegible] the quantities of noxious insects [illegible]y destroy. The long persecuted cro[illegible] has been found, by actual experience [illegible] do more good by the quantities o[illegible] grubs and insects he devours than t[illegible] harm he does in all the grains of c[illegible] he pulls up. He after all is rather [illegible]iend than an enemy to the farmer.

BOY W[illegible]TED.

A few mornings [illegible]ce a lady living on Clifford street [illegible]wered the bell to find a bulky boy w[illegible] an innocent face and peach-colored [illegible] standing on the steps. He explain[illegible] that he wanted to see her husband, a[illegible] she answered that her husband had le[illegible] for his office.

"I'm the boy wh[illegible]weeps out all the offices where he is," [illegible]id the boy as he backed down the st[illegible], "and this morning I found a lett[illegible] in the big scrap-sack."

"Well, you can [illegible]e it," she replied.

"I—I guess I h[illegible]'t better," he half whispered, as he s[illegible]ed the small pink envelope.

"Boy—that is—[illegible]y, let me see that letter!" she said [illegible]he advanced and extended her hand.

"Oh, 'twouldn't [illegible]be 'zactly right, ma'am, 'cause I kn[illegible] he'd gin me fifty cents."

"See here, boy," [illegible]e said, as she felt for the dollar bill [illegible] her to buy coffee and tea, "you tak[illegible] this, give me the letter and don't sa[illegible] word to Mr. —— about finding it."

"I don't believ[illegible]'s much of a letter," he remarked.

"Never mind—[illegible]d it over—here's your money!"

"Mebbe there [illegible]ain't a word of writing in it, ma'a[illegible]"

"Here—give me [illegible] letter—now go."

She took it and [illegible]ntered the house, and the boy with [illegible]ach-colored ears flew down the [illegible]t like a cannibal going to dinner.

In about forty [illegible]conds the woman came out, looked [illegible] and down the street, and the ex[illegible]sion around her mouth was not h[illegible]y and peaceful.—The boy had se[illegible]d to doubt that there was any w[illegible]g inside the envelope, but she wa[illegible]ot quite prepared to tear it open and [illegible]d a printed document commencing [illegible] "Whereas, default having been made [illegible] the conditions of a certain mortgag[illegible]" etc. She wants to hold another in[illegible]view with the lad. If this meets his [illegible] he will please call between the ho[illegible] of eight and ten o'clock, A. M., [illegible]n she feels the stongest.—Detroi[illegible]e Press.

The New Jerse[illegible]inc Company are shipping 500 tons [illegible] zinc ore monthly from Franklin Fur[illegible]e, Sussex county.

The miser who [illegible]rded his money in a vase said he [illegible] it because he believed in the sayi[illegible] "Urn your money before you spend [illegible]"

I have seen me[illegible]ho had worn out their vices, and [illegible]posed, of course, that they were livi[illegible] on their virtues.—Josh Billings.

Edison is ex[illegible]menting on the waves of light, an[illegible]opes very soon to perfect a machine [illegible]t will enable you to see a man a hu[illegible]ed miles away.—In case the man i[illegible]uestion has an account against yo[illegible]his will give you plenty of time to g[illegible] under the bed out of harm's way b[illegible]e he arrives.

The Newark C[illegible]on Council Committee on Railro[illegible] Crossings has decided in favor [illegible] fencing in the Pennsylvania R[illegible]ad track from Market street to [illegible]r street; that all other crossings [illegible]all be efficiently flagged.

A company o[illegible]ramps have been discovered occup[illegible]g one of the best rooms in the U[illegible] States Hotel at Long Branch. T[illegible] had broken into the wine cellar, s[illegible]red all the plunder they could, and [illegible] having a royal good time.

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.:

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing strata. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved."

D. 1879, at the hour of half-past two o'clock in the afternoon, in the city of Plainfield, Union County, New Jersey, upon the premises, the following real estate in said city of Plainfield, belonging to the estate of Elston Marsh, deceased, to wit:

FIRST—The brick store building on the northwest corner of Front and Somerset Streets, and the lot belonging to same, said lot being sixty (60) feet front on Front Street, running beyond the centre line of Somerset Street, and seventy-five feet deep, more or less, said building being about twenty-two (22) feet front by about seventy (70) feet deep.

SECOND—The three brick stores on the northwest corner of Front and Grove Streets and the lot upon which they stand, being about sixty (60) feet front by about eighty-five feet deep.

THIRD—Four building lots on the west side of Front Street, between property of the Plainfield Fire Department on the north and property of C. Schepflin on the south, in all about ninety-eight (98) feet front, more or less, on Front Street, and running through to the old centre line of Green Brook two hundred and fifty feet, more or less, along line of said Fire Department and J. W. Laing on the north, and along line of C. Schepflin, and a line in continuation thereof on the south, subject to the right of mill race running across rear of said lots. The most southerly lot of the four has a party wall thereon. Said lots will be sold separately or together as may be deemed best at time of sale.

FIFTH—An undivided one-half interest in about thirty-seven acres of land more or less, lying opposite the Netherwood depot, running from Front Street to North Avenue, being all the land included in the block bounded by Front Street, Leland Avenue, North Avenue and Netherwood Avenue, except a strip of about four acres on the corner of Front Street and Leland Avenue owned by Mulford Cole.

POETRY.

For "The Constitutionalist."

THE TRAMP.

BY "CAUSIDICUS."

Who'd think, to see this wanderer
That he'd known a mother's love!
That this torn and tattered being
Might find a home above?
Who'd think a merry maiden
Might have loved him long ago;
Who held him as her idol
E'er he wandered to and fro.

Who'd think beneath his locks so grey
There was a massive brain,
That once expounded wisdom
Retold by friends again?
His limbs now old and palsied,
Once were so fast and fleet
There was none in his village
With him could e'er compete.

E'en such were times with him then,
Those were his happy days,
When Fortune (fickle being!)
Cast o'er him her bright rays,
He thought his old friends faithful,
He thought they were all true,
He soon saw his deception
When trouble on him grew.

Like rain-drops in the summer,
His friends dropped from him soon,
And some then called him "pauper,"
When kind words were a boon.
It soon was made apparent
To him one early morn,
"Man's inhumanity to man
Makes countless thousands mourn."

He wandered from his natal place,
Grew old before his time;
Was kicked and scoffed by everyone,
As though his grief was crime.
His hands refused to help him
To struggle for his bread,
And many a time and oft he wished,
That he had long been dead.

Oh, friends, have you no pity!
Mayhap some day that you
Will have to wander forth like him
And your friends prove untrue;
Extend your hand in mercy,
Give him whate'er you can,
Remember he's God's creature,
And is, like you, a MAN!

"ODDS-AND-ENDS."

BY SUSAN H. WIXON.

"If you please, sir, Mrs. Maginnis says she can't come to wash windows to-day, because she is sick, and wants to know would you be kind enough to come and see her, and please keep the job till she gets well."

The little figure standing in the doorway of Dr. Howard's office, gazing wistfully into the doctor's face, was a study.

She was clad in a somewhat uncouth dress, originally of some grayish material, but pieced, darned and patched with various kinds of goods, until it resembled "Joseph's coat of many colors." A red handkerchief was pinned under her chin, which heightened the brilliancy of a pair of sparkling black eyes, and a mass of jet black, tangled curls were pushed back from a pale face that, under any circumstances, would be pronounced one of rare beauty. Her stockingless feet were encased in a pair of old rubbers which she confessed to having picked from a scavenger barrel.

Dr. Howard gazed at the wan little object, and wondered if life could be worth a great deal to such as she.

"What might be your name?" he inquired.

"Well, they call me 'Odds-and-ends' mostly, but my right name is Margaret."

"Odds-and-Ends! Well, I declare! But upon my word, Odds-and-Ends, you are a queer-looking genius. Where do you live?"

"Down there in Crazy alley, rear of No. 9, second door, up four flights, through a long entry, turn to the left"—

"There, there! That will do, Miss Odds-and-Ends! But now tell me, little one," he asked kindly, "are you impervious to the cold, or do you prefer to go without stockings in December? Do you know that, you are inviting croup, diphtheria, pneumonia, rheumatism, cramps, and what not, by dressing in that fashion?"

"I don't know, sir; but this is all I have. I was never sick in all my life, only once, when I had the mumps, and once again, when I had the measles, or I guess the measles had me! Everybody thought I'd die, I was so very sick—but I didn't," she added, archly. "We did not live in Crazy alley then," she continued, "but we were boarding in a large hotel where there were ever so many servants."

"Who do you mean by we?"

"Why, papa, mamma and I. But papa died, and mamma says since then we do not live at all, we only stay."

"How old are you?" inquired the doctor, with a strange and sudden interest.

"Ten, sir."

By this time Odds-and-Ends, or little Margaret, was seated in the doctor's comfortable office and paying her respects to a handsome apple that the good man had put into her hands.

At this juncture, Mrs. Badger, the doctor's housekeeper, came bustling in.

"Well, if I shan't give it up! Here is that strange child, and sitting here as cozily as you please. Are you sick, you little rag tag and bob tail?"

"Now Mrs. Badger," interposed the doctor, "do not call too many names. The little one has brought me a message from Mrs. Maginnis, who is not very well to-day and requires my services. Run on now, Odds and Ends, and say that I will be there directly!"

"Yes, sir!"

"A strange child that, Mrs. Badger truly. How long have you known her?"

"Oh, for nearly a year, off and on. She has been in the habit of coming here for cold pieces, every now and then. Her mother, I believe, has known better circumstances, but became reduced, like many others in cities, and is now, I think, very poor indeed. The mother is sickly too, I believe."

"When she comes again, Mrs. Badger, it is my desire that you see she is properly clothed. It is simply preposterous to send a child out so thinly clad on such a raw, inclement day as this," and the doctor buttoned his great coat about him and stepped into his carriage to make his daily round of calls; but first of all he drove to the squalid abode of Mrs. Maginnis, for Dr. Howard was never known to neglect the humblest child of earth, when such were sick and suffering.

But all that day, and for many subsequent days the good doctor was haunted by the wistful eye of the strange child whose way in life seemed to him so hard and unnatural. He inquired of Mrs. Badger many times to know if she had seen or learned any more of quaint little Odds-and-Ends; but Mrs. B. declared she had not seen hide nor hair of her since the morning she brought the message from Mrs. Maginnis, and that hard-working woman had lost the run of her entirely.

It was a whole year from that time when one evening Dr. Howard was hurrying along a crowded thoroughfare. He was startled by a sudden cry and a confusion of voices, as a runaway horse dragging the remnant of a carriage came leaping and plunging along the street. One glance showed the excessive danger of a child who was suddenly upon the crossing, and directly in the path of the frantic animal. [illegible] child were both down in the road of the street, and the dangerous creature was at bay. The doctor had snatched the child from beneath the very hoofs of the horse, and with the other hand seized the bridle of the foaming, wild-eyed animal; and the next moment, as assistance came, fell with the rescued one prone in the street. Recovering himself in a second, he looked into the face of the burden that lay quite unconscious on his arm and beheld the countenance of—Odds-and-Ends!

A carriage bore him and the new-found wanderer quickly to his office, where, in a short time, Odds-and-Ends was restored to consciousness, and her delight knew no bounds when she recognized her preserver.

"Where were you going when the accident happened?" asked the doctor.

Odds-and-Ends was silent.

"You need not tell me unless you wish," said the doctor.

"I may as well tell you," she said, after a pause. "I was going to a pawn shop—mamma sent me with this ring: it is an opal, and a dear friend gave it to her before she ever saw my father. She has kept it all this time because she liked the one who gave it to her very much, and she did not want to part with the ring. But, you see, we got very poor, and mamma was sick, and this ring was the last we had to part with, except mamma's wedding ring." Saying which, Odds and Ends took the ring from its little casket and slipped it upon the doctor's smallest finger.

What was there about the act that caused the man's face to change to a pallid hue and his firm hands to tremble like leaves in the winds of October? Did he attach any superstition to the brilliant and changeful colors of the opal, or was some old memory of the past, long latent, now ascertaining its existence?

"Margaret! Margaret!" he said in a tremulous voice, "take this bank-note to your mother, and leave me the ring."

"Haven't you made a mistake, sir? This bill has fifty on it."

"No mistake, Margaret. The ring is worth much more; indeed it is priceless," and he turned away his head that the wondering eyes of the child might not witness his emotion.

"Fifty dollars! Oh what will poor mamma say! I must hurry know, for she will be anxious about me. Good night."

"Wait, Margaret, I am going with you."

In a few minutes, little Margaret, or Odds and Ends, with her preserver, was being whirled rapidly in the doctor's carriage to the poor dwelling she called home.

Dr. Howard, on entering the abode, was struck with amazement, for used as he was to seeing poverty in all its forms, he had seldom witnessed so cheerless an apartment in winter as this, where he now, by a train of unexpected circumstances, found himself.

"Oh, mamma, I have been almost killed, I have; but this kind doctor, the same one you heard me tell about, you know, saved me, and he has brought me home, mamma, and see—see—the bank-note—and—"

"Hush," said the doctor, imperatively. "Your mamma has fainted. Bring a glass of water quick!"

The restoratives the doctor always carried with him were applied, and languidly the dark eyes opened, and the pale lips whispered a name.

"Roland!"

"Julia!"

To end the story quickly, and without circumlocution, I will say that fifteen years before these two were engaged lovers, and the opal ring was the sign outward of their engagement.

A misunderstanding, a fit of jealous anger, recriminating words, a lover's quarrel and a parting from each other, left one to marry in haste her next suitor, while the other journeyed to a distant city to practice the profession of his choice.

Upon the inner circle of the ring were these words: "While life shall last. R. H."

It was the recognition of the sentence and the ring, as well as the great resemblance of the child to her mother, that awakened the memory of other days and other scenes. When it had been too late, and Julia was married to another, he had seen that he was in the wrong. But after all these years how strangely were they brought together once more.

Is there indeed "a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we may."

The once estranged lovers sat hand in hand and recounted the histories of the past.

"Julia, now I have found you, I cannot lose you again; you must go home with me, and now. Mrs. Badger will make you both comfortable. Come!"

Happy tears fell from eyes used to tears of sorrow. Suddenly joy illumed all things as they three crossed the threshold of that miserable room, never again to enter it as a home.

Just as they drew up before the doctor's beautiful house, the city hall clock rang out the hour of twelve.

"Ring out the old, ring in the new," said Dr. Howard, softly.

Mrs. Badger was made acquainted with the facts, and, lifting her hands, said; "well, I never! However, I wish you all a happy new year. Odds-and-Ends, you're a treasure!"

"So she is," quietly said her mother, as she kissed her fondly.

The next morning, New Year's day, there was a wedding in the doctor's parlor.

"What a strange mystery life is," said the doctor's wife that evening.

"It is made up of 'odds and ends,'" laughed the doctor, as he drew little Margaret to his side.

"How long will you love me?" she inquired, as she turned the opal ring upon his finger.

"WHILE LIFE SHALL LAST!" was the grave reply.—New Bedford Signal.

THE MAN OF CHEEK.

"Gentlemen, I am now introducing to your notice a new and very valuable article—staple as flour—money refunded if it don't give satisfaction."

"Don't want it," we said, turning back to the desk.

"That's something, boss, you can't tell much about till you see the article." And he set his heavy carpet bag down on the floor with a suppressed sigh of relief. "This here is Pratt's Perennial Grease Extractor and Corn Salve, the family friend, and the marvel of the nineteenth century—"

"You can't sell anything here this afternoon."

"What'll you bet I can't?"

We turned round again and examined him. He was a short, well-built man, with a weather-beaten, brick-red face, small features, a mild, blonde moustache, and an impudent doll blue eye. A stiff felt hat was cocked jauntily over his right eye. His clothes were shabby and thin for the weather; but their cleanliness and defiant poverty gave them a showy air that suggested that they would be new and handsome if they could; but that since this was not possible, they didn't care a continental.

It required only a moment to take this in; but he was not going to waste that moment. He went on steadily, the hasty glibness of his professional lines filling the room and jarring on the ear like the filing of a saw.

"Pratt's Perennial Grease Extractor, sir, [illegible] will take the stains out of anything, from a pair of trousers to a soiled conscience, and leave 'em fresher 'n a daisy in spring, and in its capacity of Corn Salve, it is good for corns, bunions, ingrowing nails, callouses on the toes, and tubercles on the lungs. It has also been employed with great success in the treatment of croup and varicose veins. Bein' of purely vegetable ingregients, it will not hurt the smallest child, and I have medical stifficits from the most eminent doctors in Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, Iowa, Wyoming, and all the other States and Territories, Canada and the whole European continent, to prove that it will do what I say every time and no mistake. The secret of its composition was discovered accidently in Michigan, by an old woman, and—"

"Sit down!"

"An old woman, who, arisin' early one morning—eh?"

"Sit down!"

He looked at us like a man who has had to stand a great many bad jokes, and went on:

"She fell down, an'—no, I ain't sittin' down to-day. Don't feel tired. Sat down last year. Did I tell you the price was only twenty-five cents—quarter of a dollar for the greatest boon—"

"Will you sit down?" said we, in our most decided tone. "Never mind about Pratt's ointment; we'll take half a dozen boxes—"

"What for?"

"For the pleasure of your conversation."

"You can have that easier by not buyin'. So you want to hear about that old woman. Well, fur's I recollect, she fell down in the woods and broke her—"

"Never mind what she broke. That isn't what we want to hear about. Did it ever occur to you that it implies a stupendous amount of gall in you to come into a man's office and talk him nearly to death to get him to buy your salve?"

"The reflection has crossed my mind," he responded.

"Then," said we, "will you kindly tell us why you do it?"

"I will," he answered, with a queer look in his pale blue eyes. "Did it ever occur to you that this ain't exactly the ideal vocation for a decent man, neither in the particular of remunerativeness nor in the pint of popular respect? Do you think that the end of a man's spinal column is like the rudderpost of a ship, and he takes kindly to bein' kicked-out of office? I'm speakin' of his moral back bone and his moral sternpost. Agents and canvassers don't get kicked out of office nowadays—not with the solid flesh and leather kick, that is. But to be hunted out like an Ishmaelite or a mangy purp—that hurts a man's feelin's wuss'n bootin' his physical end. Yes, sir, his feelin's—just then. Mebbe you think the average agent goes too long on gall to be able to afford feelings? Well, feelings is like mushrooms in style of growth—you understand me sir. Pratt's Grease Extractor and Corn Salve ain't no relief to wounded feelings—but I want you to know, sir, they're a blazin' hereafter on pants and hoofs. And only twenty—well, you don't take no interest in Pratt's little specialty. You want to interview me on the agent and canvasser business. It's a nice, healthy business for a cast-iron alligator run by clock-work. But it's rather wearin' on humans. Me, fr'instance. I average fifteen miles and forty seven flights of stairs a day. I ain't set down, before this, since six o'clock this morning. I've sold six boxes of the Extractor and Salve to day—sold 'em to you, ten minutes ago. I've been in thirteen offices this morning. Eight of 'em told me to git out. That's the regular form. Three didn't say nothin'. That's the next most popular style of treating a canvasser. Two guyed me—give me taffy. One wanted me to go to h——l. I generally strike one polite man a day; and you're the nearest approach to him this forenoon."

"Well, why do you do it, then?"

"Why? Why? Well, sir, she's paraletic, and not able to do a stroke of work sence the kid was born, jist fifteen year ago. Paraletic all that time, poor little gal."

"Your wife?"

"My wife, sir." This was said with a certain simple pride; and then he relapsed into hang-dog impudence. "She ain't got any failin', neither; she can't talk. I have to do the conversational for the whole family. The paralexy don't give her much chance to say anything—just like the cussedness of the durn disease—to take a woman square in the meanest place. She makes out though, to have a little talk with me when I come home at night. She thinks of what she's goin' to say all day—saves it up to say to me. Sometimes she gets kinder eager, and wants to say good-bye to me when I start out in the morning. But I won't have none of that. 'Old gal,' I tell her, 'don't you get conversational now or you won't have no chance to buzz your husband in the evenin'. So she holds in till night and then she says, 'how are you, Jake? I hope you ain't very tired?' or some such composition. 'Taint very much; but it takes her about ten minutes to say it. Lord, it's bad. I could take the hinges off a hen house door in that time, and sell a bottle of Extractor to the boss rooster. You probably regard me in the light of a gorgeous idiot. Jest you wait till you strike your woman, and see how easy a man blooms out in that style of maniac, and how dum well satisfied he is to stay so. Oh, you'll strike her some day, and mebbe you won't have the luck to get her like I did. I had to talk her into it. And, with all doo respect to you, sir, you're only a ammatoor along side of me, when it comes to lightning-drill evolutions with the lower jaw."

There was a pause. Then he went on:

"Yes, sir it's a fine business. So fine, I'm making it hereditary in my family. Trainin' up my daughter to it. That's the kid born sixteen years ago—pretty as the the original pattern. I've that confidence in human nature, I've got her into the literature line and she's chinning for a Cookbook and a Concordance to the Bible. The Concordance is slow; but the Cook-book and the Extractor between 'em do a little business; and I guess we'll be able to keep up our end again paralexy and other little drawbacks for a while yet. The extractor by itself, though, ain't equal to the burden of a family, boon to a sufferin' world as it is and supported, I think I may say, by the best talent in the way of cheek and chin, raw gall and cast-iron jaw, that the country affords. Well, I'm slidin'. Six boxes? Thank you, sir. Come in again? Well, no. You've got Grease Extractor enough to last you some time. So long. And—oh—well—if you see anything young and good-looking and kinder modeled on the daisy principal, jest remember, will you, that she's only in the literary line, and takes after her mother, and ain't got her father's gall."

And he slid.—Puck.

A FALSE ALARM.

A large congregation had gathered to hear a stranger of some notoriety. Soon after he had introduced his subject, the cry of "fire! fire!" in the street very much disturbed the congregation, and many were about to retire, when an elderly lay brother arose and said:

"If the congregation will be composed, I will step out and see if there is any fire near and report."

The congregation became composed, and the minister proceeded. Taking advantage of the occurrence he called attention to a fire that would burn forever in the lake that is bottomless!—and had just concluded a sentence of terrible import, and not without manifest impression on his audience, when a voice from the other end of the room, as if in the denial of all he had said bawled out:

"It's a false alarm!"

The effect was ludicrous in the extreme. The old man returned; but the inopportune response spoiled the force of the eloquent appeal from the pulpit, and even the preacher could scarce refrain from joining in the universal smile that passed over the congregation.

In the Senate of Rhode Island, on Thursday, a resolution was unanimously adopted protesting against the Anti-Chinese bill.

The Connecticut House of Representatives, on Thursday, with only one dissenting vote, passed a Constitutional amendment providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature.

The Senate of West Virginia, on Thursday, by a vote of 22 to 2, passed a joint resolution directing the Attorney General to proceed against the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company for alleged violation of its charter in the matter of excessive charges.

The Senate of Arkansas, on Thursday, by a vote of 23 to 7, concurred in a bill from the House which virtually dispossesses counties of all powers as bodies politic and corporate, and of the capability of suing and being sued. This bill repeals all laws regulating proceedings in suits by and against counties.

The next holiday event is St. Patrick's Day, March 17th, and the occasion promises to be one of unusual enthusiasm among the wearers of the Green. In Brooklyn, however, there is an unfortunate split among the Ancient Order of Hibernians and there will be two routes and two processions.

In the case of Boice vs. "The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield," in the Supreme Court at Trenton, on Thursday (yesterday), a decision was rendered by Judge Depue, setting aside the assessment, on the ground that Justice Nodyne was appointed to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of one of the Commissioners appointed by Council to make the assessment, and therefore the people had no chance to be heard before him as one of the Commissioners.

In February, 1876, the issue of fractional paper currency was stopped, and all the currency presented was redeemed in fractional silver. Since then the fractional silver has gradually taken the place of fractional paper. There is still outstanding about $16,000,000 of fractional paper, of which amount about $2,000,000 is in 3 cent and 5 cent notes. It is now estimated that there will ultimately be redeemed only $4,000,000, leaving $12,000,000 as profit to the Government.

The Ohio Prohibitionists are already in the field. They held a Convention at Columbus on Thursday. About one hundred delegates were present. A State ticket was nominated, headed by Gideon T. Stewart, of Norwalk, for Governor. The platform adopted declares for giving corporation laborers a first lien for wages, the suppression of stock gambling, prohibition of labor of children under 14 years of age in mines and factories, universal suffrage, the issue of small interest-bearing bonds, compulsory education, a reduction of official salaries, and last of all, local option.

Which shows the County affairs to be in a healthy condition, under the management of the present Democratic Board of Freeholders. The Board in 1876 was Republican, the years of 1877-78 Democratic.

PLAINFIELD CITY BILL.

The bill framed by the Committee of Citizens and presented to our Common Council last Monday evening for their approval will properly come under the above caption, as under its provisions, it is intended to hereafter run our city government if the people so elect by their votes. But very few of our citizens are aware of its provisions and therefore there is a diversity of opinion as to its being a proper measure or not from the meagre information derived from hearing it read over once. We ourselves are unable at present writing to speak of its merits or demerits. Next week we hope to be able to lay the bill in full before our readers. In justice to the Committee, who are composed of gentlemen of well-known integrity and business qualifications, we think they know the wants of the city and have done the best they could to frame a non-partizan bill, they having devoted many weeks of time to effect the same. Should the bill pass the Legislature, the Common Council may, at request of 50 or more citizens in writing, cause notice of an election to be held, at which the people may express, at the ballot box, whether the provisions of the bill shall apply to this city or not. As we go to press we receive the following dispatch from Trenton from one of the Committee, Mr. Yates:

TRENTON, N. J., FEB. 27.

"Plainfield City Bill reported in Senate. Referred to and reported back by Committee on Municipal Corporations. Bill printed and ready for second reading."

A STAB AT THE NEWSPAPERS.

As usual, with every session of the Legislature, bills have been introduced before that body at Trenton, this Winter, under the cry of "Reform," which seriously affect the interests of newspaper publishers, irrespective of politics. It would seem that the very first move in the direction of Reform is against the very power, who aided most in seating these wiseacres in their legislative seats. A lawyer legislator may introduce a bill which will help swell his purse in his business, and it is passed with but little opposition, but let the printer come up with a bill, and lo, how the virtuous lawyer shouts "Reform." Not satisfied with the small pittance the Press now receive from the State in the way of renumeration for their services in securing the election of their party candidates, these reformers now seek to reduce the same. Seldom, however, do we see a reduction in lawyer's fees. It is of such rare occurrence that it is not perceptible to the publishers' eye. In this connection, under the caption of this article the Elizabeth Herald says: "The members of the Legislature generally seem to be totally ignorant of the real condition of the press, whose influence they were glad enough to court until after they were landed high and dry in their positions as Senators and Assemblymen. In their mania for reform, they have "struck in the dark" at the newspaper business, fully believing that they are doing the service of the State. A bill has been introduced in the Senate by Mr. Kessbey, which, if it becomes a law, will work serious injury to the press of the State, irrespective of party. The author of the bill is not made known, but it is undoubtedly a blow aimed for the purpose of spiting some one, and the innocent are to be made to suffer equally with the guilty. The newspaper publishers owe it to themselves to resent a wrong which is attempted to be committed against their interests, and a lesson should be read to those who, unmindful of the benefits conferred upon them, now seek to adopt a policy which, at the best, is narrow-minded. Reform is all well enough, and there are many directions in which it may be well applied, but to begin the task by cutting down the price of legal advertising, and circumscribing the influence of newspapers, is hardly the fair thing, and should meet with the fate it deserves. These same members are willing to accept good pay for their services, but take good care that others shall be deprived of a chance to make an honest living as well. A certain class of legislators stumble over extravagant expenditures in almost every department of government in their eagerness to scalp the printers—who, by the way, are of no particular account to office seekers and holders, except during election time. The newspapers of New Jersey are not leeches on the treasury, and the amount annually drawn by them would not impoverish one county, in good financial circumstances. A constant meddling is going on at the hands of our law-makers in regard to the interests of newspaperdom, and unless those who are assailed awake to their true interests, and that speedily, they will be legislated out of existence. The times into which we have fallen, and from which we have not fully recovered, have affected no branch of industry more seriously than the printing business, which has been declared to be 'the art preservative of all arts,' and which has had in the ranks of its profession some of the greatest minds of the age. The press makes no appeal for patronage that does not lawfully belong to it; it asks no compensation but what is fair and just, but it does put in a demurrer to any advance made looking to the degrading of its position by the Legislature of New Jersey, to whom it says, 'Let well enough alone!'"

NEW JERSEY DEATH RATE.

The relative death rate in the several Counties of this State last year was:—Atlantic, 1 in 63; Bergen, 1 in 95; Burlington, 1 in 54; Camden, 1 in 46; Cape May, 1 in 65; Cumberland, 1 in 77; Essex, 1 in 45; Gloucester, 1 in 85; Hudson, 1 in 63; Hunterdon, 1 in in 115; Mercer, 1 in 78; Middlesex, 1 in 67; Monmouth, 1 in 104; Morris, 1 in 84; Ocean, 1 in 46; Passaic, 1 in 44; Salem, 1 in 85; Somerset, 1 in 83; Sussex, 1 in 86; Union, 1 in 42; Warren, 1 in 101. There was 1 death in 5,926 in the State.

NOW STAND FROM UNDER.

In another column, among the "Laws" Chapter XV. will be found a bill, which may cause some trembling among dishonest officials. Although passed by a Republican legislature, whose party are just now holding up their hands in holy horror at the fraudulent transactions of Warren County Democratic officials, we should not be surprised if it proves a boomerang to some Republican officials in the near by and by.

Rance Hann Gray, a Justice of the Peace of Washington Township, was arrested on Tuesday of last week by order of the Prosecutor of the Pleas for violating the act passed last Winter prescribing that Justices shall transmit all papers in criminal cases to each term of the court. A few more arrests of this kind would have a wholesome effect in Morris county.—Banner.

A young lady, after passing the Cambridge local examination, suddenly broke off her engagement with her sweetheart. A friend expostulated with her, but she replied, "I must merely say that his views on the theosophic doctrine of cosmogony are loose, and you must at once understand how impossible for any true woman to risk her happiness with such a person."

A barn at Stamford, Conn., was burned recently by an incendiary, and the truly pious farmer prayed that the unknown scoundrel might be paralyzed. A man subject from his childhood to epilepsy has just had a stroke of paralysis, and "several superstitious members of the place" think there has been a wonderful answer to prayer.

No. 170, Mr. C[illegible]r, imposing a fine of one dollar on every man or woman who allows any ailanthus tree to grow up on his or her property until its seeds get ripe.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 26.

Judge Lathrop made a new move in the Senate to-day with two Jersey City bridge bills. One empowers the Chancellor to appoint an officer to condemn the land under water of the Morris Canal; and the other is substantially the bill that was recently defeated in the House. The Citizens' Committee from Jersey City have another bill on the same subject which they propose to introduce. Mr. Hobart introduced a bill to prevent strikes. It provides that dissatisfied employees shall appoint an arbitrator, the employer another, and those two a third, to make final decisions. The State Prison Committee reported the House bill prohibiting shoemaking in State prison, with a recommendation that the bill be not passed. The report was tabled and the bill was placed on the calendar.

In the House the bill prohibiting suit on a bond where the debt is not satisfied by foreclosure of the mortgage was debated. Mr. Voorhees introduced a bill cutting off Judge Lathrop's salary of $1,500 as a Riparian Commissioner. Mr. Dusenberry introduced a bill abolishing the office of County Physician in Hudson County, giving the Board of Health power to perform the duties of the office, with salaries for each member of $1,500 annually. Mr. Robinson introduced a bill providing for a tax of one per cent. on all incomes over $1,000.

The House to-night passed T. J. McDonald's bill reducing the rate of fare on the Hudson River ferries to two cents between the hours of 5 and 7 morning and evening. The vote was 45 to 8. The House adjourned out of respect to the late Cornelius P. Garrabrant, ex-member from Morris County.

In the Senate, Feb. 26, Mr. Vail introduced bill No. [illegible], concerning cities of less than 15,000 inhabitants.

A NEW BRIDGE BILL.

Senate No. 191, by Mr. Rabe. This makes it mandatory upon the Board of Public Works of Jersey City, to complete the erection of the bridge at Washington Street. The bonding clause is withdrawn, the lands adjoining to be assessed according to the benefits received, and the balance, if any, to be paid into the city treasury.

Mr. Robinson, an act to provide for the further relief of the poor, authorizes the city council of any city to increase the appropriation for the relief of the poor, when the usual appropriation is exhausted, provided the amount does not exceed $3,500.

A cock pit was raided at Pittsburg one night last week, and two hundred men and boys were arrested as participants. Six councilmen and one alderman, who were present, escaped.

Approved February 19, 1879.

CHAPTER XV.

An Act to provide for the summary investigation of county and municipal expenditures.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That if twenty-five freeholders in any incorporated village, borough, town or city, of in any county in this state, shall present to any justice of the supreme court an affidavit sworn to and subscribed by themselves, and setting forth that they are freeholders and have paid taxes on real estate within one year, and that they have cause to believe that the moneys of such incorporated village, borough, town or city, or of such county, are being or have been unlawfully or corruptly expended, it shall be the duty of such justice upon ten days' notice to the disbursing officer and the legislative body of such village, borough, town, city or county, to make a summary investigation into the affairs of such corporation, and at his discretion he may appoint experts to prosecute such investigation, and may cause the results thereof to be published in such manner as he may deem proper; it shall be the duty of the officers and the legislative body of any such corporation to obey any orders of such justice for facilitating such investigation, and any refusal or failure to obey such orders may be punished by such justices as for contempt; the costs incurred under this act shall be taxed by said justice and paid upon his order by the disbursing officer of the corporation, whose expenditures may have been investigated.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

CHAPTER XVI.

A supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning executors and the administration of intestates' estates [Revision], approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four.

Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That any executor or administrator by virtue of letters obtained in another state may prosecute any action in any court of this state without first taking out letters in this state; provided, that such executor or administrator shall, upon commencing suit, file in the office of the clerk of the court in which such suit shall be brought an exemplified copy of the record of his or their appointment; provided, also, that if security for costs be demanded, said executor or administrator shall file such security at the same time, and in the manner as the same is now required of non-residents who shall prosecute any action in this state.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 19, 1879.

CHAPTER XVII.

A further supplement to the act entitled "An act for the punishment of crimes," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

Whereas, By a supplement to an act entitled "An act for the punishment of crimes," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, which was approved February seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, it is provided that no board of education of any city in this state, or any committee or member thereof, shall disburse, order or vote for the disbursement of any public moneys in excess of the appropriation, respectively, to any such board or committee; and whereas, it sometimes occurs that a considerable period elapses between the expiration of the time for which appropriations have been made and the making of new appropriations; therefore,

"1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for any board of education to keep open the public schools under its charge, in anticipation of appropriations, for a period not exceeding three months after the organization of such board, and for that purpose to incur the necessary obligations not exceeding one quarter of the sum appropriated for the year immediately preceding; providing, that this act shall not apply in counties having less than fifty thousand inhabitants or more than sixty thousand inhabitants.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 19, 1879.

Sea Food.

It is conceded by the scientific that so-called "sea food" is excellent for the nervous system, and COD-LIVER OIL, once a medicine, is now more intelligently named a "fatty food." A well-known preparation, thoroughly endorsed, combining every essential for supplying the waste of the system, is Peter Moller's COD-LIVER OIL, which has again taken the highest (Gold) Medal at the Paris Exposition.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means for enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worried out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will make them as free from disease as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint is the direct cause of seventy-five per cent of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

Since the hog market has been so low a correspondent writes and asks "do hogs pay?" Well, we know some that don't. They subscribe for a paper, read it a few years for nothing, and then send it back to the publishers with the inscription: "Refused." Such hogs as that don't pay anything—if they can possibly help it.

According to all parliamentary usages, the mover of a resolution to appoint a Committee is generally himself appointed one of the same. Councilman Stover, however, was not accorded that honor on Tuesday evening last by the President of our non-partizan Council. Did you ever; no, never; what never! Well hardly ever—hear of such a case.

The entertainment of "Staats & Leine," minstrel delineators, at Laing's Hall, last Saturday evening, was well attended, and the part of the programme carried out, creditably performed. A Thief stole an American flag from the flag-staff on the premises of the widow of the late Dr. J. C. Sutphen, on Second St. during the night of Feb. 22d, Mrs. S. having neglected to pull the flag down at the close of day. The miscreant who would steal the American Flag is a worse character than Aliunde Joe or the chap that burned the Republican cipher despatches.

As the season is approaching when public sales or vendues will be the order of the day, we would call the attention of those who intend to make sale to the fact that we print sale bills in the best and most workmanlike manner, and at lowest rates. Persons not finding it convenient to come to town can send a list of articles to be sold, with day of sale and terms, and the bills will be forwarded.

Many of our colored friends and brethren of Plainfield will learn with sorrow of the death of the young and talented editor of the Golden Enterprise, of Baltimore Maryland, which occurred on Monday, Feb. 10th inst. He was born in 1860, and consequently was but 19 years of age. Although young in years, he had acquired an extended reputation as a journalist, and a friend and worker for the elevation of his race.

We are gratified to know that there is a strong desire on the part of several first-class Hotel men of New York City to secure the Netherwood as a Summer House in connection with their New York business, and that if the property was in shape to make a long lease, it could be rented on favorable terms. Of course, as now situated, it can only be leased for the present season. We learn from Mr. Darling that one of these gentlemen visited the Hotel yesterday in company with him and like all who have seen the House expressed himself as most favorably impressed both with it and Plainfield generally. It is thought that an arrangement will be made with some one of these parties by the 1st proximo. The advantage to Plainfield in having the Netherwood opened early, and under this high character of management, are too manifest to every one having any interest here to require mentioning.

Bolton vs. Good.

The argument in the case as to who is legally entitled to the City Judgeship of Plainfield, James Bolton or Peter P. Those who have never heard this learned gentleman should not fail to attend on the occasion. He is a brilliant talker, and the price of admission is so low, only 25 cents, that none need stay away on that account.

Correction.

In our article last week on the subject of a fast train between Plainfield and New York, a mistake in figures occurred which spoiled the whole effect and meaning of the article. Instead of reading that the proposed fast train would leave New York at 4.[illegible] p. m., it read 8.30. What our citizens want is a fast train, and the sooner we have it the better for Plainfield. Give us a train that will make the trip to New York in 30 minutes. It can be done. A fast train now runs from Bound Brook to N. Y. in 38 minutes.

Increase of Business

Compelled Plainfield's Marble Cutter, Mr. L. L. Manning, to put in steam power and machinery for rubbing and polishing marble and granite, and the same is now in successful operation. Mr. John Schenck, machinist, of North Plainfield, is the constructor of the engine, which is a marvel of compactness and strength. Mr. Manning has all the work he can attend to in his line, and furnishes some of the handsomest monuments, mantles, &c., in Foreign and Domestic stone as is produced in the State. His establishment is on Front Street, next to the M. E. Church.

The Veteran Expressman.

Mr. Augustus Frazee, Plainfield's local expressman between this city and New York, is a veteran in the business. He began the business March 1st, 1854, and consequently will have been 25 years engaged in the same next Saturday. During that time he has ridden in the cars 468,000 miles, and has been off duty but few days. Rain or shine, hot or cold, "Gus" has always been on hand in the morning calling for orders, which his many customers could always rely on his faithfully filling. The business engaged in is a laborious one, and oftentimes have we observed "Gus" return home after a hard day's tramp in delivering orders in New York, loaded down with parcels weighty enough for two men to carry with comfort. May he live and be successful in his business for another quarter century.

Washington's Birthday.

The Anniversary of Washington's Birthday, was observed in Plainfield by a general suspension of business and a liberal display of bunting in honor of the occasion. A salute of 40 rounds from the brass piece in possession of the Plainfield Artillery Company, was fired at 12 o'clock, noon, under the supervision of Thos. McD[illegible] and R. Hep[illegible], assisted by Wm. [illegible]berger. The salute was fired on the borders of Tier's Lake, North Plainfield. A considerable display of bunting was noticeable throughout the city on private residences. That of Mr. Heyniger, on Union Ave., was especially noticeable. No especial feature marked the observance of the day, but it was a noticed fact that our thoroughfares presented an animated appearance on the occasion, occasioned by the fact that our many New York business men and clerks were enjoying a respite from business care by the observance of the holiday.

The Concert

To be given next Tuesday evening, March 4th, at the Congregational Church by the Vocal Society, promises to be a very attractive one. We learn that the selections are particularly bright and pleasing. The [illegible] Psalm which the Society will sing, is known as one of the grandest and most [illegible] of Mendelssohn's compositions, and well worthy of the hard work which we are told the members have given to this Music. The new and popular Glee, "Humpty Dumpty," by Caldicott, is to be sung, as this Glee obtained a special prize in the competition last year at Manchester, Eng. It will no doubt be one of the attractions of the Concert. The "Sands of Dee" will be given "by request." This piece is one in which the Society obtained so much credit at its initial Concert last season. The Soloists on this occasion are Miss E[illegible] Wilkinson, Contralto, who created a genuine sensation last year by her faultless singing, and Mrs. E. J. Fitzhugh, wife of the Conductor, who will sing one of her husband's compositions, with chorus accompaniment, entitled "The Stream of Life." It is to be hoped every seat will be occupied at the Concert, especially as so many of our citizens are interested in the success of the Society which is doing so much for the musical culture of our city. Reserved seats may be secured at R. J. Shaw's Drug Store on Front Street.

The Y. M. C. A. Reception.

The Y M. C. A. gave another one of their deservedly popular Receptions, to a full house, last Tuesday evening in Assembly Hall. The programme on this occasion was something of a novelty, and still not a novelty either. Mr. Waring, of Brooklyn, a gentleman who has acquired an enviable local reputation, performed some tricks and mystified the audience with his queer doings. Mr. Teale, of North Plainfield, gave evidence and proof of his ability to act the part of a medium in any so-called spiritualistic manifestations. At Mr. Teale's request a committee of three was appointed, which committee immediately organized itself to see that the audience was in no way humbugged or "sold." After Mr. Teale had been properly secured to the post, placed in the stocks as it were—inclosed within his cabinet, he caused the most wonderful things to happen without apparently having any room to move himself. It was startling in the extreme the way the chairs and other articles of domestic warfare were thrown about with little regard for the feelings of a "medium." When the gentleman had amused his audience sufficiently with his "manifestations," he clearly proved how utterly useless it would be to tie him with ropes. We are not quite sure whether we could free ourselves from the same quantity of rope in the same length of time as Mr. Teale, or not, but we think we could not. A sharp knife would be quite a help to us.

Both branches of the Legislature have agreed to adjourn sine die on March 14th.

Personalia.

We extend our congratulations to our rising young legal friend, Walter L. Hetfield, Esq., who, on Thursday, passed a successful examination before the Supreme Court at Trenton, and was admitted as Attorney-at-Law and Solicitor in Chancery. Mr. Hetfield pursued his studies at Van Winkle & Manson's office.

We are indebted to State Treasurer Gen. M. Wright for a copy of his annual report on the finances of the State.

Chris. Van Arsdale, proprietor of the Mansion House, Somerville, was in our city Tuesday last, looking hale and hearty. Mons. Pedro of Brazil and Senor of Bound Brook, particular friends of his, accompanied him.

Sheriff Ryder, County Collector Sheridan and Director of the Board of Freeholders Martine, were in our city on official business on Monday, looking after the interests of the County.

S. E. Perry, Esq., of Flemington, visited us in our sanctum on Wednesday. We are indebted to him for favors.

We are indebted to Col. Wm. H. Sterling for a copy of the report of the Adjutant General of the State. Col. Sterling is General Inspector of R. & Practice, and his report to Gen. Stryker is an interesting document, but too lengthy for this issue.

The English Glee Club

The Y. M. C. A. finished its annual course of entertainments for this season, on last Saturday, Washington's Birthday night. This course of entertainments has, we think, surpassed any previous course of the Association, for several good, substantial reasons. More variety, the very best of talent, and popular themes have been the keynotes of success. For some reason we had looked forward to this entertainment as the one which might be termed the best; but now, as looking back, we review each one in order and compare and balance them one with the other, we must acknowledge that there is no chance for discrimination. An evening of enjoyment, full and thorough, without any positive mental benefit, was the result of the efforts of the English Glee Club. English glees with all their harmonious strains set to beautiful words, usually have just enough of "airy nothingness" to please and at the same time to satisfy. This club, organized for the special purpose of rendering this style of music, has so nearly attained perfection that to discover wherein it falls short is no easy or agreeable task. Last Saturday evening was certainly no exception to the general run of its Concerts. Miss Beebe, Soprano, suffered from a slight cold, but for all that few or no defects in her singing was to be noticed. Miss Finch, Contralto, has a voice of no remarkable power, but of considerable sweetness; we think her efforts were truly appreciated. The work of the Club proper was as satisfactory as the most sanguine could wish. The solos were pleasing and in no case short of what was expected. Mr. Baird with his grand baritone was especially successful with Molloy's Solo, "The King's Highway." The encores evinced the very nicety of taste, something light and cheerful being used in every case. We can think of but one regret which we have in regard to the Concert and that is, that the evening passed all too quickly and all too soon was the "Evening of English Glees" a thing of the past.

The Philomathean Reception.

This society, composed for the most part of young ladies, manages annually to arouse itself to such a pitch of enthusiasm that nothing else can possibly satisfy it but a "Reception." Last Friday ev'ng, Feb. 21st, was the time selected this year for the "5th Annual Reception of the Philomathean Society," and Assembly Hall, on that evening, was filled to really more than its capacity, with a sufficiently indulgent audience. This "Reception" is considered as one of the events of the school year, and, of course, as an event every possible attraction is added "without regard to cost." As an attraction, we may suppose that the members of the "Deliber" were selected for ushers, doorkeepers, curtain-pullers and for other offices of honor and trust. With commendable promptness the young ladies, preceded by the police force—we should say, four stalwart "Delibers," marched to seats reserved near the platform. At nearly the same time, the President, Miss Carrie Adele Daniel, with an interesting looking document in her hand, seated herself in a chair on the platform. The first piece on the programme was an instrumental duet by Misses Runyon and Briant, which these young ladies executed with taste and precision. An original charade next occupied our attention, followed by the President's address, redolent with Tennyson, which was a finished and somewhat elaborate production, and rejoiced in a name, a very weighty name. Miss Julia Ketcham gave satisfactory evidence of her decided proficiency in vocal music, by a beautiful solo. Selections from the "Philomathean Times" were read at intervals. Two piano solos were indulged in, one by Miss Mary Gardner, which was praiseworthy for its execution; the other by Miss Carrie Dewey equally deserving of praise for its beautiful expression. Misses Ketcham and Dunn sang a duet with noteworthy taste, and Miss Aggie Johnson read an essay entitled "Lighthouses," a production of no inconsiderable merit. In all candidness we must allow that Miss Hattie Smith has shown herself to be an elocutionist of more than ordinary ability. Her delivery of "On the Shores of Tennessee" was rewarded by the most hearty applause of the evening. Two dramas graced the programme, the first, "No Cure, No Pay," and the second, "More Frightened than Hurt." Amateur performances usually close the mouth of criticism and hinder an altogether just expression of opinion, but for all that, we believe the young ladies can scarcely be beaten in their respective roles. Bridget and Aunt Midget in the first, and Jane in the second, were model efforts. During the evening the President was gracefully surprised by the presentation of a huge bouquet in recognition of past services, we suppose. These young ladies are to be congratulated on the success crowning their efforts, both individually and collectively. They certainly have the assurance that, although their "Reception" might have been improved in its minor details, as a whole it was a commendable affair.

Meeting of Council and Charter Amendment Committee.

The Common Council and Citizens' Committee, composed of J. W. Yates, J. W. Murray, Enos W. Runyon, Alex. Gilbert, Mason W. Tyler, William B. Maxson, Samuel Huntington, appointed in November last to draft a new bill, the provisions of which would be applicable to the city of Plainfield, met in the Council Chamber on Monday evening last, the object being for the Council to hear the report of the Committee. Mr. J. W. Yates offered the following, which was received:

To the Hon. the Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

Gentlemen:

Pursuant to a resolution (a copy of which you will find enclosed) the undersigned, a Committee appointed by the citizens at a meeting held on the 2nd of November last, to draft a general bill to be presented to the Legislature for the government of small cities, beg leave to submit, as the result of their labors, the accompanying bill for your consideration.

February 20th, 1879.

Very Respectfully yours,
Jos. W. Yates,
Enos W. Runyon,
A. Gilbert,
Wm. B. Maxson,
Mason W. Tyler,
Sam'l Huntington,
Jno. W. Murray.

Mr. Samuel Huntington then proceeded to read the bill, which is a voluminous one, containing 89 sections, many of them the same as the present charter. It provides for the government of cities of less than 15,000 inhabitants, which of course includes Plainfield. It provides in its reading, for cities to which it applies to be divided into election wards, creates an excise Commission of five persons not members of Council, to be elected by the people, who shall have the sole right of granting licenses, and shall regulate the sale of liquor by hotels, saloons and groceries, also apothecaries, who may sell spirituous liquors for medicinal purposes; it grants power to form Water Companies to supply water to the city, also for the formation of Companies to deodorize all sewer and other filthy matter, and use or dispose of the same for fertilizing purposes; erect alms and work house, city hospital, construction of sewer mains, &c. There are many other important sections regarding the mode of raising and the amount to be raised, of extra money, manner of appointing officers, &c.

After reading the bill, the following resolution was offered by Councilman Stover:

Whereas, A committee of citizens of Plainfield has drafted a Charter for cities having less than 15,000 inhabitants.

Resolved, That the Common Council of the city of Plainfield approve of and desire the enactment of the same by the Legislature.

Resolved, That the President of the Council, with one other member thereof to be appointed by him, and two members of said committee of citizens also to be appointed by the President of the Council be a committee to urge the enactment of the same.

Mr. Lithgow arose and stated that his mind was not clear on the part of the bill regarding the elective part. He thought there should be a provision in the charter providing that where an officer or official proved incompetent after appointment that he should be removed by the proper authority. His remarks were of the tenor that the Council were that power and that there should be such provision provided.

Mr. Yates, of the Citizens' Committee, stated that the Committee had thought of and debated upon that question, but were of the opinion that a State law existed which covered the point. Any officer or official is amenable to the provisions of said law if incompetent, or if they violate their oath of office.

Mr. Rushmore stated that he knew the ladies of Plainfield were workers in the interests of the poor and needy of the city, and that their services should be recognized; He thought there should be a section in the charter allowing a woman over the age of 21 the privilege of holding the office of Overseer of the Poor.

Mr. Lithgow said he was a friend to the ladies, too, and would like to see such an amendment inserted. He thought that women were as capable of performing the duties appertaining to certain officials, (the School Board, for instance,) not with any disrespect to the members of that body present, speaking to Mr. Murray.

After some controversy on this subject, no one seeming willing to make a motion or resolution, Mr. Lithgow arose and emphatically stated that he desired a section in the charter regarding the incompetency of officers or officials, whereby they might be removed from office on sufficient grounds for same by Council.

Mr. Murray, of Citizens' Committee said, as it had before been stated, there was a State law bearing on that subject.

Mr. Redfield said if that was the case, there was no need of the section.

Mr. Lithgow thought the matter should be settled to night.

Mr. Maxson, of Citizens' Committee, said the State law covered all the ground. It governed all malfeasance in elective offices. In appointive offices, the Council should have power to remove all such offenders, and he believed the section alluded to covered that ground, inasmuch as it read that all such "may be removed by Common Council."

At this point Mr. Lithgow arose and said in words to the effect that he did not believe in one man ruling the city. Where there were eleven men who were elected by the people, who were wiser than any one man, be he saint or devil; no matter how good he may be, he did not know as much as eleven men. It should lie in the province of the eleven men to remove an officer from office for incompetency, not one man. It was a dangerous precedent to make. It was delegating one man too much power.

Mr. Huntington, of Citizens' Committee, said he thought there was not much danger of one man, who had only power to appoint half a dozen men, running the city. He thought the matter had been treated with more seriousness than was necessary. The people, who elected their rulers, would know and be the judges of who was right in such exercises of power.

Mr. Lithgow replied that he meant that if the Mayor did not have power to remove, the Council should.

Mr. Huntington said he thought the Police should not have two masters. If they did not do their duty, and the Mayor did not remove them, why impeach the Mayor.

It was finally decided to Mr. Lithgow's satisfaction that the section alluded to (Sec. 48) covered all the necessary ground.

Mr. Rushmore offered the following amendment to the bill, "and any female above 21 years shall be eligible to the office of Overseer of Poor."

Mr. Stewart seconded the motion, and then moved it be laid on the table.

The motion to lay on table was lost. The original motion was then taken up and lost. (Bad for the 21 year old women.)

It was then suggested that the bill be given back to the Citizens' Committee for them to make amendments.

Mr. Yates stated that the bill had been presented to Council, as per above resolution of Mr. Stover, and it was now in their hands and they should decide about resolutions regarding amendments.

In accordance with Mr. Stover's resolution, the Chair appointed the following named gentlemen the Committee to present the bill to the Legislature: For Council, Mr. Potts and Mr. Lithgow. For citizens, Messrs. J. W. Yates and E. W. Runyon.

On motion of Mr. Stover, the Com. were instructed to have the bill properly engrossed at expense of the city.

An Enjoyable Occasion.

About forty couple of young and old people, from this city and Rahway, gave Mr. Daniel Roberts, our Cherry St. Livery merchant, a "surprise" at his large and handsome residence at Huntersville, near Rahway, on Thursday evening last, and had a most enjoyable time. Prof. Frazee, as usual, furnished excellent music, and it was in the wee sma' hours of morn ere the participants in the night's pleasures could tear themselves away from "Uncle Dan's" hospitable mansion. Mrs. Roberts and daughter did the honors of the occasion in such a charming manner as to at once make all feel at home. Mr. Roberts and family contemplate shortly removing to this city and take up their abode in their elegant residence on Broadway. We are sure they will be hospitably welcomed by our citizens.

One of the best and oldest type foundries in Philadelphia, in a recent price list, makes the following emphatic announcement, which will meet the approval of the craft generally: "We wish it to be distinctly understood that we will not put up amateur fonts of type, nor give any encouragement to the miserable system of botchery that apes the name of printing, and tends to the deterioration of the beautiful art and to the manifest injury of professional printers."

Mandamuses.

County Attorney Marsh on Wednesday last served mandamuses on the cities of Elizabeth and Rahway and on the township of Linden. The application was made to Judge VanSickel at Trenton, and the writs are served on the Treasurers and bondsmen, compelling them to show cause why the balances due the county from those localities have not been paid in accordance with the law. It is understood that a failure to comply will cause the arrest of those parties—the amounts due the county having been diverted from its lawful destination.

The amounts due from those cities and townships aggregate about eighty thousand dollars, the largest proportion being that of Elizabeth, something over forty thousand dollars.

The total amounts due from the entire county on county tax, aggregates over eighty-three thousand dollars, and as the amounts of outstanding debts and temporary loans is only about fifty thousand dollars, if the amounts were paid promptly according to law there would be a snug balance left to the credit of the Board of Freeholders. They have been economical in the extreme and will, all things considered, show the best financial exhibit of any of their predecessors.

The authorities "pulled" a disorderly house in the "Valley" on Tuesday night and the "inmates" found therein, two gents and two ladies of the colored persuasion and one white, were accorded a hearing at Demler's Hotel, before Justice Vardon on Wednesday, and they were convicted on their own admissions, and sentenced to the County Jail. The other four gave officer Weaver and his posse the slip; therefore Justice V who is a terror to evil doers, could not get a chance to interview them.

All interested in the driven well royalty matter should attend a meeting at Warren Engine House, this (Friday) evening.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

There will be a grand Fox Chase at Scotch Plains, to-day (Friday), the start to be from Brittin's Hotel, at 10 o'clock, A. M. The entrance fee for dogs will be 25 cents. Ample time will be given the fox to place a long distance between himself and the dogs, before the latter are let loose. A good time may be expected.

Members of the Plainfield Gun Club visited New Brunswick on Saturday last, to witness a pigeon shooting match between Mr. J. Pentz, editor of The Turf, Field and Farm, and G. Rappleyea, of New Brunswick, at 15 birds each, 21 yards rise, for $35.—The weather was very unfavorable for pigeon shooting, yet the score was very creditable to the contestants. Mr. Pentz killed 10 and Mr. R. 8 out of the fifteen. A return match will be shot off at Newark on the 17th of March. After the match several sweepstake matches were shot, in which the members of our home club did themselves and the club credit.—Messrs. Thos. DeRemsey, on whose grounds the match was shot, Applegate, Rappleyea, Voorhees and others extended courtesies to the visiting members, which were pleasing.

The Central N. J. Game and Fish Protective Society met at J. H. Force's Hotel, this city, on Tuesday evening last, and adopted a new Constitution and By-Laws and transacted other important business. The meeting adjourned unto next Wednesday evening, same place, at 7 o'clock.

The last entertainment of the Helping Hand Society, of this village, came off on Thursday evening, Feb. 20th, at Academy Hall. The night was stormy and only a small audience was present to witness the closing exercises of that Society. There being so many new Societies inaugurated since then that the members lost all interest and one by one have dropped out.

COMMUNICATED.

Messrs. Editors;

At a late meeting of the Common Council a resolution was passed for the Committee on Streets to get proposals for grading and graveling certain streets, and also to fill up the gravel pits. At the last meeting of the Common Council they proposed to plank certain sidewalks. Now this is all very well for those that own property on the streets to be so improved with the public funds of the City. But the property owners who have been compelled to grade, macadamize, curb and flag the streets and sidewalks in front of their property at their own expense, think it is not just or right to take the money they pay in taxes to improve their neighbor's property. But let us examine the Charter. We find that "the Common Council can pass Ordinances to grade streets and sidewalks, and gravel streets and plank sidewalks, but at his, her, or their own expense, and that all expense for grading any street or portion of street shall be assessed upon and paid by the lands and real estate fronting upon such street or part of street; and curbing, flagging, planking or cementing side walks, shall be paid by the owners of the real estate in front of which sidewalks are thus improved." The Charter further provides that if the property owners neglect to comply with the Ordinance, it may be lawful for the Common Council to cause such improvement to be done at the expense of the City and the amount paid for such work shall be a lien on said real estate. What right have they to use the public money for the improvement of private property; does it not look like misusing the public funds? Again the City Collector is now collecting the assessment for grading the road-bed and sidewalks on Park Ave. Is it nonpartizan to compel those property owners to pay, and for the Street Committee to grade and gravel Front St. with the public money. There is no power given in the Charter to use the public money on streets or sidewalks, except laying stone cross walks, other than by ordinance. If the gravel pits are a nuisance, there is a remedy; have the owner indicted at the next Grand Jury, and save the expense for the benefit of the city, and thereby stop others from petitioning the Common Council to have swamp lands drained at the city's expense.

For "The Constitutionalist."

Housekeepers, where there are children attending the public school, regulate the daily meal or dinner according to the school regulations, with reference to stormy weather. Without entering my approval or disapproval as to "half sessions," regardless of storms, the least that can be complained of is, if storms call for half sessions, let this be general. It is impossible to regulate household affairs if this is not adhered to, as for example: To-day being stormy, there happens to be two sessions, and the dinner has been arranged for one. Therefore, the children in order to return in time for the second session, have to go without their dinner or stay home. Mine stay home. I wish the Principal would get married and keep house himself!

Respectfully,
HOUSEKEEPER.

Feb. 25th, 1879.

More Work for the Common Council.

Messrs. Editors:

Next Monday night I expect you will see a large list of your fellow citizens coming forward and demanding back from the City Fathers, with interest, the money paid to the "Mighty Stephen of the North" years ago, for putting in the sewer in Macedonia. The amount paid, and interest, is from eight to ten thousand dollars, the time having expired for re-assessment or bonding the city. Will they ask the people what to do?

STATE ITEMS.

The trial of Melick Staats, charged with the murder of Joseph Doll on the 20th of December, in a cut of the Central Railroad, near Bloomsbury, by striking him with a large lump of coal, is set down for the April term of the Hunterdon County Court. He will be defended by S. E. Perry, Esq., of Flemington, who feels quite confident of his acquittal. Staats is confined in Flemington jail.

The subject of technical education has been receiving much attention in Paterson of late. During the past two Winters an evening high school has been maintained by the Board of Education for instruction in the higher mathematics, mechanics, and industrial drawing, and many working men have availed themselves of its advantages. On Thursday night there was a public exhibition of the work done by the drawing classes, and a large number of prominent citizens present were surprised at the proficiency shown. It is probable that this school will be used as the basis for carrying out Gov. McClellan's recommendation for the establishment of industrial schools in manufacturing cities.

Mrs. Barbara Seitzer, of Lister Ave., Newark, blew down the chimney of a kerosene lamp on Friday evening, to extinguish the same, when the lamp exploded and she was covered with burning oil. She was terribly burned about the neck and arms, and it is feared she will not recover.

CHAPTER X.

A further supplement to an act entitled "An act relative to sales of lands under a public statute or by virtue of any judicial proceeding," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

WHEREAS, The provisions of the first section of the act recited in the title of this act, and the provisions of the act amendatory thereof, approved April ninth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, require advertisements to be published in two of the newspapers printed and published in the county in which the lands are situate, at least four weeks successively, once a week next preceding the time appointed for selling the same, of which one shall be a newspaper printed and published at the county seat of the county in which the land advertised to be sold is situated, which provisions have not in all cases been known and complied with, whereby titles of certain lands may be deemed defective; therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That no sale of lands made by any officer or other person or persons since the approval of the said amendatory act, shall be held to be invalid by reason of failure to comply with the provisions of said acts relating to the publishing of advertisements in newspapers; provided, that said sale or sales shall have been advertised at least four weeks successively, once a week next preceding the time appointed therefor in at least two newspapers printed and published in the county where the land is situated, whether either of such newspapers be published at the county seat or not; and provided further, that all the other provisions of said last mentioned act in relation to the publication of advertisements of sales of lands shall have been complied with; and provided further, that this act shall not be construed to extend to any sales of land to be made after this act goes into effect.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 14, 1879.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

COURTING IN THE SOUTHWEST.

He sat on the side of the room in a big white oak rocking chair. A long-eared deer hound, snapping at flies, was by his side; a basket of sewing by her. Both rocked incessantly—that is the young people—not the dog or basket. He sighs heavily, and looks out of the west window at a crape-myrtle tree; she sighs lightly, and gazes out of the east window—at a turnip patch. At last he remarks:

"This is mighty good weather to pick cotton."

"'Tis that—if we only had any to pick."

The rocking continues.

"What's your dog's name?"

"Cooney."

Another broken stillness.

"What is he good fur?"

"What is he good fur?" she said, abstractedly.

"Your dog, Cooney,"

"Fur ketchin' 'possums.'

Silence of half an hour.

"He looks like a deer dog."

"Who looks like a deer dog?"

"Cooney."

"He is—but he's kinder bellowed, and gettin' old and slow now. An' he ain't no 'count on a cold trail."

In the quiet ten minutes that ensued she took two stitches in her quilt; it was a gorgeous affair, that quilt was, from the pattern called "Rose of Sharon." She is very particular about the nomenclature of her quilt, and frequently walks fifteen miles to get a new pattern with a "real purty name."

"Your ma raisin' many chickens?"

"Forty odd."

Then more rocking, and somehow, after a while, the big rocking-chair and the little rocking chair were jammed side by side. I don't know how it happened. It may have been caused by some peculiarity in the floor, or by the natural magnetic attraction one chair had for the other; but, strange to say, the basket of work had followed the little chair, and the little chair has traveled as fast as the big one. Cooney had not moved. He lay in the same place, sound asleep, and he was talking in his sleep, that is, giving faint, irregular barks at the 'possums he beheld in his dreams. After a while the conversation was resumed.

"How many has your ma got?"

"How many what?"

"Chickens."

"Nigh on to a hundred."

By this time the chairs were so close together that rocking was impossible.

"The minh has eat most of ours."

Then a long silence ensues. At last he observes:

"Makin' quilts?"

"Yes," she replied, brightening up.—"I've just finished 'Rosin' Eagul of Brassel,' a 'Nation's Pride.' Have you ever saw the Yellow Rose on the Parary?"

"No."

More silence, then he says:

"Do you like cabbage?"

"I do that."

Presently this hand is accidentally placed on hers. She does not know it—or at least does not seem to be aware of it. Then, after a half hour spent in sighing, coughing, and clearing of throats, he says:

"I've a great mind to bite you."

"What have you a great mind to bite me fur?"

"Kase you won't have me."

"Kase you ain't axed me."

"Well, now I ax you."

"Then, now I have you."

Then Cooney dreams he hears a sound of kissing.

Then the next day the young man goes to Tigerville after a marriage license. Wednesday the following week. No cards.

FR[illegible]LY.

"Give, and it shall be given unto you."

A quick, busy little stream was running eagerly along—now under dark, overhanging trees, now in sunshine, and again rattling over the stones, joyously singing on its way praises to Him who made it. As it journeyed on it passed near to a pond that lay quietly resting in a meadow, with some trees standing round as if to guard it.

The pond had often noticed the stream, and thought what a busy little thing it was, always ready to give away its waters to every thirsty plant and tree and moss, and still running on to see who else needed its help.

"I must speak to it some day," said the pond.

So one morning the pond began:—"Stop a minute; friend, I have something to say to you."

The brook murmured a softly reply, and the pond continued: "I have a word of advice for you. If you go on in this reckless way, giving to every one that asks you and even going out of your way to look for opportunities of giving, let me tell you that you won't have anything left for yourself much longer."

"I have always enough, and more than I want," sang the brook cheerily, "and it is a joy to look about for the thirsty ones I may bring refreshment to, and then to see them brighten as they drink in what I brought them."

"It's all very well to talk like that," said the pond, "but we must live; June is nearly here, and the heat will make us very dry, and if we don't keep something for ourselves we shall die."

Just then some cows in the meadow came up to drink. "I wish you wouldn't come," sighed the pond, "I have only just enough for myself; go and get refreshed elsewhere."

But the cows took no notice; they drank their fill and quietly returned to the grass. Then the pond wondered what it could do to keep its supply itself, and finally concluded to try and cover itself up with a green covering which would render it undrinkable.

"Look here!" said the pond a few days after, "look here, friend brook! I have found a capital plan. I have put a covering over my water. No one can get it now; they say they don't care to. But any way I have saved myself something for the hot weather, and I advise you to do the same."

"No, indeed," answered the brook; "fresh supplies are constantly and freely given to me, and I must give away as freely, or I should fear of getting stagnant."

"But suppose the supply should cease?" suggested the pond.

"I don't suppose," answered the stream, "I know that away up the mountains are fresh springs, and that they cannot cease flowing; they supply me that I may give to others, and the more I give the more I am given."

Weeks passed away, and June and July came with their burning days and sunshine; the selfish pond that kept its waters for itself gradually dried up until there was not even a drop of water left. It had been content with its own supply, and had sought no fresh springs.

While the little brook still ran brightly on, feeding and nourishing and cheering all who came in its way, and ever finding the promise true—"He that watereth shall be watered also himself."

Mayor Cooper, of New York, has ordered that no fees be taken for the performance of the marriage ceremony in his office, hereafter.

Nothing disposes us better to confidence, to the pleasures of intimacy, than a common object of suffering. Thus our companions in misfortune become almost always our friends.

Henry Watterson's paper announces the discovery of a young lady who blushes, goes to bed at nine, eats heartily, speaks plain English, respects her mother, doesn't want to marry a lord, and knows how to cook.

So many people are shot, where the doctors are unable to find the ball, that it is suggested that a thread be attached to bullets, with a spool in the rear of the cylinder of the revolver, so that the doctor can take hold of the thread and pull the bullet out. Many valuable lives would be saved that way.

A few days ago George Carrol, a colored man of Red Bank, climbed a tree for the purpose of trimming it. Seating himself on a limb he deliberately sawed it off, and he and the limb reached the ground together. It is feared the man is fatally injured. The limb was not damaged.

Of all the Yankee whittlers, the boss is George W. Knox, of Cleveland, Ohio, who has exhibited specimens of his skill at Vienna and Paris Expositions. He has worn out 200 knives and spent three years in cutting a miniature Bunker Hill monument out of a pine plank. Over the monument is an arch supporting five Gothic steeples, from which hang long chains carved with animals and models of mechanics' tools.

Smalley's Defiance Asparagus.
NEW VARIETY.
The merits and claims of the "Defiance," are as follows: It is earlier, a larger grass, softer, more tender, free from wood, the flavor sweet and very delicate, far superior to all other varieties: It will produce double that of the "Colossal" and can cut it longer. It will continue to grow longer than any other sorts. It has been tested for the past three years. I know my roots and seeds to be strictly pure, as I am the sole originator of it; shall not put any seed in the market this year, as I intend planting it myself. It is the best Asparagus grown, either for private use or for market. We would recommend it in preference to all others. Price $2 per 100, and $15 per 1000. No charge for boxes or packing.—Purchasers pay their express. Orders must be accompanied by a remittance, or satisfactory reference. Will be sent by express C. O. D.
ABRAHAM SMALLEY, Bound Brook, N. J.
We, the undersigned, have tested the above variety of Asparagus, and unhesitatingly recommend it as all that is claimed for it, in fact it is a marvel in the shape of this delicious vegetable:

CAUTION!
The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.
"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Thos. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

POETRY.

For "The Constitutionalist."

TO CARRIE.

BY MRS. MARGARET A. BRITTIN.

You laugh at love and say that you
Have never known the tender flame—
Think there are none so good, so true
'Mong all your friends that you could name
Who really loves whose heart, whose soul
Is under cupid's sweet control.

Carrie, the time is drawing near
When you have said that we must part;
I look upon the by-gone year
I think of your kind, noble heart,
Your tender heartfelt sympathy,
Your more than kindness shown to me.

There's falsehood, vanity, deceit,
But none in my respect for you;
'Tis useless that I now repeat
What you are this have hit was true,
Thus I adore your noble heart
And grieve that we so soon must part.

You laugh, I see; well grant me this,
If you should ever need a friend
Though years have passed sweet years of bliss,
Just then, my love, but one word send
Come; and my services shall be
To aid, to comfort, offered thee.

Perhaps when years have rolled away
The time may come to test my love,
Though almost ready then to lay
Our bodies down and soar above,
You'll then believe what I repeat,
'Tis this, that all is not deceit.

MY MIDNIGHT PERIL.

The night of the 17th of October—shall I ever forget its pitchy darkness, the roar of the autumnal wind through the lonely forest, and the incessant downpour of the rain?

"This comes of short cuts," I muttered petulantly to myself, as I plodded along, keeping close to the trunks of the trees to avoid the ravine, through which I could hear the roar of the turbulent stream, forty or fifty feet below. My blood ran cold as I thought what might be the possible consequences of a misstep or a move in the wrong direction. Why had I not been contented to keep in the right road?

Hold on! was that a light, or my eyes playing me false?

I stopped, holding on to the low resinous boughs of a hemlock that grew on the edge of the bank, for it actually seemed that the wind would seize me bodily and hurl me down the precipitous descent.

It was a light—thank Providence—it was a light, and no ignis fatuus to lead me on to destruction and death.

"Hallo-o-o-o!"

My voice ran through the woods like a clarion. I plunged on through tangled vines, dense briars and rocky banks, until, gradually nearing, I could perceive a figure wrapped in an oilcloth cape, or cloak, carrying a lantern. As the dim light fell upon his face I almost recoiled. Would not solitude in the woods be preferable to the companionship of this withered, wrinkled old man? But it was too late to recede now.

"What's wanting?" he snarled, with a peculiar motion of the lips that seemed to leave h's yellow teeth all bare.

"I am lost in the woods; can you direct me to R——Station?"

"Yes, R——Station is twelve miles from here."

"Twelve miles!"

I stood aghast.

"Can you tell me any shelter I could obtain for the night?"

"No."

"Where are you going?"

"To Drew's, down by the maple swamp."

"Is it a tavern?"

"No."

"Would they take me for the night? I could pay them well."

His eyes gleamed; the yellow stumps stood revealed once more.

"I guess so! folks don't stop there."

"Is it far from here?"

"Not very; about half a mile."

"Then make haste and let us reach it. I am drenched to the skin."

We plodded on, my companion more than keeping pace with me. Presently we left the edge of the ravine, entering what seemed a trackless woods, and keeping straight on until lights gleamed fitfully through the wet foliage.

It was a ruinous old place, with the windows all drawn to one side, as if the foundation had settled, and the pillars of a rude porch nearly rotted away.

A woman answered my fellow-traveler's knock. My companion whispered a word or two to her, and she turned to me with smooth voluble words of welcome.

She regretted the poverty of their accommodations; but I was welcome to them such as they were.

"Where is Isaac?" demanded my guide.

"He has not come in yet."

I sat down on a wooden bench beside the fire, and ate a few mouthfuls of bread.

"I should like to retire as soon as possible," I said, for my weariness was excessive.

"Certainly." The woman started up with alacrity.

"Where are you going to put him?" asked my guide.

"Up chamber."

"Put him in Isaac's room."

"No."

"It's the most comfortable."

"I tell you no!"

But here I interrupted the whispering colloquy.

"I am not particular—I don't care where you put me, only make haste."

So I was conducted up a steep ladder that stood in the corner of the room, into an apartment, ceiled with sloping beams and ventilation by one small window, where a cot bedstead, crowded close against the board partition, and a pine table with two or three chairs, formed the sole attempts at furniture.

The woman set the light—an old oil lamp—on the table.

"Anything more I can get you, sir?"

"Nothing, thank you."

"I hope you will sleep well, sir. When shall I call you?"

"At 4 o'clock in the morning, if you please. I must walk over to B—station in time for the 7 o'clock express."

"I'll be sure to call you, sir."

She withdrew, leaving me alone in the gloomy little apartment. I sat down and looked around me with no very agreeable sensation.

"I will sit down and write to Alice," I thought; "that will soothe my nerve and quiet me, perhaps."

I descended the ladder, the fire still glowed redly in the hearth beneath; my companion and the woman sat beside it talking in a low tone, and a third person sat at the table eating; a short, stout, villainous-looking man, in a red flannel shirt and muddy trousers.

I asked for writing materials and returned to my room to write to my wife.

"My darling Alice—"

I paused and laid down my pen as I concluded the words, half smiling to think what she would say, could she know of my strange quarters.

Not till both sheets were covered did I lay aside my pen and prepare for slumber. As I folded my paper I happened to glance toward the window.

Was it the gleam of a human eye observing me through the board partition or was it my own fancy? There was a crack there, but only blank darkness beyond, yet I could have sworn that something had sparkled balefully at me.

I took out my watch—it was 1 o'clock. It was scarcely worth while for me to undress, for three hours sleep. I would lie down in my clothes and snatch what slumber I could. So, placing my valise at the head of my bed, and barricading the lockless door with two chairs, I extinguished the light and lay down.

At first I was very wakeful, but gradually a soft drowsiness seemed to steal over me like a misty mantle, until, all of a sudden, some startling feeling coursed through my veins, and I sat up, excited and trembling.

A luminous softness seemed to glow thro' the room—no light of the moon or stars was ever so penetrating—and by the little window I saw Alice, my wife, dressed in floating garments of white, with her long, golden hair knotted back with a blue ribbon. Apparently she was coming to me with outstretched hands, and eyes full of wild, anxious tenderness.

I sprang to my feet and rushed toward her, but as I reached the window the fair apparition seemed to vanish into the stormy darkness, and I was left alone. At the self same instant the sharp report of a pistol sounded—I could see the jagged stream of fire above the pillow straight through the very spot where ten minutes since my head had lain.

With an instantaneous realization of my danger I swung myself over the edge of the window, jumping some eight or ten feet into tangled bushes below, and as I crouched there recovering my breath I heard the tramp of footsteps into my room.

"Is he dead?" cried a voice up the ladder—the smooth, deceitful voice of the woman with the half-closed eyes.

"Of course he is," growled a voice back; "that charge would have killed ten men. A light here, quick; and tell Tom to be ready."

A cold, agonized shudder ran through me, what a den of midnight murderers had I fallen into! And how fearfully narrow had been my escape!

With the speed that only mortal terror and deadly peril can give, I rushed through the woods, now illuminated by a faint glimmer of star light. I know not what impulse guided my footsteps—I never shall know how many times I crossed my own track, or how close I stood to the brink of the deadly ravine; but a merciful Providence encompassed me with a guiding and protecting care, for when the morning dawned, with faint, red bars of orient light against the stormy eastern sky, I was close to the high road, some seven miles from R——.

Once at the town, I told my story to the police, and a detachment was sent with me to the spot.

After much searching and many false alarms, we succeeded in finding the ruinous old house; but it was empty—our birds had flown; nor did I recover my valise, and watch and chain, which latter I had left under my pillow.

"It's Drew's gang," said the leader of the police, "and they've troubled us these two years. I don't think, though, they'll come back here just at present."

Nor did they.

But the strangest part of my story is yet to come. Some three weeks subsequently I received a letter from my sister, who was with Alice in her English home—a letter whose intelligence filled me with surprise.

"I must tell you something strange," wrote my sister, "that happened on the night of the 17th of October. Alice had not been well for some time; in fact, she had been confined to her bed for nearly a week, and I was sitting beside her reading. It was late—the clock had just struck one—when all at once she seemed to faint away, growing white and rigid as a corpse I hastened to call assistance; but all our efforts to restore animation were in vain, I was just about sending for the doctor when her senses returned as suddenly as they had left her, and she sat up in bed, pushing back her hair and looking wildly around her."

"Alice," I exclaimed, "how you have terrified us all! Are you ill?"

"Not ill," she answered; "but I feel so strange. Gracie, I have been with my husband!"

"And all our reasoning failed to convince her of the possibility of her assertion. She persists to this moment that she saw you and was with you on the morning of the 18th of October. Where and how she cannot tell, but we think it must have been a dream. She is better now, and I wish you could see how fast she is improving."

This is my plain unvarnished tale. I do not pretend to explain or account for its mysteries. I simply relate facts. Let psychologists unravel the labyrinthical skein. I am not superstitious, neither do I believe in ghosts, wraiths or apparitions; but this thing I do know—that, although my wife was in England in body on the morning of the 18th of October, her spirit surely stood before me in New York in the moment of the deadly peril that menaced me. It may be that to the subtle instinct and strength of a wife's holy love all things are possible, but Alice surely saved my life.

OUR GEORGE TAKES A SLIDE.

Sliding is a variety of game peculiar to this part of the country. It is a luxury that inhabitants of Tophet never indulge in. It runs wild on the hillsides, and is hunted on moonlight nights in winter with a sled. It is a kind of ex-hil-era-tion that even a Good Templar may indulge in. It is a sort of pious way of playing "old sledge," without the cards. It is a comfortable way of going a coasting, without experiencing the dangers of the sea.

Belfast is peculiarly adapted for sliding. Many of her streets are set up endwise, with sufficient pitch to enable water to run down them without being pushed. A week or two since we had a new moon on trial, and the hills being in excellent condition, those who enjoy sliding had an opportunity of getting their fill. I had an opportunity, and I got full.

In my more youthful days I was wont to take the girls out sliding. It was then the fashion to seat yourself on the sled, while the girl would occupy a seat on your knee, her left arm round your neck, and your right arm round her waist. Simply this position was fun, even though you did not slide at all. I remember it always took me a good while to get ready. I don't know why, but it did. I think that I could enjoy an hour of such sport now, in a good warm parlor, simply substituting a chair for a sled—but I am digressing.

Fashions change. They don't slide now as they did. Your girl don't sit on your knee any more. You don't use one sled. Sliding has been revolutionized, and you now slide on bobs.

My experience on bobs has not been a succession of success. I got the loan of a bob and invited a charming girl to go out sliding. 'Twas a beautiful evening. The moon was as full as a New York alderman, and the night was as light as a handful of swan's down. We climbed the hill; our hearts were full of gladness, and our countenances covered with perspiration.

Webster defines a bob as "a thing that plays loosely." He could not have got a better definition if he had sat up all night thinking of it. If Webster were living, he would receive a congratulatory letter from me on the success of that definition.

For the benefit of those benighted readers who know nothing about sliding, except back sliding, I will remark that a bob is built of two sleds and a board. The board is securely fastened to the rear sled, while the front end rests on a rocker which turns on a bolt. You get on board in the same way that a clothes pin gets on to a line.—You bisect yourself, and arrange your legs equally on either side of the board. The person nearest the forward sled steers. He steers with his feet by moving the sled to the right or left. It needs a man with a pair of cool and collected feet to steer a bob. Everything depends on him. It looks as simple as an idiot, but somehow I would rather avoid this subject. Let me simply say that no Texas steer was ever wilder than mine.

At the top of the hill I waited till all the bobs had started. I took particular pains to note how each company arranged matters, and I concluded that I understood the whole thing. St. Paul remarks that "If any man thinks that he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know." I predict that Paul had been trying to steer a bob when he made that sage remark.

My companion and I arranged ourselves on the sled. We arranged very satisfactorily. I don't remember that I ever felt better, or that the world and life in all its aspects ever seemed brighter to me than it did at that moment. Signalling a small boy to give me a push, we started. To start was to go. How we went! It seemed as if we were sliding through the air on a buttered sunbeam. Notwithstanding our speed, I did not forget my companion, and I turned my head and asked, "Are you"—when just then the forward sled struck something, and turned round to see what it was. This piece of curiosity on the part of the sled prevented me from finding out whether she was or not, and had a tendency to entirely disarrange my plans.

I was so intent on getting down the hill, that when the sled turned round, I did not let that make any difference with me. I had advertised to go down the hill, and so I went. My companion with a delicate politeness that I shall never cease to appreciate, followed on after me, her movement reminding me of Ruth's words, "whither thou goest, I will go."

There is a rule in philosophy that when velocity ceases, attraction will cause a body to fall to the ground. It works the same way with two bodies, even though one of them is of the feminine gender. It did not make an exception of our case. My velocity ceased about twenty-five feet from where I left the sled, and I suddenly sat down on the snow. Nature has kindly arranged a portion of our anatomy especially to sit down on, but sometimes when in a great hurry, we do not use it. I neglected to do so on this occasion, and instead, sat down on the back of my neck.

As I took my seat, I thought I saw a comet coming toward me. It was different from any I had ever gazed on before. It was clothed in a soft, white light, and appeared to wear a pair of striped stockings. I had scarcely time to contemplate the beauty of the heavenly phenomenon, or wonder if perchance it might be a protoplasm, evolved from millions of molecules, when the head of the thing struck me in the stomach, and knocked the astronomy and wind all out of me. My arms mechanically shut together like a pair of ice tongs, and embraced a hundred and some odd pounds of the charmingest bit of femininity and dry goods that ever wore crimps.

I drew her head from my stomach, and filled up the hole with snow, and ended up the fair one, and asked her if she did not think that her parents would be anxious about her, if she stayed out any later; and she said that she had thought of the same thing herself, and when we meandered home under the soft light of the moon, we did not talk of love, and flowers, and things, but we each one wondered whether we would ever be good for anything again, and whether it would be worth while to try and live any longer. Our parting at the gate was as short as a soda cracker.

I have carefully read the obituary notices since then, to see if my fair one has died. I have walked by the house to see if "there was crape on the door," but I have not called to enquire for her health. I have a foreboding that hereafter there will be a coldness between us, for that bob-sled made a breach in our friendship wide enough to drive a load of hay through.

I do not wish to say one word of disparagement of sliding, but I would enforce on my gentleman friends this precaution: Before inviting your girl to slide on a bob-sled, learn how to steer. Sit up nights and practice, but if you value her friendship, don't fail to thoroughly understand a bob-sled, before extending an invitation to her to slide with you.—Belfast Journal.

NATURAL HISTORY.

A policeman having been called upon to shoot a dog in a yard on Brush street, the other day, took a seat on a fence, drew up his legs out of danger, and remarked to himself as he took aim:

"The seat of all vitality is the heart, and here goes."

A cow in the lot beyond threw up her head and went galloping around, and the dog trotted over the yard as if perfectly at home. The officer got a good ready and observed:

"The fear of death is often as strongly exhibited in beasts as in man, and their dying agonies have been known to bring tears to the eyes of the executors—bang!"

A woman who was working up an old knot in the alley, flung down the ax, put her head over the fence, and warned the policeman that she didn't want to be bothered any more, though she wouldn't object to his shooting up in the air if the police regulations required it.

"Natural history asserts that the average life of a canine is four years," resumed the officer as he brought the revolver down again, "and that they are subject to fourteen different diseases. I will now take that chap right behind the ear, penetrating skull and brain, and causing death from two to four minutes."

The smoke had scarcely lifted when a melon peddler, whose horse was coming down the street at a slow pace, rose up in his wagon and called out:

"If you boys don't stop shootin' beans at me I'll wollop the hull crowd, rich ones and all! That 'ere last one just tickled my nose!"

"Natural hist—" began the officer, when the dog discovered a hole under the fence and slipped into the street and made off. "Natural-history," repeated the blue-coat as he dropped off the fence, "explicitly states that dogs must stand still when being shot at, and if I didn't hit him it's the fault of education."

A MODEL CONFESSION.

Several years ago, in a Western town, a young lawyer, a member of a large church, got drunk The brethren said he must confess. He demurred. He knew the members to be good people, but that they had their faults, such as driving sharp bargains, screwing labor down to low wages, loaning money at illegal rates, misrepresenting the articles they had for sale, etc. But they were good people, and pressed the lawyer to come before the church meeting and own up his sins of taking a glass too much, for they were temperance people, and abhorred intemperance.

The sinner finally went to the confession, found a large gathering of brethren and sisters, whose bowed heads rose and whose eyes glistened with pure delight as the lawyer began his confession:

"I confess," he said, "that I never took ten per cent. for money." On that confession down went a brother's head with a groan. "I never turned a man from my door who needed food and shelter." Down went another head. "I confess I never sold a skim milk cheese for a new one," whereupon a sister shrieked for mercy. "But," concluded the sinner, "I have been drunk, and I am sorry for it."

A STIGMA ON HIS BACK.

A Lieutenant on board one of the guard ships applied to his captain for leave to go on shore.

It was refused.

He asked again; the same answer, more peremptory than before.

He repeated his request, and asked for reasons of refusal.

Both were still obstinately withheld. "But, sir," he expostulated, "if I ask for leave, and you refuse it, without giving me any reasons, I shall walk about the deck with a stigma on my back."

"By George, sir," cried the irate and rather unreasonable captain, "if I catch you walking up and down her Majesty's deck with anything but her Majesty's uniform on your back, I'll have you tried by court-martial!"

MORE BLACKMAIL.

An oldish man, having an apple stand on Woodward avenue, was recently approached by a hungry looking lad, who asked:

"Say, ain't you goin' to gimme an apple?"

"I'll give to the Station first?" was the gruff reply.

"You declare war, do you? All right, my old buckshot? I'll stand right here for the next hour and tell everybody that you spit on your apples and then brush 'em on your greasy old coat sleeve! We'll see, who'll come out ahead in this mad struggle!"

The boy did. He got his apple in five seconds.

W. L. FORCE and A. L. FORCE.

Congress adjourned on Tuesday last, and the President has called an extra session for March 18th. Both Houses will then be Democratic.

Charles W. Angell, the defaulting secretary of the Pullman Palace Car Company, pleaded guilty, at Chicago, on Thursday morning, and was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary—the full extent of the law.

The census-takers next year will be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, just as law Judges in our counties are supposed to be appointed. It is expected that this will secure a fair division of the enumerators.

Chancellor Runyon has granted a divorce to Adam Rehmon, of Newark, from his wife Isabella. The wife is thirty-five years old and the husband seventeen. He alleged in his petition that he was entrapped into marriage while drunk, and the evidence before the Chancellor confirmed the allegation.

The trials of the rest of the members of the Warren county Ring, set down for Tuesday, have gone over to the April term of the Oyer and Terminer, at which Chief Justice Beasley will preside. There are ten or a dozen prominent officials and ex-officials of the city of Philipsburg to be tried for various offences.

Trouble is likely to arise regarding the construction of the New Street Sewer, judging from the long list of names presented to Council at last meeting of that body, petitioning them to pay them back the monies assessed against and paid by them for benefits of New Street Sewer. The petition itself, which will be found in Council proceedings, will explain the matter.

Mayor Harper in dignified terms gives his opinion, through a message to Council, on the "non-partizan" stand taken by the members of that body regarding the nominations sent to them by him for city officials. We think the Mayor is right in the matter. Because the Council has a Republican majority it is no reason why a capable official whose name is sent in to them by His Honor, should be rejected because he is a Democrat. That is "non-partizan"! with a vengeance.

The Deckertown correspondent of the N. J. Herald says: Every few months there are rumors of some parties discovering traces and indications of minerals in the Blue Ridge. During the past year one person alone has expended over eight hundred dollars in searching for silver on lands on the top of the mountain, near the Milford turnpike. The latest we have heard is that parties are now prospecting for coal on lands belonging to Jacob Courtright, near Coleville.

Director of the Board of Freeholders, C. W. L. Martine, will without doubt, receive a re-nomination for the office of Freeholder from Fanwood Township, at the Primary to be held at Scotch Plains this (Friday) evening.—The people of the County could desire no better nomination than that of such a trustworthy official as Mr. Martine. Always carefully looking after the interests of the tax-payers, and having leisure time to so do, with his record for honesty and ability, we are sure no better selection could be made. The voters of Fanwood, who have such an excellent record, financially, as their late statement shows, should return Mr. Martine.

The Senate has, by a vote of 46 to 4, passed the Census bill, which provides for the appointment of a Superintendent of the Census, with clerks and assistants, and in every State of Supervisors of Census, who are to apportion the State and to appoint enumerators, who shall receive two cents for every person reported, two cents for every death reported, ten cents for every farm, and fifteen cents for every establishment of productive industry enumerated and returned. The sub-divisions assigned to each enumerator shall not exceed 4,000 inhabitants according to the census of 1870. The taking is to be begun on the 1st of June, 1880, and the cost is to be limited to $3,000,000.

RIFLE PRACTICE OF THE NATIONAL GUARD.

The rifle practice of the National Guard of New Jersey has been of great benefit to the members of the various organizations, and considering that it was for the first time, it has been a success. Colonel W. H. Sterling, A. D. C., and Acting Instructor of Rifle Practice, in his report to Major General Mott says: "The discipline in both the Brigades during their service upon the range was excellent, and the greatest interest and enthusiasm were displayed by all, reflecting great credit upon their instructors, both the Brigade and Regimental Inspectors of Rifle Practice. The duties of these officers are onerous, and heavy demands are made upon their time, but they have, nevertheless, shown the greatest zeal and activity, and the men a skill that is surprising for the brief space of time that has been allotted to them for practice. The progress made by the National Guard in rifle practice is a subject of great congratulation."

At the close of the Practice last year the First Brigade, (General Plume's) reported that out of 1,271 practicing, 109 marksmen, 69 first class, 288 second class, 534 third class, 897 fourth class, and with a figure of merit of 13.55. The Second Brigade, (General Sewell's,) reports, out of 1,214 practicing, 13 marksmen, 35 first class, 257 second class, 807 third class, and 803 fourth class, with a figure of merit of 11.62. There is no doubt but that the practice during the coming season will show a marked improvement over that of last year.

SENATE NO. 187.

The above is the caption of the general law bill now before the Legislature affecting the city of Plainfield. It has passed the Senate, is now in the House and will undoubtedly pass that branch of the Legislature, with several amendments made in it. To affect Plainfield, for which the bill was framed, the Council must first pass an Ordinance declaring their intention to adopt its provisions, afterward notice must be given 30 days in advance, of an election to be held, whereat the people shall vote to ratify or not ratify the provisions of the bill. When it shall have become a law, we shall print it in full, and invite criticism of the public on its merits or demerits.

DEMOCRATS, BEWARE!

Next Tuesday occurs the Annual Spring elections in the various Townships of the State. Although in some localities but little significance, other than mere local, attaches to these elections, in Union County, however, the results of the elections on that day is of the utmost importance regarding the selection of Freeholders. The Board is now Democratic, and their record for the past year, as will be shown by their statement, is one to be proud of. Expenses have been reduced and an economical system of government adopted. The Republican party will make a strong effort to capture the Board this Spring, aided and abetted by the so-called Greenback Labor party, who, will secretly form an alliance with the Republican leaders, with the promise of remuneration in some shape.—The Democratic party have seen enough of this "Greenback" or "National" party. The result of their votes was made apparent last Fall, when the State was carried by the Republicans through the vote of these dupes, consisting mainly, we are sorry to say, of men professing to be Democrats. That their eyes are by this time opened to the situation is something to be earnestly hoped for. Let every man, who has ever professed Democratic principles, and been led astray by the leaders of this faction, who really are a wing of the Republican party, now come forward and cast his vote, as he should always do, with the party he belongs to, the good and grand old party of the people, the Democratic party.

THE LEGISLATURE.

TRENTON, March 4.

Both Houses re-convened at 8 o'clock last evening, and transacted considerable routine business.

In the Senate the report of the State Prison Committee on the bill to prevent the manufacture of boots and shoes in the State Prison, and the bill itself were the special order, but much to the surprise of everybody except the initiated, Mr. Francis moved to postpone consideration for one week. Mr. Francis stated that his constituents were deeply interested in the matter and he desired the postponement on account of a labor demonstration to take place in Newark during the present week.

Mr. Francis also introduced all the bills reducing the salaries of the Chancellor, Judges, etc., and cutting down the fees of the Sheriffs, County Clerks, etc., 33 per cent.

Mr. Beekman introduced a bill to allow counties which, according to the last census, have a population of less than 50,000 inhabitants and no more than 40,000 to renew 75 per centum of their bonded indebtedness by the issuing of new bonds for that purpose, payable at periods of time not exceeding ten years, and at a rate of interest not exceeding 5.70.

In the House a number of bills were introduced, among which were the following:

Mr. Crane, supplement to an act relative to the publication of the laws. Provides that notice of sales of land by sheriffs, etc., may be published in two newspapers in the county, one to be nearest the place in which such land is situated, provided they shall be two years in existence.

Mr. Crane, an act to provide for the collection of a tax on the retailer of liquor. Enacts the bell punch method which is in force in Virginia.

Mr. Gill, an act relative to townships. Provides that on a petition of one-third of the property owners townships may issue bonds.

Mr. Lippincott, an act relative to bets, wagers and pools. Imposes a penalty of $2,000 or two years imprisonment for gambling of this kind.

Mr. Roe, an act to provide for the inspection of illuminating oil made from petroleum. Provides for the appointment of an Inspector with power to appoint deputies, who are to be paid by a fee of twenty cents per barrel inspected.

Mr. Bruen, an act to enable the qualified voters of the several townships and wards to decide by ballot upon the subject of granting licenses in their several precincts for the sale of malt, vinous and spirituous liquors. (A local option bill in other words).

The general impression is that the session will not be prolonged after the 14th of March.

It is gratifying to read that there is renewed activity in the iron business throughout the country. The locomotive engine shops at Paterson are filled with orders and a large number of engines have been turned out since the beginning of the present year. The rolling mills and furnaces have about all they can do for months ahead and consequently there has been a marked stiffening in the price of crude and manufactured iron. Pig iron has advanced in price $1.50 per ton within a very short time and there is a good prospect that the upward tendency will continue. Not only is the iron industry looking up but other branches of trade and manufacture are brightening. A notable feature of the improving condition of things is that people are buying less and less of the middlemen and dealing more and more with the manufacturers and from first hands, thereby saving the profit which the middlemen heretofore reaped.

HAYE'S PROCLAMATION.

WASHINGTON, March [illegible].—The following is the proclamation of the President convening Congress in extra session on the 18th inst.:

By the President of the United States of America, a Proclamation.

Whereas, the final adjournment of the Forty-fifth Congress without making the usual and necessary appropriations for the legislative, executive and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and without making the usual and necessary appropriations for the support of the army for the same fiscal year, presents an extraordinary occasion, requiring the President to exercise the power vested in him by the Constitution to convene the Houses of Congress, in anticipation of the day fixed by law for their next meeting;

Now, therefore, I, Rutherford B. Hayes, President of the United States, do, by virtue of the power to this end in me vested by the Constitution, convene both Houses of Congress, to assemble at their respective chambers, at 12 o'clock, noon, on Tuesday, the 18th day of March instant, then and there to consider and determine such measures as, in their wisdom, their duty, and the welfare of the people may seem to demand. In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 4th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1879 and of the Independence of the United States of America the 103d.

R. B. HAYES.

By the President, WM. M. EVARTS, Secretary of State.

BILLS THAT FAILED TO PASS, AND IMPORTANT MEASURES THAT HAVE BECOME LAWS.

WASHINGTON, March [illegible].—Among the measures which made more or less progress, but failed of enactment, this session, are the following:

The Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill.

The Army Appropriation bill.

The bill to regulate Inter-State commerce.

The "Steamboat" bill.

The Geneva Award bill.

The bill to establish postal savings banks.

The bill to repeal the specie resumption act.

The bill granting pensions to survivors of the Mexican war.

The "Sugar" bill.

The bill to restrict Chinese immigration.

The joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to prohibit the payment of disloyal claims.

The bill to provide for the enforcement of the Eight-Hour law.

The proposition to transfer the Indian Bureau to the War Department.

The Mississippi Levee bill, and the bill providing for a commission on the improvement of the Mississippi.

The bill extending the time for the completion of the Northern Pacific Railroad.

The Brazilian Mail Service bill.

The bill to regulate the transportation of animals by railroads.

The bill to devote the proceeds of sales of the public lands to educational purposes.

The bill authorizing railroad companies to construct and maintain lines of telegraph for commercial purposes.

The Burnside Committee's Army Reorganization bill.

The bill to revise the Patent laws.

The Japanese and Chinese Indemnity Fund bills.

The various measures reported from the House Committee on Banking and Currency, and many other financial bills, both in the House and Senate.

All bills, besides those specified above, proposing aid in lands or bonds for the construction of railroads, canals, &c.

A large number of bills on the calendars affecting local interests, of more or less importance, and several hundred reported from committees for the relief of private claimants, besides thousands of others which were left untouched on the files of the Committee rooms.

The total number of bills and joint resolutions introduced in the House of Representatives during the Congress which has just expired is 6,826, and for the Senate is 1,9[illegible].

The principal measures which have become laws during the last session in addition to ten of the regular annual appropriation bills, are:

The bill reducing the tax on tobacco and otherwise amending the Internal Revenue laws.

The Census bill.

The bill to aid the refunding of the national debt by authorizing the issue of small treasury certificates.

The bill to prevent the introduction of infectious or contagious diseases, and bills providing for the payment of arrears of pensions for service during the war of the rebellion.

All the annual appropriation bills except the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial bill and the Army bill were signed by the President, and have become laws, together with the bill making the requisite appropriation to pay arrears of pensions. The last named measure reached the President a little before 12 o'clock, and was promptly approved. It is understood that a message vetoing the River and Harbor Appropriation bill was prepared, but under the influence of great pressure the Executive signature was finally affixed to the bill.

PERTH AMBOY LOOKING UP.

The British iron steamship Derwentwater arrived at Perth Amboy on Monday, having lain off Sandy Hook since Saturday last, flying a pilot flag. Several pilots refused to take the vessel to Perth Amboy, on the ground that vessels of such heavy draught could not find sufficient channel water. Captain Robertson persisted in obeying his charter and invoice, and he steamed into Perth Amboy with his pilot signal still flying. Collector Houghton said that the pilots refused to handle the vessel, in the hope of forcing the captain to change its destination to New York, and he thinks that the attention of the Pilot Commissioners will be called to the matter.

The Derwentwater is a new vessel, and came from Bona, Algiers, with a cargo of 1,400 tons of Mediterranean iron ore. The cargo was consigned to Bowring & Archibald, for use at the Bethlehem, Penna., Iron Works; and it is the first vessel of a fleet of steamers which will bring ore and other products from the Mediterranean and Spanish ports to Perth Amboy. The steamers will return with grain and provisions. Collector Houghton states that there is sufficient water at Perth Amboy to float vessels drawing 22 feet, and that the Derwentwater only draws 18 feet. The ore, he claims, can be loaded on cars more cheaply and shipped more direct from Perth Amboy to the Bethlehem works than from New York.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The Republican Primary for the selection of Township officers to be supported at the approaching Spring election in North Plainfield, occurs at Hughes' Hotel to-day (Friday) at 3 p. m., and there seems to be many aspirants for office, for be it known, inasmuch as the Democrats are enjoying a Rip Van Winkle sleep, there is to be no opposition ticket in the field, that is, unless the Democratic party of that Township should awake before the morning of March 11th.

Mr. Elisha Van Norstrand, Overseer of the Poor of North Plainfield Township, exhibits a good report for the past year. He has expended but $1,275. of the 1,600 voted him for support of poor, while in every case the wants of the deserving have been relieved. North Plainfield is to be congratulated upon having so efficient an officer, though he be a Republican.

The annual School meeting of Dist. 38, North Plainfield, will be held at the School House, Tuesday evening, March 18th, at 7:30 o'clock, at which meeting will be submitted the question of voting a tax to maintain a free Public School the coming year. All legal voters are requested to attend.

J. E. TURRILL, D. C.
JAS. K. ARNOLD,
JOHN H. VANWINKLE, } Trus.

A sad domestic trouble is now the talk of North Plainfield. Edward Keller, a young man, son of worthy and respected parents, attempted suicide on Sunday morning last by shooting himself in the mouth with a pistol. Young Keller had threatened to put an end to his existence several times within the past week, and even told intimate friends the night previous to the attempt upon his life, that he would make way with himself, but nothing more than wild talk was thought of the circumstance. However, upon his retirement at his father's house, the night in question, after undressing himself, he lay down upon his bed, placed a small pistol between his teeth and pulled the trigger. Members of the family hearing the report of the pistol alarmed a neighbor, Mr. Wm. Addis, who proceeded to the house and found the young man lying under the bed clothes with a stream of blood flowing from his mouth. Dr. Tomlinson was summoned, who afterward called into requisition the services of Dr. Fithian and Long, the first named of whom dressed the wound and removed a portion of the jaw bone, which was shot away, the shot intended to end the would-be suicide's life having failed to reach a vital spot. At last accounts there are hopes of young Keller's recovery. Why he should have attempted the rash deed is a family matter, and we do not desire to make it public. The lesson now learned by him will be long remembered, and we hope, the act not repeated.

The people of North Plainfield are thoroughly awakened to the matter of the attempt of Green, the claimant of the driven well system, to extract from them a royalty on wells put down during the past few years under that system. Last Friday evening a meeting of citizens was held in the parlors of Warren Engine Co. No. 3, to form an association for the purpose of resisting by law the collection of these royalties. Theo. F. French was made Chairman and Mr. Huffman Secretary of same, C. E. Dunham, Treasurer. Remarks were made by Dr. Gale, of Westfield, where the same system of prosecution is being carried on, and it was resolved that a Committee of five gentlemen, as follows; Isaac Brokaw, T. F. French, W. E. Gardner, C. E. Dunham and C. E. Austin be appointed on permanent organization to confer with parties interested in other localities. It was further resolved "That an assessment of one dollar per well be made upon each member of the Association." Petitions are now being circulated for names of parties interested, who shall assist in resisting the extortionate demand made upon them by said Green.

We are glad to learn that residents of North Plainfield have given the proper notice to Council against the pollution of the waters of Green Brook. It is time the matter was looked into, and the nuisance abated. We believe the Board of Health called upon the public a few weeks since to give them information regarding matters liable to affect the health of the city. Here is a chance to begin the work promised.

The residences of Mr. John Thickstun and Mr. Barnes, Nos. 30 and 32 Duer Street, were entered by thieves last Sunday evening, while the family were at church, and a quantity of jewelry, money and other valuables taken from the latter domicile. Entrance was effected in each case by forcing open the cellar windows. In the house of Mr. Thickstun, it is surmised the thieves must have been frightened away before they could accomplish their object, as foot tracks were to be seen among ashes in the cellar, but nothing taken from the building.

The Republican electors of the Township of North Plainfield are requested to meet in Convention at Hughes' Hotel, on Somerset Street, on Friday, March 7th, at 3 o'clock, P. M., for the purpose of nominating Township Officers, to be voted for at the Township Election, to be held on Tuesday, March 11th, 1879, and to transact such other business as may come up for consideration.

For the last three months a bird, supposed to be a swallow, has been transfixed upon one of the lightning rods of St. Mary's Catholic Church, at Bordentown. It is thought it struck the point of the rod in an effort to descend the chimney.

The last dying act of a Republican majority in the United States Senate was a vote in defiance of [illegible] The ruling passion strong in death.

ASSEMBLY NO. 180.

The following bill has been presented by Mr. Stilsing:

An act to enable cities to dispose of lands held by them in their corporate name.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall and may be lawful for any city or municipality within this state, holding lands in its corporate name, either for corporate purposes or otherwise, to sell and dispose of the same at public sale, when in the opinion and judgment of the board or boards having control of the lands and property of such city, the use and occupation thereof may be dispensed with; provided, however, that before such corporation or municipality shall be at liberty to dispose of the same, it shall be necessary for the board or boards controlling said lands to pass a resolution in open meeting, resolving that it is for the benefit of such city or municipality that such lands should be sold, and which said resolution shall be approved by the mayor of such city or municipality.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

THE DEATH-RATE OF

Our country is getting to be fearfully alarming, the average of life being lessened every year, without any reasonable cause, death resulting generally from the most insignificant origin. At this season of the year especially, a cold is such a common thing that in the hurry of every day life we are apt to overlook the dangers attending it and often find too late that a fever or lung trouble has already set in. Thousands lose their lives in this way every winter, while had Boschee's German Syrup been taken, a cure would have resulted, and a large bill from a Doctor been avoided. For all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, Boschee's German Syrup has proven itself to be the greatest discovery of its kind in medicine. Every Druggist in this country will tell you of its wonderful effect. Over 950,000 bottles sold last year without a single failure known.

For sale at Voorhees' drug store, Front-st.

CLEANLINESS.

The public are blissfully ignorant of the filthiness in the preparation of many so-called remedies. Workers in laboratories should be thoroughly taught that cleanliness is a valuable essential. This lesson has been well learned by Peter Moller in his preparation of Cod Liver Oil. It is a pure and palatable article, suiting the most fastidious, and has taken the medal as such at every World's Fair.

A letter just received from Clarkson B. Hope and C. Johnson from Glenmore, Geo., the new Jersey colony station, gives glowing accounts of the climate there. The new public hall in Van Deventer's building, Front Street, will be a cosy room when completed, and should fill a vacancy long felt in Plainfield—i. e. a first-class hall for first class troupes. Let the troupe who dedicates the Hall be of that class, to secure afterward a respectable audience to performances given in it.

John Burke has purchased the right to use Harris' patent apparatus for removing night soil and cesspool matter. A trial was made of same from a cesspool on City Hotel property on Tuesday, which proved satisfactory. The apparatus is so constructed as to allow its use in the day time, no smell being perceptible. It will prove of inestimable value in this city where there is no sewerage.

One of our citizens, Mr. P. Muldoon, purchased a horse at an auction of the personal property of Mr. Hensey, late freight agent at Fanwood station, a few weeks since. This week, parties from Monmouth Co. put in a claim of $16 50 for a chattel mortgage against the animal. Mr. M. is provoked because he has to pay the same, and he has a right to be so. We sympathize with him in his difficulty.

Sickness of the Junior member of this firm, a rush of Job Work, non-payment of bills due us by delinquents, adjournment of Congress, &c., must be our excuse for any lack of local matters in our columns this week. Our devil thinks we ought to start a daily. We have it under consideration—that is if we don't become a boarder in that brick building at Morristown before the other end of the firm gets well.

Advantage was taken of the mild weather of Wednesday last, to clear a portion of Front Street of its coating of filth, (which material is of value for fertilizing purposes) by a gang of men under the supervision of the ex-Street Commissioner. Berry & Thorn are making decided improvements in the interior of their store building on Front Street. When completed we shall "write her up"—that is, if the senior member of the firm will allow us to. Our police force is inadequate to perform their duty in that respect. Prices low.

The election for two members of the Board of Fire Commissioners occurs April 8th. The members of the late No. 2 Company will have a vote on the occasion, so will the rest of the people. The retiring members are Messrs. Jacob Adams and Wallace Vail, neither of whom desires a re-nomination. They've had enough of the arduous duties devolving upon them in their official capacity. Let some of those citizens who think there is honor in holding such a position, try it.

Mayor Harper has sent a communication to the Central R. R. authorities, petitioning them to furnish a fast train between Plainfield and New York. Petitions signed by over 700 persons and endorsed by members of Council, have also been forwarded from this city to same authorities, praying for the granting of said fast train. Let us hope the petitions may be answered in the right spirit and effect. We need the train and ought to have it. Let our commuter residents settle on a definite time for the said fast train to leave Plainfield and New York, and we believe it will have a beneficial effect in procuring the asked for boon.

We tender an apology to President Potts of the Council for our allusion last week to the non appointing of Councilman Stover on the Committee to go to Trenton in the interest of Senate bill No. 187, as being unparliamentary. We are informed by Councilman Stover that sickness in that gentleman's family would have prevented him serving on the Committee, and it was tacitly so understood between himself and Pres. Potts.

Pedestrianism.

Holske, the pedestrian, gave an exhibition of his walking powers in Laing's Hall Saturday evening last, to a slim audience. He started out to walk 25 miles in 4 hours; he accomplished the feat in 4 hours and 11 minutes. On Monday he attempted the feat of walking 50 miles in a certain number of hours, but was compelled to desist from further walking in consequence of a swollen ankle, after tramping a few miles.

Off for Europe.

Mr. John Hendrin, one of Dunellen's popular citizens, departed on the steamer "Brittanic," of the White Star line, on Saturday last, on a business tour. He will return about May 1st. Previous to his departure the event was celebrated by a dinner given by one of his Dunellen neighbors. Mr. H. has the well wishes of his many friends for a prosperous voyage and a safe return to his beautiful home in Dunellen.

Robbery.

The granary of Mr. Edward S. Brokaw at New Market, was broken open on Wednesday night of last week, and robbed of a set of single harness, 15 bushels of rye, 12 bushels of corn, and about one dozen bags to put the plunder in, also 7 fowls. The door of the granary was not locked and the thieves must have taken their time to fill the sacks from a bin, as but little of the grain was spilled on the floor. The thieves also tried to rob a neighbor, Mr. Vanceren, but were frightened away by a watch dog, after filling one bag with corn.

Good for Fanwood.

The financial exhibit of the new Township of Fanwood for the first year is a good one. Joseph A. Patterson, Esq., Treasurer of the Town Committee, in the annual statement of the finances of the Township states the financial affairs of the Township during the past year have been carried on exclusively from moneys collected on Taxes for the years 1875-6-7. There are still due for those years $976 39 and the moneys due the Township for 1878 are yet to be received. There is a balance in the Treasury of $265 30. Well done for good Democratic Fanwood.

Arabian Nights.

Plainfield had an opportunity last Thursday evening, Feb. 27th, to view some of the characters from that book of wonders the "Arabian Nights." Members of the Y. P. A., connected with the Crescent Ave. Church, acted the part in the various tableaux. The most gorgeous costumes and beautiful jewelry caused the prosaical looking platform at Assembly Hall, to assume an almost Oriental look. Between the tableaux, members of the Church Choir sang selections from "Pinafore" and other equally religious songs. Mr. J. Hervey Ackerman read the extracts necessary to understand the scenes.

A Coming Treat.

It is seldom that our citizens have the chance of witnessing a performance by a first-class troupe in Plainfield, in consequence of inadequate hall room. The celebrated Minstrel Troupe, known as Duprez & Benedict's, on their return from their annual Southern trip, however, will give one of their inimitable performances in Laing's Hall, next Wednesday evening, as advertisement in this issue, and posters announce. The Press throughout the country speak in the highest terms of this troupe, and we advise all who wish to witness a good performance to go to Laing's Hall on the 12th inst. Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels are considered the ne plus ultra of all traveling troupes of the kind.

The Vocal Society Concert.

Improvement is supposed to be one of the characteristics of the nineteenth century, and we are proud to say that hitherto the "Vocal Society" has lived up to that characteristic in its fullest sense. But the concert on Tuesday evening, March 4th, 1879, was the first and we hope the last exception to the rule. Without any improvement and still without any positive retrograde, this Society presented to a somewhat disappointed audience a programme rich in the variety of its selections. With such an opportunity for a complete and entire victory, the disappointment is felt all the more keenly. But we think the Society labored under evident difficulties; as an example, we would mention the number of vacant chairs. Probably the acquisition of several new female voices might have impeded progress to a certain extent. But all the brighter and better in comparison with their somewhat less favored companions were the selections, "Night Winds," by Calkin, and "Humpty-Dumpty," by Caldicott. We doubt whether these two selections could have been improved upon, so thoroughly and entirely satisfactory were they rendered. The Solo and Chorus by Mr. E. J. Fitzhugh was an acceptable offering, but we will not affirm that its charm lay outside the composer. Mrs. E. J. Fitzhugh conscientiously performed her part and was kindly received. This lady has a voice of no remarkable power, but of considerable sweetness in its middle tones. The singing of Miss Emma Wilkinson, Contralto, was really the redeeming feature of the evening, and was all the more acceptable because the lady comes here not for the first time. We were very much pleased with her singing last winter, but doubly pleased with her efforts on this occasion. A skillfully handled voice, a pleasant manner and evident appreciation of her position constituted the elements of her success. Together with Mr. Howland, a duet, which by way of variety is termed "Trust her not," was sung in such a way that an encore was positively demanded. We have again to notice the peculiar penchant of this Society for that song of Longfellow's.

Piscataway Township.

The Republicans of Piscataway Township held their Primary to choose Township Officers, in the Wheelwright Shop at New Market on Monday afternoon last. A large number of voters was present. The Report of the Township Clerk, which was presented, is a voluminous document, and gives a full statement of the affairs of the township. I. D. Titsworth acted as Chairman and James C. Pope as Secretary.

The Democrats hold their Primary to-day (Friday) at New Market.

Enforce the Ordinances.

Complaints have been given us by residents of Seventh Street and the vicinity of LaGrand and Franklin Avenues, of the violation of a city ordinance by velocipede riding. Young lads who delight in this sort of amusement do not attempt to turn out for pedestrians who may happen to be walking on the sidewalk on which the velocipede riders are enjoying themselves, and the consequence is danger to those who are so unfortunate as to be in their way. In one or two cases the dresses of ladies have been torn by coming in contact with the wheels of these flying machines, which are a nuisance on frequented thoroughfares. If we mistake not there is an ordinance bearing upon the subject, and we respectfully suggest to His Honor, the Mayor, that its provisions be enforced.

The "Mansion House."

Under the above name, the hotel building, now known as the "City Hotel," in this city, was successfully carried on during the years 1865-6-7 by Mr. Edward P. Thorn, who now proposes to again assume proprietorship of the same. He has leased the building of its present owner, Wm. Moore, Esq., for a term of years, and has re let the house or boarding department, to Young & Co., who have been so successful the past year with "Young's Cottages" on Fifth St. The latter will have full charge of the Hotel portion of the building, while Mr. Thorn will assume charge of the Bar and Billiard Departments of the same. Decided and necessary improvements will be made to the interior of the Hotel. The bar will be located in its old quarters, facing on Cherry Street, (Park Ave.) The name of the Hotel will hereafter be known as the "Mansion House," the change of name from "City Hotel" being made out of respect to the memory of Mr. Thorn's father, who caused to be erected the building, and named it as above. We know of no reason why the "Mansion House" should not be hereafter recognized as the leading hotel of this section, as both Messrs. Young & Co. and Thorn have had long and successful experience in the business. It is proposed to make this the Family Hotel of the city. Success to the new venture.

Capture of a Gang of Thieves.

For several months past there has been a series of thefts and robberies committed in Westfield and Cranford townships, and the authorities have been on the alert for the participants in the same, and as the following, from the Elizabeth Herald of Saturday last, evidences, have succeeded: At last the gang has been broken up by the well directed efforts of Chief Keron, assisted by constable John M. C. Marsh, of Westfield. Three of the perpetrators have been already arrested, and a clue to the others has been obtained.

On the night of January 10th, a part of the gang visited Union and stole from the stable of Mr. John Teas, two sets of double harness, and two sets of single harness.—They also entered the barn of Mr. Westlake, another farmer in the township, and carried off four sets of carriage cushions. In going from Westlake's they met on the turnpike a negro named William Sayles. Getting out of their wagon they knocked him down and took from him a jack-knife, a bottle of whiskey and a pair of gloves. After committing this highway robbery they went to Mr. Benedict's, a milkman, living in the neighborhood and stole from his stables a calf.

Shortly after these robberies Chief Keron and constable Marsh began an investigation. Their suspicions rested on certain parties in Cranford township, known to be "crooked," and one of them concluded to keep a careful watch and also on the movements of their associates. In Cranford township there is a small farm owned by Mr. Minge, of this city, and conducted by his son Adolph and a hired man named John Reef. The Chief and his associate in driving past the house on this farm, noticed a number of chickens in the garret. Their suspicions were aroused, and on January 31st they obtained a warrant, and searched the house.

Young Minge said he was perfectly willing that the house should be thoroughly searched. In the garret the Chief found behind a board two wagon-seat cushions, which were identified by Mr. Westlake.—Both Minge and Reef protested that they were not implicated in the robberies at all, and cannot explain how the cushions came in the garret. In a closet a dressed chicken was found, and lying on the cellar stairs a dead rooster, with the feathers still on. A dead duck was also found in an unoccupied closet, lying on a shelf, and behind a thick veil of cobwebs.

Minge and Reef were arrested and brought to Headquarters in this city. On the following morning they were arraigned before Justice Osborne and bailed for trial, the elder Minge becoming bondsman for them.

The others did not appear to be at all disheartened by the arrest of Minge and Reef, but on the same night made a raid on Roselle, effecting an entrance to a large number of residences by slipping a chisel in between the sash-rails of the window and snapping off the catch. At Dr. H. C. Pierson's they got two black slouch hats; at E. F. Garthwaite's, one dozen and a half silver spoons; at Robert Thompson's some cold victuals; and at Mr. Atkin's a silver spoon dish and five spoons. The dish and three of the spoons they dropped in the yard, and were found on the following morning. They raised the windows in the houses of Elias W. Crane, Edward Miller and Justice Noah Woodruff, Jr., but were frightened off by dogs or by awakening the inmates. In the yard of one of these Roselle residences the jack-knife stolen from William Sayles, the negro, on the night of January 10th, was found, an evidence that the same parties were perpetrators of both crimes.

On the next night, Saturday, February 1st, they robbed the house of Mr. William Brant, at Union. Mr. Brant is eighty-two years old. He has considerable means, and has for a long time acted as sort of a banker for the farmers in the neighborhood, and on the night of the robbery had notes and papers in his possession representing about [illegible],000. He had no safe, but kept these papers and other valuables in a desk in his room. He occupies one room in the house, and his hired man and wife live in the kitchen part. From Mr. Brant's room there is a door opening into the kitchen, on which there is no lock, and was fastened nights by the hired man, by slipping a nail over the latch. There is a door opening from the kitchen into the road. In the kitchen, on a bed made on the floor, a twelve-year-old brother of the hired man's wife was sleeping when the robbery was committed. Henry Smith, one of the gang who was arrested on Tuesday by Chief Keron, says that one of them went to the kitchen window, struck a match, and looked in. Seeing the child lying on the floor he called to his companions, saying, "See here, is this a boy or a girl?" One of them replied, "Never mind which, we can soon put it out of the way." He also admits that if Mr. Brant had been awakened they would probably have killed him. They raised the kitchen window through which one entered and opened the door for the others. Removing the nail they entered Mr. Brant's room, and carried out the desk which stood near the door leading into the kitchen.—[illegible] worked so noiselessly that neither Mr. Brant nor the boy were awakened. They carried the desk down the road a piece, broke it open, and went off with the contents—a silver watch, one brown coat, two black slouch hats, one pocket-knife, $30 in silver, twenty-five pennies, and a box containing the notes and papers mentioned above.

The other robberies were all committed previous to February 1st. Fifty-five chickens were stolen from Roselle one night, the thieves making two trips for the lot. In Westfield, at Mr. Eustice's, they stole a calf; at Mr. Townley's some chickens; at Lowe's, Alway's and Rindenberger's stockings and other articles from the clothes lines. In Cranford they robbed the beehives at Messrs. Curtis' and Ludlow's.—Large pieces of honey-comb were found in the water-closet on the Minge farm. They paid a visit to Warren Randolph's place near the Cranford depot, and bagged a pig, a duck and a rooster. "That was a hot night," said Smith, yesterday; "we put all three in the same bag; the pig 'squealed,' the duck 'quacked' and the old rooster 'crowed;' the noise almost gave us away, and I tell you we got out of that neighborhood in a hurry."

While the congregation were at worship in the Farm's Church in Union township one Sunday evening, the thieves stole the whips, blankets, and a water proof out of the carriages.

At Lyons Farms carriage seat cushions were stolen from three different places, the carriages standing in front of the churches in Westfield were robbed of whips, etc., and twice Justice Chandler's mills, at Cranford, were forcibly entered, and robbed of a quantity of tools.

Smith, whose arrest is mentioned above, was suspected of implication in these robberies since the arrest of Minge and Reef, but was not arrested until Tuesday. He lived in Cranford township, and in his possession was found the harness stolen from Mr. Teas, and the old coat taken from Mr. Brant's house which he had cut up into carpet rags. He was brought to this city, and lodged in cell No. 3, in the women's department at Police Headquarters.

Yesterday Mr. Brant and several others made complaint against him before Justice Osborn, and this morning he was fully committed to the County Jail. He gave his age as thirty four, and said he was born in Roseville, Middlesex county. He has resided in this city.

Last night, John Reef was re arrested at the Minge farm by constable Marsh, and this morning was surrendered by his bondsman, Mr. Minge. He was committed to the County Jail.

Mr. Depew presented the following com'n from His Honor, Mayor Harper:

To the Common Council:

Gentlemen:

It is a clearly defined and well established principle of government in this country, extending up from Municipalities, through State organizations, to the President, Congress and Supreme Court of the United States, that there shall exist three co-ordinate branches, namely—the Executive, Legislative and Judicial, and that no one thereof shall be permitted to interfere with or in any manner encroach upon the reserved rights and privileges of either of the others.

It appears that the Common Council, December 3rd, 1877, passed an Ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to regulate the appointment and tenure of office of appointable officers," the second section of which reads as follows:

"If any nomination and appointment by the Mayor for any city officer shall, upon vote thereon of the Common Council, be not confirmed, or in case any vacancy in any city office shall occur at any time, it shall be the duty of the Mayor to nominate to the Common Council [illegible]"

The Mayor derives his vested rights from the same sovereign act of the Legislature that created the Common Council and the City Judgeship. It is the duty of the Mayor to nominate to the Common Council whoever he deems best qualified to fill certain offices, and it is incumbent upon the Council to confirm or reject such nominations, wholly or in part, as that body may think proper. The Common Council in adopting the Ordinance above recited, arrogated to itself powers not delegated by the Charter, and possessed no more the right to dictate to the Mayor who he shall not nominate, or at what meetings he shall continue to send in nominations, than it had to frame and ordain decisions for the City Judge.

I respectfully submit for your deliberate consideration, that the Ordinance in question, so far as it assumes dictatorial authority over the Mayor, being antagonistic to the City Charter, is void of legal effect and should be amended or repealed.

Dated March 3, 1879.

On motion, report accepted and placed on file.

By the same—As not correct, the several claims for services as judges, inspectors and clerks of late money election, of $9 each. On motion, report received and the claims referred back to the parties for correction.

Mr. Finch stated that some action should be taken as regards the streets; they are in a bad condition, and need repairing very much. He stated that he had spoken to the St. Com'r relative to the matter, and that gentleman stated that nothing could be done unless the money could be had to make the repairs with. Mr. F. thought some action should be taken in the matter.

Mr. Depew offered the following:

Whereas, The Street Committee report numerous complaints of the dangerous conditions of many of our streets, therefore, Resolved, That the sum of $100 be and it is hereby appropriated for the necessary repairs to the streets, under the supervision of the Street Committee.

On motion, adopted, all aye.

Mr. Simpson, from Aud. Com., not being ready to report on the call of his Com., the Pres. declared a recess for a few moments.

After the expiration of ten minutes, Mr. Simpson reported the following claims as correct: Chas. F. Stillman, $62 50; S. R. Hope, $6 50; Plainfield Gas Co., $220 10; John Linbarger, $3; J. N. Jenkins, $5; Chamberlain & DeCamp, $10; J. R. Dunham, $3; M. M. Thorn, $15, and the police claims presented this evening. On motion, report received and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts. All aye.

Mr. Simpson presented the following:

To the Honorable Mayor and Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J.

Your petitioners, feeling themselves aggrieved and oppressed, do present to your body our claims, and demand relief. That, Whereas, the city, by its official authority did, in the year 1873, cause to be made an assessment against us and others for the putting of the New-street sewer; whereupon bills were presented to us bearing the forms of law, we paid said assessment. Others contested said assessment before the courts, which assessment was set aside as illegal. Again, in 1875, another assessment was made, and bills presented against many of us that had already paid the former assessment, with threats of prosecution if not paid by a specified time. Many of us, fearing the law by prosecution, paid the same; while others were sued, and this assessment was tested and set aside as illegal also. The moneys collected on said assessment, so far as they would go, was applied on the sewer debt, the balance having been paid out of the city property, or general fund of the city, of which we have been taxed and are to be taxed to maintain. Therefore that while the city has thus taken our money illegally for said object, others more able refused, and have paid no assessment; we feel that we have been unjustly dealt with, and turn to you for relief first, rather than apply to the courts for redress. Most of us are of the common people, and among us widows that have paid the two assessments, and are ill able to stand such a loss.

We refer you to Session laws of 1871, Chapter 13, relating to re-imbursing illegal assessments, and demand relief as therein set forth.

Most respectfully submitted by your petitioners this 3d day of March, 1879.

NAMES—[illegible]

On motion, referred to Law & Ord. Com.

Mr. Stover presented an ord. relative to the amount to be raised by tax for the use of the Poor of the city for the present year, $10,000. On motion, referred to Ord. Com.

Mr. Finch offered the following:

Resolved, That the Street Commissioner be hereby directed to cause to be removed all obstructions in the streets that are contrary to the law, and to see that all sidewalks are kept free from snow and ice.

On motion, adopted.

Mr. Depew offered the the following:

Whereas, A report has been presented by the Committee on Salaries, Offices & Elections, recommending certain salaries be paid to the persons occupying the offices named therein, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the salaries named for the respective offices and positions, be and are hereby confirmed for the year 1879.

On motion, adopted.

Mr. Stover called from the table the amendment to the License ord. relative to the opening and closing of saloons, for its 2d reading. Read 2d time.

Mr. Lithgow moved that the ord. be ordered to a 3d Reading and engrossed. So ordered. All aye.

Mr. Stover moved that when Council adjourn it adjourn to meet on Monday evening, March 17, 1879, at 7½ o'clock. Carried.

On motion, Council then adjourned.

Complimentary Dinner.

Saturday afternoon last a grand complimentary dinner was given at the American House, Trenton, in honor of our respected fellow townsman, Col. Wm. H. Sterling, aide-de-camp to the Governor. The following named gentlemen were present: Col. W. H. Sterling, Col. E. H. Wright, Gen. R. F. Stockton, Gen. W. J. Sewell, Hon. B. F. Lee, Hon. H. S. Little, Hon. S. B. Jackson, Hon. G. S. Duryea, Hon. B. A. Vail, Maj. E. J. Anderson, Hon. G. C. Ludlow, and Secretary John A. Hall.

The occasion being a strictly private one of course only those invited were present. The table was one of the finest every spread in Trenton. A feature of the same was a bed of rare exotics in the centre of the board, which were an expensive luxury—we should judge. The menu was written on beautifully designed cards, each one bearing on its face a caricature of the occupation and position of the guest at whose plate it was lain. The following is the menu of the occasion:

Oysters, on Shell.
Soup, a la Reine.
FISH—Salmon. Shrimp Sauce.
Patties, Imperiale.
Fillet of Beef, Mushroom Sauce.
Potato Croquettes.
Asparagus.
Boned Capon. Truffle Sauce.
French Peas.
Roman Punch.
Terrapin.
Canvass Back Duck.
Tomato Salad.
Ices.
Fruits.
Strawberries.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Republicans will hold their Primary for the nomination of Township officers, this (Friday) evening.

The Democrats have issued a call for a Primary meeting to be held on Monday evening next to nominate Township officers. The present efficient Clerk, Chas. R. Clark, Collector Isaac F. Scudder and Freeholder Irving will undoubtedly be, as they should be, re-nominated. The election occurs Tuesday, March 11th.

The annual statement of the Town Clerk, for the past year, of Township receipts and expenses, shows a good exhibit under the present management.

The annual election for officers of Westfield H. & L. Co. No. 1, occurs next Monday evening.

John Eustice was arrested last Friday, 28th, by Constable John M. C. Marsh, for assault and battery and attempt to rob a passenger who was on his way to the depot to take the 11:18 train at night for Plainfield, Feb. 22, and committed to jail at Elizabeth to await examination on Monday. At that time he was brought before Squire Godfrey who held him to bail to appear at the May term of Court, his father becoming his bondsman.

Freeholder Irving, of Westfield Township has made a most excellent official during his term of office. He should be returned by a handsome majority next Tuesday.

COMMUNICATED.

Plainfield, March 4th, 1879.

Messrs. Editors:

In your issue of last week we noticed a communication signed by Messrs. Steele & Laing, in which they assert that the artists under their employ, to assist in their entertainment on the afternoon and evening of Feb. 22nd, were bought off and made drunk by the managers of the colored troupe, to prevent their going on the stage, and make their entertainment a failure. This we deny. Not one of their so called artists received either money or drink from us. We think too much of our honor to be guilty of such a thing.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, that whenever any bonds heretofore legally issued by any incorporated city, town or township in this state under the authority of any act [illegible] and unpaid or shall hereafter become due, the board of aldermen or common council or township committee or board of finance and taxation of any such city, town or township may renew ninety-six and two thirds per centum of said indebtedness or any less part thereof, by the issuing of the bonds of said city, town or township for that purpose; which bonds shall be made payable at periods of time not exceeding thirty years from the date of issuing the same and shall draw such rate of interest not exceeding six per centum per annum, and be issued in such sums as the board of aldermen, common council, township committee or board of finance and taxation of any such city, town or township shall by ordinance or resolution determine; which bonds shall be of the denomination of not less than fifty dollars nor more than ten thousand dollars, and shall be executed under the corporate seal of said city, town or township and the signature of the mayor, comptroller, chairman of the township committee or other proper financial officer thereof, and shall have coupons attached for every half year's interest until due or may be registered, at the option of the holder, which coupons, if attached, shall be signed by the said mayor, comptroller, chairman or other proper financial officer and numbered to correspond with the bond to which they shall respectively be attached; and all the bonds issued under this act shall be numbered, and a register of such numbers, the date of issuing, and the time of payment shall be made by the said mayor, comptroller, chairman or other proper financial officer of said city, town or township in a book to be provided for that purpose; provided, that in order to redeem the bonds issued under the provisions of this act at maturity it shall be the duty of the board of aldermen, common council, township committee or board of finance and taxation of any such city, town or township to establish a sinking fund, which shall be created either by a special tax of not less than three per centum on the issue herein provided for, to be raised in the annual tax levy, or from collections of assessments for improvements in cases where the bonds hereby authorized to be reissued were originally issued to pay for street and sewer improvements in any such city, town or township, or both, at the option of the governing body thereof.

2. And be it enacted, That the interest on the bonds hereby authorized to be issued shall be raised and paid by a special tax annually levied and collected as other city, town and township taxes are now or may be hereafter levied and collected, and the whole of each year's interest shall be so raised, levied, collected and paid within each year; and the board of aldermen, common council or township committee or board of finance and taxation of any said city, town or township may dispose of said bonds at either public or private sale for the best price that can be obtained for the same, but not at a less price than par value; and said bonds and all moneys derived from the sale thereof shall be inviolably applied and used for the payment of the said maturing bonds.

"1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in any city of this state, which according to the last state census of this state, contained a population of over one hundred and twenty thousand, or any city which may hereafter acquire such population, it shall be the duty of the mayor and common council, or other municipal board corresponding thereto, and such mayor and common council, or municipal board of every such city are hereby directed, by resolution, to divide such city into wards, corresponding in number and boundaries to the assembly districts or parts of assembly districts within the limits of such city.

Smalley's Defiance Asparagus.
NEW VARIETY.
The merits and claims of the "Defiance," are as follows: It is earlier, a larger grass, softer, more tender, free from wood, the flavor sweet and very delicate, far superior to all other varieties; It will produce double that of the "Colossal" and can cut it longer. It will continue to grow longer than any other sorts. It has been tested for the past three years. I know my roots and seeds to be strictly pure, as I am the sole originator of it; shall not put any seed in the market this year, as I intend planting it myself. It is the best Asparagus grown, either for private use or for market. We would recommend it in preference to all others. Price $5 per 100, and $25 per 1000. No charge for boxes or packing. Purchasers pay their express. Orders must be accompanied by a remittance, or satisfactory reference. Will be sent by express C. O. D.
ABRAHAM SMALLEY, Bound Brook, N. J.
We, the undersigned, have tested the above variety of Asparagus, and unhesitatingly recommend it as all that is claimed for it. In fact it is a marvel in the shape of this delicious vegetable:

CAUTION!
The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.
"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

POETRY.

LOVE AND TIME.

Long years ago, Old Time, 'tis said,
While plodding his weary way,
Chanced on a stream which swiftly sped,
And to cross it did vain essay.
"Help!" cried he. "Consider my years!
Will none of you aid me? Alas,
Good friends, I entreat you with tears,
Hither, and help Old Time to pass."

None heeded his cry, till waited where
Some damsels in idleness rove
On farther side. To bring him there,
Speed they a skiff propelled by love,
Others, more staid, where this to check,
And warningly chanted this rhyme:
"Ah, many a life has made shipwreck
In seeking thus to pass Old Time!"

Young Love made gayly for the shore
Whereon the old wanderer wept;
Proudly turned to ferry him o'er,
Full strong though the dark current swept.
Plying his oars, radiant boy
Gayly sang and rossing this rhyme:
"See, see, dear girls, behold with joy,
How Young Love carries off Old Time!"

Vain boast! Soon spent, down droops his head
('Twas ever his way, I am told);
Old Time takes up the oars instead;
"Tired so soon, yet erewhile so bold?
Poor child, how feebly formed thou art!
Rest, then, now whilst I sing my rhyme—
An old refrain from broken heart—
'Love is carried away by Time!'"

A silv'ry sound of mirth above
Ripples downward over the tide;
One passing fair, in sylvan grove,
Doth Old Time and Young Love deride.
"Hold!" cried the age, with voice severe,
"Who laughs thus at Love and my rhyme?"
"True Friendship, who has naught to fear;
I yield not to Love nor to Time!"

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

MY VOYAGE WITH A WIDOW.

It was a cold night in January. People were hurrying along through the blinding snow storm, battling with the wind that howled and moaned out by turns its story of woe.

Hugh Remington and his friend Williams, glad to be out of the storm, had settled themselves in gown and slippers for a quiet evening at home. The shutters were closed, and the curtains drawn, and on either side of the hearth was placed the favorite chair of each. These friends had lived together in their bachelor quarters for more than two years. Everything in the apartment showed refined taste and wealth. Some said that it all belonged to Hugh, and that he made it a home for his friend. No one, however, knew this to be true. Hugh was quiet and reserved, seldom spoke of his affairs to any one, never laid any special claim to anything, but allowed it to appear that all things were equally shared. After the evening papers had been read and discussed the two sat talking of days gone by, of little episodes in their lives. Hugh was in a talking mood, and had told several good stories of his past life; stopping suddenly, he exclaimed:

"Did I ever tell you of my love for the widow?"

"No," replied Williams. "Let's have it."

"Well," said Hugh, taking another cigar and looking very serious as he leaned back in his great easy chair, "I met her in Paris."

"Met who?"

"Oh, never mind who. Be content that I am telling you the story, and don't ask for names. I thought of her as 'the widow.' It is a sufficient title."

"Well, I won't interrupt. Go on."

So Hugh continued:

"I was calling upon my old friend Mrs. Lee, and while waiting for the servant to take her my card, an odd piece of bric-a-brac standing in the corner of the room attracted my attention. I got up and went over to examine it. While thus engaged, the door opened. I turned, thinking that it was Mrs. Lee, when, oh! what a beauty met my sight!—so small that she looked liked a child, large deep blue eyes that came out from under a mass of golden curls, a small nose, and a rosebud of a mouth. She was dressed in deep mourning, and I thought as I looked at her, that I had never seen a more beautiful picture. She didn't see me until I made a slight movement, which startled her. Coming forward, I said:

"'I frightened you, did I not?'

"'Yes; I was not aware there was any one in the room. You are waiting for Mrs. Lee?' And she gave me the sweetest of smiles, showing a most perfect row of teeth.

"Before I could answer, Mrs. Lee appeared, and introduced us. Mrs. —— was making Mrs. Lee a short visit prior to her departure for America. I was glad of that, as I should then have the pleasure of seeing her again.

"The evening passed away only too quickly, and I arose with an apology for staying so late. Mrs. Lee invited me to dine with them informally the next day. She said her friend preferred being quiet, so they should be quite alone. You may be sure that I accepted the invitation, and was there promptly at the hour. The widow was more charming than on the previous evening. I longed to stop the hours from rolling on. Having been in the habit of dropping in at Mrs. Lee's at all hours, my frequent—almost daily—visits were not noticed as anything strange or unusual. Mrs. Lee thanked me for coming to them in their loneliness, and the widow would give me one of her sweet smiles, and I was thankful in my inmost heart that they were lonely, and that it fell to my lot to cheer them. So the weeks passed, until the time came for the departure of Mrs. Lee's friend.

"Now I had intended passing a month or two in England before coming home, but when I found that the widow was to return in ten days, I began to think that my duty called me back to my business. The more I thought of it, the more important it seemed to me to go.

"'Do you know of any one going on the 15th?' the widow asked me one evening, in her dove-like way.

"'No one but myself,' I answered.—'Business has called me sooner than I expected.'

"'How delightful!' from the widow; while Mrs. Lee exclaimed, 'Oh, Mr. Remington, I am so glad! I couldn't bear the idea of my friend going entirely alone, and you of all others will know best how to take care of her.'

"We then began to make our plans. Mrs. —— intended making a visit of a few days to some friends in London. I was going direct to Liverpool. Mrs. Lee and I drove down to see our friends off, and I looked forward to the pleasure of meeting her on board the steamer. My last days in Paris were spent in saying 'good-bye' to old friends, and buying presents for sister Nell and the children. I got every souvenir that I could find, and felt well pleased with my selection. At last I was on the steamer, and stood looking at the ship move away. By my side was the widow, and I thought that I had never seen her look so lovely. I exulted in the knowledge that she knew no one on board. I was her only friend, consequently I should have her all to myself, this was (so I said to myself) what I had for weeks been longing for. Was I in love? That question had not occurred to me, I felt depressingly happy, and thought the situation delightful. I was ready to do anything for this fair creature. She had only to command, I was all eagerness to obey. I had [illegible]

"The following morning I came out on deck very early, and was surprised to find my little lady already there. She looked very miserable and very pretty. The morning salutations over, I asked her how she had slept.

"'I haven't slept at all,' she said, in a fretful, childish way, which I thought charming. 'Such a noise all night,' she continued, 'I could not sleep; and the smells are simply dreadful. I'd rather sit up all night than sleep in that horrid place again. Don't you think Mr. Remington, if you asked the captain or somebody, he would give me another stateroom?' and her big eyes looked inquiringly into mine.

"'Certainly,' I said. 'I will go at once you shall change with me. Take my room, which is a good one, and as I don't mind either noise or smells, your room will suit me well enough.

Here Hugh leaned over his chair to knock the ashes off his cigar, and said to his friend: "I must have had it pretty bad—eh, Williams?—to have said that, for you know that I can't endure either a bad odor or a loud noise. But I forgot everything when under the influence of those eyes, and when she exclaimed, 'Oh, no, I couldn't let you do that,' I felt that my fate was sealed, and that I should take the noise and the smells.

"The next thing that I discovered was that my lady had no sea chair. There was only one left, and that had been spoken for; but I paid double the amount and the chair was mine.

"'You are so kind, Mr. Remington,' she said. 'I don't know what I should have done without you. I am not fit to travel alone,' she added, in childish tones.

"I longed to press her to my heart and tell her of my love; and if she would but let me, it would be the joy of my life to care for her. I looked all this; I am sure I did. But there were too many people around for me to speak. She sat with her hands folded in her lap, and looked divinely unconscious.

"The third day out the weather became bitterly cold.

"'I am almost frozen,' said Mrs. ——. 'What shall I do? I have nothing to wrap around me, and shall have to stay below, and, oh dear! it is so uncomfortable there!' The face turned up to mine was that of a spoiled child.

"Now I had a fine English rug, which I had used at night, for you know everything at sea is so horrible damp. It had been a great comfort to me, and I knew that I should miss it. But what of that? I couldn't see the woman I loved suffer. So I got it, and tucked her all up in it. Her delicious smile repaid me for the sacrifice.

"'Oh, how nice!' she said, as she put her hands under the warm rug. 'It seems to me, Mr. Remington, that you have everything to make one comfortable. I never heard of such a man. I am so glad that I came under your care.'

"I was so love-stricken that I did not reflect upon her apparent unconsciousness of the fact that I had deprived myself of these comforts in order that she should be made comfortable. She seemed to take it for granted that I was a sort of traveling missionary, with extra wraps, staterooms, chairs, and everything else that one might need; and I was such a slave to her fascinations that, had she asked me to do the impossible, I should have attempted it.

"Every day I had it upon my lips to tell her of my love. Each day courage forsook me. We walked the deck day after day. She would put her little soft hand on my arm in the most confiding way, look up from under her curls, laugh her low sweet laugh, and ask the most childish, innocent questions.

"We were walking this way on the sixth day out. I had carefully rehearsed my part, and was about to tell my story. Her conversation seemed to lead to it, for she said:

"'You will come to see me when you are in New York, won't you, Mr. Remington?'

"'Nothing,' I said, 'would give me greater pleasure.'

"'You will come often? Promise to dine at our house once a week. You won't forget me?' and the blue eyes sought mine.

"I looked into them, and my look told what my tongue had refused to say. I pressed the little hand close to my heart, and after a pause said, below my breath, 'Forget you!' and I was about to pour forth my love, when she gave a little scream, and cried, 'Oh, my veil!' There, sure enough, was the confounded blue thing sailing before the wind, and all the passengers, it seemed to me, after it. Of course, I had to go to, and make believe to capture it. I never hated anything so much as I did that yard of blue gauze. I couldn't go back and continue my story from where it was broken off, and indeed the widow seemed quite shy of me.

"The incident had given the passengers an opportunity to speak to her, and when I joined her (without the veil, for it had, I hoped, struck bottom) she was surrounded by a group of people. I had no chance that day, nor the next to get her to myself. I tried to think of something that I could do or show her that would amuse and detain her. It seemed as though I had exhausted all my resources, when at last a brilliant idea occurred to me: I would show her the presents I had bought for sister Nell. They were all in my little sea trunk, and I knew that she couldn't resist their attractions. She came up on deck, bright and beautiful as ever.

"'Isn't it delightful,' she said, 'to think that to-morrow we shall be at home? I can hardly wait for the time to come; and yet—' and her voice dropped into the dearly-loved soft tone—'the voyage has been a most charming one, owing to your kindness,' she added, brightly.

"I longed to launch forth my tale of love, but thinking it more prudent to wait until I had secured her wholly to myself, I asked her, in the most ordinary manner, if she would enjoy looking at some trinkets I had picked up in Paris. Her eyes sparkled.

"'Yes, indeed,' she said. 'Nothing could be more delightful than to get a glimpse of Paris while at sea.'

"I went below and got all my pretty souvenirs, and brought them up to her. Placing a chair in a quiet corner, and well hid from the other people, then drawing mine up beside her, I began showing, one by one, my collection of odd things.

"'Where did you get that, Mr. Remington? I hunted all over Paris, and found nothing half so pretty. What exquisite porte bonheurs?' and she slipped one after another of my carefully-chosen bracelets on her little plump wrists, and turned them first on one side and then on the other.

"'I knew Nell's taste, and had searched for something uncommon, and was well pleased with what I had bought. But Nell and everything were forgotten with this bewitching creature by my side, and when she made a move to take them off, I said laughingly, of course, 'Oh, don't disturb them; they look so well where they are, and it is so pleasant, you know, to get a glimpse of Paris while at sea.'

"She kept them on, and I opened the other boxes. [illegible] watched her with loving eyes, told her where each one came from, and helped fasten them on.

"'I feel like an Indian princess,' she said, 'and ought to have a throne and a crowd of courtiers, and the picture will be complete.'

"'Can't you imagine a throne? I said, and take me for kneeling courtiers? Wouldn't my love compensate for the admiring crowd?'

"She looked up quickly, and was about to answer, when one of those eternal old bores that, no matter when you cross, are always to be found on ship board, came up, and began telling of his early reminiscences; when the sea was twenty years ago—as though the sea had ever changed—and how, when he had first crossed, his friends never expected to see him again. He had made his will, and they parted as though he were to be forever lost to them. I assure you that I silently wished in my heart that he had never turned up again. Without saying a word, I got up, took my boxes, and left my Indian princess. I was thoroughly angry with the old fellow for interrupting our tete a tete, and seriously annoyed with Mrs. —— for listening to and answering him. I made up my mind that that game had been played long enough. I would ask her the simple question the first chance I got, and know my fate at once. But the chance did not come as soon as I expected it would.

"She went to her room with a sick headache, so she said, and I paced the deck alone. We were a long way up the harbor when she made her appearance the following day. She said that she had hurried with her packing, thinking that we were nearer than we really were to the city.

"'Oh, Mr. Remington, I had no opportunity of returning your jewelry, and so I packed them with my things. But you are coming, you know, to dine with me on Saturday, and I will then give them to you.'

"'Certainly,' I said. 'There is no time for us to change them now. Wear them until I see you again.'

"I had fully make up my mind that as I had been baffled so often, I would now wait until I had seen her in her own home before I opened my heart to her, or rather, before I asked her my fate. She already knew my heart. There was no time to talk; all was excitement; we were rapidly approaching; handkerchiefs were waving from the docks. The widow was straining her eyes, and suddenly leaving me and going further forward, I saw her throw a kiss. How I longed to catch it! I looked with jealous eyes to see who would take it up and answer it. Foremost among the crowd was a great big man—six feet, and broad in proportion. It was he who was returning her kisses. Could it be her brother, or was it a friend, and this merely a pleasant greeting from a distance?

"I watched him come on board, and what did the big idiot do but catch her up in his arms—my sweet one, whom though loving, I had never dared to touch—and kiss her over and over again! I could have knocked him down.

"On drawing near to them, I saw that neither of them noticed me. She had forgotten my existence. With a heart-sick feeling I turned away. Was this to be the end? Why had I come home? I could hear them talking, though too miserable to listen. They came nearer, and the same soft voice that I loved so dearly said: 'Mr. Remington. I have been talking about you, telling how good and kind you have been, and how utterly forlorn I should have been had you not always looked out for my comfort. I have come to thank you, and my husband wants to thank you too.'"

"Her husband! Great heavens! And I thought she was a widow, and made love to her! I listened as though in a dream, and a deuced unpleasant one it was, too. I believe he thanked me and she praised, and he thanked again, and then they urged me to come to see them, and she said: 'Don't forget Saturday.'

"Whether I said anything, or whether I remained mute, is more than I can tell. I was like a man asleep, and had to give myself a good shake to come out of the nightmare that I was in. When I looked around, she—they were gone."

Here Hugh stopped as though he had finished; but his friend Williams, whose curiosity was aroused, asked:

"Did you dine with her on Saturday?"

"No, I sent a regret."

"Have you ever seen her since?"

"No; never."

"What became of your souvenirs de Paris?"

"Nell went without them, as I went without my English robe."

"You don't mean that she never sent them to you?"

"I never gave her my address, and she was not supposed to know where I was."

Williams didn't like to ask any more questions, and Hugh remained quiet for a time. Then rousing himself and getting out of his chair, he said:

"I have never made love since, and"—with a bitter laugh—"I always avoid women in deep mourning. And now, as the fire has gone out with my story, I think we had better go to bed."

EDITOR BAGSHOT'S ASSISTANT.

BY E. R. TEN EYCK.

Colonel Bagshot runs a weekly newspaper called the Union up in Chodunk. Recently the Colonel was called away to New York on business, leaving the paper in the hands of an assistant, who had been in his employ some little time.

Now the Colonel knew that said assistant had the cheek of a brass statue, and the audacity of a New England fly, and after being in the city about a week, he began to grow uneasy and telegraphed to Chodunk:

"How's things?"

Back came the answer from the Union's whilom editor:

"Bully! circulation of the old thing's gone up a thousand. Been getting up a red-hot paper, and there's a gang outside weeping because they can't hoist the shingles off the roof and knock the whole concern to thunder. Stay away as long as you like."

Bagshot didn't waste a moment after receiving this encouraging dispatch.

He started home on the first train, and reached Chodunk before night.

The first man that struck him was the ticket agent.

"Look here, Colonel!" he cried, excitedly, "I've a darned good notion to punch your head, you brazen-faced old liar."

"Why?" asked Bagshot.

"Read that," and the ticket agent shoved a crumpled Union into his hand. There was a paragraph marked as follows:

"Railroad News.—The bandy-legged idiot who robs the railroad company at this village has purchased a new pocket knife. Kept knocking down from the cash drawer."

Bagshot bit his lip.

"Bah," said he, "that's a calumny and I'll see it righted in one week. It's my cursed assistant's work."

"I don't know whose work it is," growled the [illegible]

[illegible] half a block before he collided with Deacon Marsh. The deacon seized him by the shoulder and exclaimed:

"What do you mean, Bagshot, by inserting that scandalously untrue item about me?"

"Didn't insert any item," replied the Colonel.

"Don't sneak out of it that way. Why, I just said it out of the Union—listen:

"Religious Intelligence.—That whited sepulchre, Deacon Marsh, was noticed, late Saturday night, trying to open the coal-hole in front of his residence with his night-key. The deacon was full as a goat, and couldn't tell moonshine from green cheese."

"Now that's nice, ain't it saying that I was intoxicated Saturday night, when I went to bed at seven with a raging toothache?"

"It's that reckless fool whom I left in charge," groaned the Colonel. "I'll make it all right, Marsh," and Bagshot scurried on again only to be confronted by Major Blim.

The Major clutched him by the collar.

"Colonel," uttered Blim, in his deepest voice, "this is villainous. It's my intention, sir, to call out and shoot you through the heart. What the deuce do you mean by publishing this note in the Union:

"Military Jottings.—Major Blim, the tattered old beggar, who hid in an oyster barrel during the battle of Bull Run, wears a wig. He ought to be shot in the back with a baked apple."

"I can't help it, Blim," said Bagshot, wiping his forehead, "it's all owing to that young devil in the office. He has made a red-hot paper. Just wait, Major, and I'll fix things."

Then Bagshot started again. By the post office old Parker grabbed him.

"Oh, you unfeeling ghoul!" wailed Parker, "you ought to be rode on a rail. The idea of you making fun of my poor dead child!"

"How?"

"How! Have you the cheek to ask how? Maybe you didn't shove this into the Union, did you, you heartless hypocrite?"

OBITUARY.
Little Bennie Parker
Had a stomach pain,
Rhubarb and Ipecac
Both were in vain;
He kicked the golden bucket,
His parents' hearts are sore,
They'll bury him to-morrow,
At quarter to four.

Of course, Bagshot had to explain, and promised the bereaved father a two-column notice of the dead Benny's many virtues.

Hardly had he done so, before young Cooley appeared.

"Colonel Bagshot," announced he, "you're a lying scoundrel. This is a nice thing to put in your blackguard sheet about a young lady."

"Society Items.—Miss Cooley, the old hag on South street, waltzes around in a patent bustle, in the hope of catching a fellow. But she can't; not even if she lays the paint on twice as thick as she does now."

But Bagshot didn't stop to hear it. He flew across the square and into the Union office like a flash. No one was there. That able assistant editor, warned by friends unknown, had dusted forever. Lying on the desk was a Union, folded so that this notice caught Bagshot's eye:

"Literary Mems.—The bald headed old snipe who pretends to run this paper has gone to New York. We expect to hear every moment of his sentence to Sing Sing for arson and highway robbery. The citizens of Chodunk should congratulate themselves if the Colonel does not disgrace his village by being hung for infanticide!"

Bagshot never intends to employ another assistant editor, and journalists in search of a situation will find it healthy to keep away from him.

A farmer, when flagellating two of his unruly boys, was asked what he was doing. "Thrashing wild oats," was his reply.

Little four-year-old Mary complained to mamma that her button shoes were "hurting." "Why, Mary, you've put them on the wrong foot." Puzzled and ready to cry, she made answer. "What'll I do, mamma? They's all the feet I've got!"

"I shouldn't think there would be such a word as 'breakfast,'" remarked a young linguist to his mother the other morning. "Why not, dear?" asked she. "Because, ma," replied the boy, "it ain't natural. Things never break fast—they break loose."

THE NEEDS OF PLAINFIELD AND ITS SISTER TOWNS.

It must be by this time quite obvious to all of us, whether owners of real estate or not, that the strenuous efforts which are now being made by the capitalists of New York to build up the upper wards of that city, by means of the cheap and rapid transit lines of the elevated railroads, that we are in danger of having, in a year or two, a serious if not a vital blow struck that must materially injure the value of landed property and other important interests in all suburban towns on this side of the Hudson river.

The question then to be considered is, how the danger shall be combatted, and what means can be devised which will overcome so formidable an opposition. It is certainly an important subject to deal with and it is alike the interests of all the roads (having a terminus on the Western shore of the river near the great metropolis) and their patrons, that it should be met promptly and acted upon in such a manner as will protect the interests of both.

It is too much the custom (as everybody knows) with railroad officials to treat those (more particularly their steady patrons, the commuters) as if their interests were absolutely antagonistic, or as if the latter "had no rights which they were bound to respect;" hence a spirit of hostility is often engendered that is more or less injurious to the stockholders, who entrust the management of their property to those who are not so sensible as they ought to be of this fact.

An official in the employ of these roads is very prone to take a mean advantage of any one, who, perhaps, is not conversant with the rules, as we shall endeavor to show, and the act so rankles in the mind of the party thus injured that he resolves to gratify his revenge upon the Company on every occasion that presents itself whereby he can do it. If he happens to be a juror in a case in which its interests are involved, he is pretty sure to go against it; such cases have happened in the New England courts, and they are very likely to occur here.

A commuter, for instance, is unfortunate enough to lose his ticket, and it matters not how high he may stand as an honest and truthful man, no asservation of the fact that he has lost it, will enable him to obtain a duplicate, and he is thus compelled to pay over again the full amount or cease to use the road as a means of conveyance. Again, when commutation tickets were sold on the New York side only, the purchaser was forced to procure it there on the same day that the one of which he was then holder expired; if he omitted to do this he was obliged to purchase at the office in Plainfield his ticket for the city, where (after having paid for the new one entitling him to two transits per day for the month, except Sundays) he was unable to recover the seventy cents that he had overpaid, and he was thus mulcted out of it by an act so paltry as to be unworthy of a great railroad corporation.

It is also said that in case of the death of a commuter (who might have just purchased a yearly ticket) if his family apply for some return of the money or ask for its transfer to another member of the family, neither application is granted, the property is confiscated and added to other acquisitions of the like character, that confer no credit upon those who have the management of the concern.

The recent reduction of fares is too small to effect much good; a half a dollar reduction on a monthly ticket from Plainfield is not enough, it is a "mere sop to Cerberus" that does not satisfy those who are compelled to purchase them, nor is the scale fixed for excursion tickets low enough to invite increased travel.

It is idle, therefore, for the stockholders of the Central (with its heavy debt) ever to expect a resumption of dividends, unless they make it an object, by a reasonable and fair reduction of rates, to people to settle along its line of travel to more than supply the places of those who contemplate removing back to the city, by which new facilities will soon be afforded for the saving of time and money, especially in the latter, when the cost of marketing there, which is so much cheaper, is taken into consideration. We, therefore, suggest, lower fares, more speed for certain business trains, a total abolition of the mean, pinching extortions such as have been referred to, and the stockholders will be benefitted in the end; whereas under the policy which has been hitherto the governing one, that period will be a remote one indeed. The road is admitted to be by all who travel over it, a splendid one, excellently equipped, entirely free from dust at all seasons, with no fault as regards the regularity of the arrival or departure of the trains; its stations (surrounded by picturesque grounds) are handsome and patterns of order and neatness unsurpassed by those of any railroad on this continent; it only remains then for its owners to make it the interest of the citizens of New York to come out here and locate their homes, instead of settling down upon the still ungraded and undrained lands of the suburbs of that city. It can be done by establishing lower fares, which will not only benefit the Company itself, but every town that has a station on it, including last, not least, the city of Plainfield.

SENATE, NO. 167.

We are in receipt of a telegram from J. W. Yates, Esq., dated Trenton, March 12, which states that the above bill, relating to Plainfield has passed both Houses and been signed by the Governor. As this bill is now a law, and was made for the benefit of our city, our citizens should know its provisions; we therefore suggest to the Common Council, that they, at their next meeting, cause the same to be published, so that the people may know what they have to vote on when they are called upon so to do.

THE SPRING ELECTIONS.

Returns from the various Townships in Union County give the mortifying intelligence that the Board of Chosen Freeholders has changed its political complexion. Previous to Tuesday's election the Board stood 11 Democrats to 6 Republicans. Westfield, Fanwood and New Providence have returned Republicans to take the place of Democrats, Director Martine being beaten in Fanwood by only 7 majority. Dissensions and bickerings in and among the Democrats in Fanwood gave the Republicans the opportunity desired, and they elected their entire ticket with the exception of Town Clerk, Collector and one Constable, Mr. Thos. J. Nicholl being elected for the former office. Although claimed by the Republicans as a party victory, it is not so in the full sense of the word, as the Greenbackers, with 33 votes, voted the straight Republican ticket headed "Greenback, Labor Reform Ticket."—Mr. Nicholl's maj. was 26. The ticket elected received 2 maj. Geo. Squiers, Democrat, for Collector, was on both tickets. The Democrats cast 112 votes, the Republicans 81 and Greenbackers 33. The following are the names of the officers elected:

In Westfield the Republicans captured the Freeholder and a portion of the town officers, including the Town Committee. 428 votes were cast, 16 more than at last Fall election. John M. C. Marsh, Democrat, for Assessor, received 78 majority. He was also elected Constable. Chas. R. Clark, (the "little groceryman") for Town Clerk, was elected by a handsome majority. The following is the ticket elected:

Linden elected the Democratic ticket, except one Town Committee man.

Cranford went Democratic on Freeholder and a portion of the ticket.

Union goes Democratic.

Summit went Democratic by about 40 majority.

New Providence went Republican.

Springfield is Republican.

Clark also went Republican.

In North Plainfield there were two tickets in the field, one headed "Citizens," all Republican, and a mixed ticket of Democrats and Republicans, headed "Anti-Bond." The former ticket was elected as follows:

Judge of Election,
Thomas J. Young.
Inspector of Election,
Joseph N. Randolph.
Town Clerk,
William A. Schutt.

PLAINFIELD'S COUNTY DEBT.

According to the County Collector's Report in the Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, amount due the County from Plainfield for taxes, years of 1877-78, has been reduced since the last report of the Collector, Feb. 21st, about $2,700.

THE PUBLIC LAW COMMISSION.

Governor McClellan on Tuesday night last sent to the Senate the names of Leon Abbett, Barker Gummere, Frederick H. Teese, William J. Magie and John Clement, as the Commission to prepare a system of general laws for the government of cities. The nominations were immediately confirmed, as they should have been, for if there are any persons in the State who have the ability and the industry needed for the work designed, it is those whom the Governor has selected.—Trenton True American.

The Legislature is to adjourn sine die at noon to-day.

The Jersey City bridge bill was defeated in the House of Assembly on Wednesday last.

Wednesday last Gov. McClellan approved the bill increasing the jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace to $200, in all places where there are no District Courts.

We trust our Board of Health will not neglect their duty this Spring, and see that places where nuisances exist, are attended to and the evil remedied.

We fully agree with a writer in the Central Times—more money should be appropriated by Council for proper repairs on Streets, and also to keep them in a proper sanitary condition.

The N. Y. Herald, which once had the third-term fever very bad, has been interviewing Congressmen as to their choice for the Presidency. Hon. Miles Ross, from the Third District, said he had "really not given this important subject any thought yet. He was, however, for the man that will win, and he will have to beat Grant."

According to the Lenten regulations issued by Bishop Corrigan, of Newark, on Good Friday, for the first time in the history of the Diocese, which comprises the whole State, the members of the Roman Catholic Church will be required to observe what is known in Ireland and other parts of Europe as the "black fast"—that is, they must abstain from white meats, such as eggs, butter, cheese and milk.

The great walking match at Gilmore's Garden, New York, attracts thousands there daily. O'Leary, the champion, retired from the race on Wednesday evening, from causes stated to be exhaustion. The English walker, Rowell, is thus far ahead, with Harriman next, and Ennis last. It is difficult to tell who will win the six day's contest, but we believe in the end that Sir John Astley's belt will remain in America.—An overloaded gallery fell on Wednesday evening in the Garden, and several persons were severely injured.

An active canvass has already begun for the Speakership of the next House of Representatives. The principal candidates so far are Messrs. Randall of Pennsylvania, Cox of New York, and Blackburn and Carlisle of Kentucky. Mr. Randall leads all of the others, and the chances are largely in favor of his re-election. Twenty-four members who are re-elected, and who live at long distances from Washington, will remain in the city until the extra session. The revised statutes allow only two mileages for a Congress; and no mileage can be paid for an extra session without a special act.

Hon. F. S. Lathrop, Receiver of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, has submitted his annual statement of the operations of the road for the year 1878, and a most flattering exhibit it is to Mr. Lathrop's executive ability. The total income of the road, leased lines and branches, from all sources, was $5,5[illegible].73, the expenses were $3,266,75[illegible]; net earnings, $2,303,780,45. There was an increase in passenger receipts of $42,[illegible]72.42; in merchandise freight of $17,682.87; in miscellaneous receipts of $16,206.72; and a decrease in coal freight of $802,109.79, as compared with 1877.

Two more counties in New Jersey are to be heard from soon—Sussex and Hunterdon, where it is claimed Warren has had successful imitators. How can "irregularities" be accounted for in Democratic counties? To any one interested in the great "reform" party this becomes an important conundrum.—Central Times.

The above conundrum may be answered not very satisfactory to those directly interested when the "Committee of 25" commence investigations in certain Republican quarters, where sheep have not been known to thrive in years past. More in the future.

Daniel Porter, editor of the Somerset Unionist, died, at his residence in Somerville, on the evening of the 9th inst. Mr. Porter was widely known throughout the State as an able journalist and his loss to the fraternity will be deeply felt by them. He was an ardent party leader, a Republican, and has held offices of trust under the same.

An exchange hits the nail squarely on the head in speaking of "friends who are friends," and our long experience in the newspaper business causes us to fully endorse the truthful remarks. "There are friends who are friends; there are friends (?) too, who make great pretensions of friendship, who, when opportunity offers, are ready to give you a stab in the back, after the fashion of Mexicans. And there is a third class, the meanest of all, who, owing you favors by the hundred, and after making you profuse promises, desert you when the pinch comes, and leave you to struggle alone." For the first we have and ever shall retain a kindly regard; for the second a desire to protect our own corns; and for the third a feeling of profound contempt. However, as Sam Patch, Esq., used to say, "it's a very long lane that has no turns," and so you can put it on the petty ledger.

THE DEATH-RATE OF

Our country is getting to be fearfully alarming, the average of life being lessened every year, without any reasonable cause, death resulting generally from the most insignificant origin. At this season of the year especially, a cold is such a common thing that in the hurry of every day life we are apt to overlook the dangers attending it and often find too late that a fever or lung trouble has already set in. Thousands lose their lives in this way every winter, while had Boshee's German Syrup been taken, a cure would have resulted, and a large bill from a Doctor been avoided. For all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, Boschee's German Syrup has proven itself to be the greatest discovery of its kind in medicine. Every Druggist in this country will tell you of its wonderful effect. Over 950,000 bottles sold last year without a single failure known.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means for enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worried out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will make them as free from disease as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint is the direct cause of seventy-five per cent of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

MAXWELL—At Newark, Monday, March 10th, 1879, Mary E., wife of William Maxwell, aged [illegible] years, 5 months and 5 days.

With parched lips and short'ning breath
Our sister lay awaiting death.
Quite suddenly, as from a trance,
She gave an inquiring glance.

Wonder if Ida's at the brink?—
To help me cross the river, think!
I wonder if father I'll know?
Here we used to love him so.

Yes! I'll tell you where we'll meet—
Together at our Saviour's feet;
There we'll wait our kindreds coming,
God's so just and all forgiving.

Oh! dear children meet me there,
And my brothers hear my prayer;
Strive to gain an entrance through
The gate that's left ajar for you.

RUMORS are rife that Col. Geo. Miller, formerly of the City Hotel, will take Flagg's Hotel building on North Avenue about April 1st. It is now only a matter of difference in figures on rent. Mr. Miller would make a good tenant, and would be heartily welcomed to Plainfield again by his many friends here.

WHITNEY, the Dry Goods merchant whose advertisement appears in another column, will remove April 1st into the new and elegant store in Vandeventer's building, next to where he is now located. He will then open with a large new stock of goods, which will be sold at figures which should deter customers from going out of town to purchase.

THE entertainment given in the church at Union Village last Thursday evening, was marked by many pleasant features. The programme was well selected, and each individual performer executed his or her part in a highly gratifying manner to the audience. In the rendition of "The Trundle Bed" by Mrs. Locraft, the audience would not be satisfied until that lady twice more appeared before them in songs.

A LARGE number of spectators and several earnest bidders were in attendance at the executor's sale of the property belonging to the late Eldon Marsh, on Friday last.—The property on the corner of Front and Somerset Streets, in which is located the Messrs. Dunlap, Esq., for $14,700, and the brick block near the corner of Front and Grove Street, which is now used in part by Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co., and Green & Co., was sold to the same gentleman for $14,550. The sale of the unimproved property advertised was reserved to a future date.

Netherwood Hotel.

It is now generally conceded as a settled fact that Mr. Breslin will again assume proprietorship of the Netherwood Hotel about May 1st. Mr. Mower, the efficient manager of this popular house last summer will, it is understood, again assume control this season, which in itself, is sufficient to guarantee that the same will be conducted on first class principles.

He took 'em In.

A number of Raritan's citizens, who had visited Plainfield last Sunday to attend a funeral, became a little boisterous at the depot, and defied officer Michael Conway or Capt. Dodd to arrest them. When those officials attempted to arrest the ringleader, they were set upon by the whole party, and there were indications of a first-class row for a few moments, but Law and Order triumphed, and the ringleader, together with one of our city's hackmen, who interfered, were taken to Castle Dodd and allowed to cool off. Result, $10 fine for Raritan and $5 for Plainfield's participant.

Business Changes.

S. T. Varian will move before April 1st, his house furnishing goods store to the store now occupied by Mr. Whitney, who will remove his Dry Goods store to one of the new stores in Van Deventer's building next door. Mr. Blackford will occupy the store vacated by Mr. Varian as a candy store. The store occupied now by Mr. Gense in Voorhees' building will be occupied by Mr. Geo. Andrews as a Dry Goods Store. Mr. Gense retires from business. Alex. Runyon will occupy the present quarters of Swain who removes to Searing's recent quarters next to Force's Hotel.

Struck by Lightning.

During the prevalence of the thunder shower Saturday evening last, lightning struck the house of Mr. Reunie D. Runyon near New Market, utterly demolishing the lightning rod, taking out a small portion of the foundation of the house, entering the cellar, breaking every pane of glass out of the cellar windows, forcing the outside cellar-doors off their hinges and sending one of them several feet distant, beside doing other damage in the cellar. The castors were broken off parlor chairs and piano, stoves upset, shades and chimneys on lamps knocked off and broken, and the mischief in general played throughout the house. The family had retired for the night. Had they been down stairs where the damage was done, undoubtedly serious injury to some of them would have resulted.

Rapid Transit.

The Central Railroad has announced its intention to put on one fast train each way between Plainfield and New York, with the new time table which goes into effect about April 1st. The hour of departure from Plainfield to be the same as last Summer, 8:13 a. m., and from N. Y. at 4:30 p. m. This arrangement, it is claimed, by some people, will not afford accommodation to the large number of commuters who most used it, but rather to the few, who, having more time at their disposal, can better afford to spend it on way trains. As a result of this feeling, a number of enterprising individuals have gathered some statistics as to the times at which the largest number travel, and the stations to which they belong, supplementing their action by a petition, setting forth the fact that the majority of Plainfield commuters require to be at their places of business by 9 o'clock a. m., and cannot leave before 5 p. m., and asking Receiver Lathrop to so modify the proposed time table as that the two special trains granted shall leave Plainfield at about 8 a. m. and New York at 5:15 or 5:30 p. m. This petition is receiving many signatures of commuters only who now travel on the 7:31, 8:01 and 8:31 a. m. trains from Plainfield, and the 5, 5:15 and 5:30 p. m. trains from New York; a copy will also be found at the depot. If the figures as given below are a fair test, it would seem that the inference drawn is a correct one, and therefore, those who favor rapid transit, should endeavor to agree as to the hours named, regardless of their individual preferences, to the end that at least something may be gained, and an enemy to Plainfield silenced; until there is unanimity on this point, the Company will continue to study its own convenience in the matter of running trains, in ignorance of the unexpressed wishes of a majority of its patrons at Plainfield. The following table gives about the average number of passengers from the stations named, on the 7:01, 7:31, 8:01, 8:31 a. m. from Plainfield, and the 4:30, 5, 5:15 and 5:30 p. m. trains from New York:

THE next lecture of the Dulliber Society at the P. H. S., will be given at Assembly Hall, next Wednesday evening. We would advise all who wish to learn that which is thoroughly beneficial and at the same time very interesting, to invest the small sum of fifteen cents, thereby making glad the hearts of the "Dullibers" and encouraging them in their laudable enterprise.

LAST Saturday afternoon, Mr. Thos. McDonald hearing cries in the vicinity of Tier's Pond, hastened thither and found a small colored lad, named Johnson, struggling in the water. He had ventured on thin ice frozen over a hole cut in the same and having a skim of ice over it, and had fallen in. A companion was dancing about the spot in a paroxism of despair. Mr. Mc Donald rescued the lad from a watery grave, this being the second case of the kind with him this winter.

DUPREZ & BENEDICT'S Minstrels gave one of their pleasing entertainments at Laing's Hall last Wednesday evening to a crowded and respectable house. The local hits given by the "end men" were to the point and brought down the house. Mr. J. Gulick, as Middle Man, has but few if any equals, in traveling minstrel troupes. We trust that when our new "Vandeventer's Hall" is ready for occupancy, that some such first-class troupe may perform in it the opening night.

The Park House

The above popular house is being thoroughly renovated and re-furnished in anticipation of the induction into proprietorship of Mr. George B. D. Revere, now of the City Hotel, who will take possession of his new quarters about April 1st. With his 20 years experience in hotel life, and his record as proprietor of the hotel he leaves for the past two years, we doubt not but that he will successfully run the Park House the coming season. Already many applications have been made to him for summer board.

What a Detective Overheard.

Detective Bowe, of Jersey City, saw a woman come out of Moore's drug store on Newark avenue on Thursday last, and overheard her say, "I'll do it, I'll do it." He asked the clerk in the store what the woman had bought and was told that she had bought arsenic. He arrested her. She said she was Mary Ann McCoy, of Plainfield, that she had come to Jersey to have a man named O'Brien arrested upon his refusal to marry her and that having accomplished that, she had repented and taken to arsenic.—Eliz. Herald.

Fatal Railroad Accident.

Mr. Harry C. Marsh, once a well-known dry goods merchant, was killed just out of Rahway last night. He had been to New York with a party of friends and took the twelve o'clock train from that city home. His friends left the train at Rahway and supposed that Mr. Marsh also got off. He did not, however, as a freight train coming east soon after found his body cold and stiff between the tracks near Six Roads.

It seems that he must have fallen asleep, and having partially awoke, stepped from the train at the Amboy junction. The train had passed over one of his limbs, and he was dead when found. Mr. Marsh resided with his father-in-law, Mr. George [illegible], and since his retirement from business has been a book-keeper. He was well known and widely respected, and leaves a very interesting family. County Physician Terrill went up on the newspaper train early this morning, made an examination, and gave a permit for burial.—Elizabeth Daily Herald, Saturday, March 8, 1879

That Fast Train.

In answer to Mayor Harper's communication to Receiver Lathrop, regarding the proposed fast train between New York and Plainfield, and vice versa, the following answer has been received:

OFFICE RECEIVER C. R. R. of N. J.
NEW YORK March 4th, 1879.

HON. NATHAN HARPER, Mayor,
Plainfield, N. J.

Dear Sir: Your favor of 31 inst., with petition, duly received.

We are aware that the interests of the road are identical with those of the towns on the line of the Road, and particularly with Plainfield, and are anxious to do all we can to increase the travel and add to the comfort of our patrons.

Our present intention is to commence running a quick express train between Plainfield and New York on the first of April next, leaving Plainfield about eight o'clock, a. m.

We also propose to add to our Spring time table a return express train at a convenient hour in the afternoon, it being impossible to arrange for this train until our new table is prepared.

Hoping this may prove satisfactory, I remain

Yours respectfully,
F. S. LATHROP, Receiver.

The County Collector's Action.

County Collector Sheridan on the 25th of February obtained from Judge VanSyckel a rule to show cause in the Supreme Court against William D. Bruen, Treasurer of the city of Elizabeth, why a peremptory writ of mandamus shall not issue, commanding him to pay $56,608 56 forthwith to the County Collector.

At the same time, like writs were obtained against Robert C. Brewster, Treasurer of the city of Rahway, and against Joseph Janes, Collector of the Township of Linden.

Friday last testimony was taken in these three cases in Elizabeth. Mr. Leeds, Treasurer Bruen's clerk, testified that the amount due the county for 1878 for State, county and school tax was about $100,000, and that it had all been paid except $30,000. The Collector testified in corroboration of Mr. Leeds' statement.

In the Rahway case, it appeared that over $5,000 remained unpaid of the taxes of 1877, and that the city of Rahway owes the County Collector about $26,000 in all, and about $30,000 was all the money received for the last year.

In the case against the township of Linden, it was shown that the Collector, Mr. Janes, had paid to the county nearly all the money he had received for that purpose, although there is a balance due from the township for the losses of 1878 of over $3,000.

Personalia.

Thanks to Hon. Miles Ross for more documentary favors.

Jesse Bird, father of Morgan Bird, Esq., of this city, died on the 10th inst. at his home in Mt. Bethel, of pneumonia, aged 84 years. Mr. Bird was a staunch and life-long Democrat, and was universally esteemed by all who knew him.

Rev. E. P. Ketcham, pastor of the 1st Free Church of this city, will visit Florida and other portions of the South for a few weeks to come, in company with the two sons of ex-Mayor J. H. Evans, Louis and Charles, the former of whom is in ill health. We wish them a prosperous voyage and a pleasant visit.

Mr. J. M. Stiger has laid on our table specimens of the delicious oranges grown in Southern Georgia, where several of our young men are locating. They all report the climate elegant.

We acknowledge the receipt of a pair of mammoth lemons from our young friend and former townsman, Charles Overbaugh, who went to Jacksonville Fla., and settled there in business about a year ago.

B. P. Baldwin, Esq., General Passenger Agent of the C. R. R., accompanied by Mr. Hopkins, grandson of Judge Lathrop, sailed for Europe in the steamer "Montreal" of the Inman line, on Saturday last, to spend a number of months, "doing" Ireland, England and France.

Mansion House,

(Late City Hotel) Plainfield, N. J. This House will change its name and Proprietors after April 1st, and with the numerous improvements which will be made, it is the desire of the new management to make this "the Hotel" of Plainfield. Families who expect to close up housekeeping this Spring will find that they can live at this first-class Hotel cheaper than they can keep house. Transient, $2 per day. Mr. E. P. Thorn will have charge of the bar and billiard department. For further particulars call at Mansion House.

Dr. Terhune's Lecture.

Quite a large audience gathered in the Congregational Church last Thursday evening, March 6th, to hear what the Rev. Dr. Terhune had to say about the "Pagan Relics at Rome." We think the lecture was one of the most scholarly efforts to which we ever listened. Dr. Terhune was but just recovering from a bad cold, and that of course did not allow him to give the audience an exhibition of his wonderful oratorical delivery, but for all that, occasionally the lecturer would apparently forget his cold, and fairly hold his auditors spell bound with his eloquence.

Building in Plainfield.

There is considerable building going on in and about Plainfield, despite the depression of business. Mr. Isaac Milbourn, who is completing Vandeventer and Coward's fine store buildings on Front Street, has just received a contract to erect two large brick dwelling houses on 9th Street, near Crescent Ave., adjoining the two recently constructed by him for the late Hon. Mayor Male, also two commodious brick barns on same premises. Mr. Jeremiah Manning has the contract for the carpenter work. The same gentlemen also have the contract for the erection of a large frame building on Third Place for Wm. Swain, Esq.

Narrow Escape.

While Mr. David Demarest was driving his father's grocery wagon through Cherry Street on Monday last, the horse attached to same became frightened and commenced to kick and run. Finding that the animal was about to get the best of him, and deeming "self preservation the first law of nature," Mr. D. made a dive out of the back end of the wagon in front of Collier's jewelry store, but did not escape without receiving internal injuries. His companion, a colored man, named John Webster, grabbed the reins, but too late to stop the runaway. In turning the corner at Front Street, the wagon was overturned and one wheel broken from the axle, the same landing in the carriage of Esquire James Vredon, which was standing in front of the 1st National Bank. Had that gentleman been in the carriage, he would undoubtedly have been seriously if not fatally injured. As it was he had but a few moments before alighted from the same. The runaway horse freed himself from the wreck of the grocery wagon, and proceeded toward Brittin's Hotel, Scotch Plains. The colored gentleman was bounced in the air, and alighted in the middle of the street, minus one of his favorite front teeth, which will spoil his beauty forever. Fortunate it was that no more serious results happened. The accident did not interfere with the rush at Demarest's store.

Obituary.

The residents of Plainfield will regret to learn the death in their midst of one of its most estimable citizens, Mr. Horace Hotchkiss, at the ripe age of 79 years, which took place on Sunday morning last after an illness of a few days only. Mr. H. was a native of Connecticut, and a brother in law of the late Governor Dutton of that State; for many years he was engaged in an extensive manufacturing business in one of its most thriving towns (Waterbury) but he passed the latter part of his life in tranquil retirement at his pleasant residence on Front street, here. Though he retired from the busy scenes of active life many years ago, he still retained a lively interest in the progress of all new inventions and improvements; in the mechanical arts that have of late years advanced the prosperity of our country; he was a great reader, and his mind was richly stored with all the interesting events that have transpired in the world's history during his long and upright career. While in business he visited Europe, and in the great manufacturing towns of Birmingham, Manchester, Sheffield, &c., he devoted much of his spare time to a close examination of all the industrial establishments wherein machinery was used, and he returned to his native land not a little elated with the reflection that his own country was destined to occupy at no distant period a foremost rank as a manufacturing one, which it would continue ever after to hold. His private character was spotless, genial, hospitable, fond of children, whom he would stop to caress and say a kind word to. He will be long remembered by them as well as by all who knew him, more particularly by his neighbors, who will miss his familiar form and pleasant face so often seen on his way to and from the Post Office, and which will be seen no more. His remains were conveyed to Waterbury on Wednesday, and deposited in the family plot in the beautiful cemetery belonging to that town, a final resting place which he did much to create and embellish.

"Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages,
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages."

The following circular has been issued by the Adjutant General's office of the G. A. R.:

HEADQUARTERS GRAND ARMY REPUBLIC,
ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
NEW YORK CITY, Feb. 24, 1879.

Circular No. 3.

I. The following extract from a circular, issued by the War Department, is hereby promulgated for the information of those whom it may concern.

"It is probably generally remembered that some years ago (in 1873) Congress passed a law providing for the erection of durable headstones over the graves of soldiers of the regular and volunteer forces of the United States, whose remains are interred in the National Military Cemeteries. This law has been carried out, and the graves of the Nation's dead in these cemeteries are now permanently marked. At the instance of the War Department, Congress has recently authorized the erection of similar headstones over the graves of the Union soldiers who are buried in private and village cemeteries. This will be done as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made. In the meantime, the Quartermaster General at Washington, will at once proceed to collect the necessary information as to where these headstones are required.

"All persons having any knowledge of the burial places of soldiers in private cemeteries, whose graves are not marked, are requested to communicate the fact to the Quartermaster-General. Similar information is desired from parties in charge of such cemeteries.

"Of course, it is not intended to furnish headstones for graves over which monuments have already been erected by relatives or friends of the deceased."

II. The Commander-in-chief desires that the widest publicity shall be given to the above, and that Post Commanders endeavor to have the information and request contained therein published in their local newspapers.

By command of
JOHN C. ROBINSON,
Commander-in-Chief.

Valuable Property for Sale

Attention is directed to the advertisement in another column, of the Administrator's Sale of the Mill property of the late Phineas Randolph, which is one of the most valuable one of its kind in the State. The property must be sold to close up the estate.

FIRE MATTERS.

"No. 2" steamer was taken out for a trial at Grove Street bridge on Tuesday morning last, under charge of Engineer Gibbs. Engineer Hedden handled the throttle and did it well, the steamer throwing a handsome and effective stream. Everything is in first-class order in the department.

The election for two fire Commissioners, occasioned in consequence of expiration of term of office of Wallace Vail and Jacob Adams, occurs Monday, April 14th, and already are the boys selecting their candidates. At a regular meeting of Zephyr H. & L. Co. No. 1 on Monday evening last, Messrs R. K. Case and L. E. Barkalow were nominated as the choice of that Company. Wednesday evening Warren Engine Co. No. 3 nominated Wallace Vail and Jacob Adams.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. L. B. Boice courteously showed us through his mammoth grain storerooms on Somerset Street last Saturday, and it was a surprise to us to note the amount and magnitude of business carried on by him. The two upper stories of the large building are filled with grain and hay, which is continually being replenished after sales. Several men are constantly kept at work baling hay for home consumption. So great is the demand for the same that it is a difficult matter to keep stocked up with the article, which is of the very best quality. Mr. Boice is a popular, as well as a careful business man, and holds positions of trust voted him by the people.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

On Tuesday last an alarm of fire was raised in consequence of the barn of Mr. W. B. S. Taylor taking fire from sparks from a burning brush heap near by. The Truck Company promptly responded, but found their services not needed, as parties who discovered the fire had extinguished it after giving the alarm.

The Truck Company's span of mules rendered valuable service on the occasion of the alarm of fire last Tuesday. They resemble a pair of fleet antelopes when under full motion.

Scotch Plain's young and rising physician, Dr. Fithian, is daily increasing in practice. People who formerly would have none but the old resident practitioners, now patronize him.

The Baptist church is still without a pastor. It has been nearly six months since the Rev. Joseph C. Buchanan resigned, and during all this time they have been hearing different candidates for the vacant pastorate. Last Sunday the Rev. Henry B. Warring of Lake Mahopac, N. Y., preached for them, and as a preacher, gave universal satisfaction.

The venerable elder Jabez Swan, of Ct., (father of Rev. Chas. Y. Swan, D. D., of Newark) will preach at the Baptist church, this village, next Sunday morning and evening, 16th inst. Services begin at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Mr. S. himself has baptized by conversion nearly eleven thousand people.

Rev. B. F. Liepsner, A. M., of Red Bank, N. J., will deliver his very popular lecture on the "Humor and Pathos of Abraham Lincoln's Character," in the Baptist Church of this place next Monday evening, 17th inst., at 7½ o'clock. Admission, 25 cents. Proceeds for the church bell fund.

At the "road meeting" held in the Truck house last Saturday evening, Mr. Henry Goodman was elected Overseer of the Scotch Plains district for the ensuing year. It is well that a goodman has been elected to give us good roads.

It is reported that Mr. Wm. W. Elston has let his beautiful residence on Smalley Place to a Rahway gentleman, and that he has rented rooms of Mr. Wm. Cory on Park Ave., opposite the Baptist Church.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

[Under the above head we shall endeavor each week to give items and news of interest to the lovers of fishing, gunning, trotting, athletic and other sports. We shall be pleased to receive contributions or items for this column from all interested in such matters.]

There will be an adjourned meeting of The Central New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society held at Chamberlain & De Camp's Hotel, Saturday next, March 15th, at 7:30 o'clock, "sharp," at which it is earnestly desired that every member should be present, as business of interest and importance will come before said meeting.

W. H. STERLING, Pres't.
W. L. FORCE, Sec.

The regular monthly meeting of the New York Association for the Protection of Game was held last evening at the residence of Mr. Benjamin L. Ludington, No. 24 East Sixty-ninth street. There was a large attendance of members present, and Mr. Ludington had for his guests Mr. F. D. Tappen, president of the Gallatin Bank, and Mr. John T. Martin, of Brooklyn. Mr. Robert B. Roosevelt occupied the chair. Governor Robinson, in his annual message to the Legislature, commented on the condition of the game laws of the State, which are now so confused as to be almost inoperative, and suggested that a general law be enacted which would take in the salient points of those now in existence and harmonize those which conflicted. A committee of the New York Association, with Mr. Whitehead as chairman, was appointed to draft a bill, and the consideration of that report constituted the main business of last evening. Mr. Whitehead stated that the new law, as drafted, consisted of thirty-four sections, the most important amendment being the fixing of the open season to begin on October 15 for grouse, quail, woodcock, snipe, hares, rabbits, squirrels, &c. There was some little discussion on this point, which developed the fact that there was by no means a large majority in favor of fixing the date so late. Another section exempts woodcock during July. The next important point was in regard to having in possession game after the close of the season. The date fixed was the 1st of February, which allows one month to dispose of the stock on hand. English snipe were also added to the list of birds entitled to protection, and a general penalty of $25 for each offence was fixed, instead of a penalty at the end of each section.

A number of amendments was suggested by a committee appointed to confer with a like committee of the Fish Cultural Association, and were adopted. They were to the effect that no lobster less than ten and a half inches in length, no shad less than one pound, or blue or weak fish less than one-half pound shall be exposed for sale, under the penalty of $25. There was also an amendment intended to protect dealers, who, without intent to evade or defy the law, might innocently receive consignments of fish out of season. This was the case once with Mr. Eugene Blackford, who once received a consignment of Canada trout without advices from the consignor, the penalties for which, had he been prosecuted, would have been $30,000. The amendment was amended so that dealers so circumstanced will be relieved of the penalty by sending the fish back from whence they came as soon as they are received. The law, as framed however, is so stringent that it is questioned by many if it can ever pass the Legislature. Mr. Whitehead reported that three cases of violation of the game law had been prosecuted on behalf of the association. He also stated dealers having a large stock of game on hand on March 1 either stored it in cellars or disposed of it to German steamers, but it was difficult to get evidence enough to convict. Mr. Hallock, who was one of a committee of three appointed in 1875 to prepare a report on the best method of unifying the game laws of all the States, presented the report, which was filed. A communication was received from the President of the New Jersey Game Association asking for co-operation in the passage of a law which would be uniform in both States, and suggesting a convention of all the game associations of the country for the purpose of obtaining uniform laws throughout all the States.—N. Y. Herald, March 11, 1879.

As will be seen by the above taken from the New York Herald of March 10th, active measures are to be taken for the enactment of laws which shall conform with one another in different States, and that our home organization known as "The Central New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society" mean business, as the communication from its President, Col. Wm. H. Sterling, to the New York Society attests. The New Jersey Game Protective Societies are a unit in favor of a Congress or Convention of the Societies in the various States, whereby some good may result in having a law framed making the close season for game conform in States better than they now do.

At a meeting held March 10th, of the New Jersey Rifle Association it was decided to open Brinton Range, at Elizabeth, N. J., on the 15th of April. In the meantime they will erect a new short range butt for ten targets, increasing their facilities. Roads and pathways are to be laid out and macadamized. A new building for restaurant and club uses, is to be erected. The programme for the month of April will be published in a few days. This Range is now the only accessible one in this State that compares favorably with Creedmoor, and we hope the time is near at hand when it may be the Wimbledon of America.

A match was shot between the Green Village and Madison Gun Clubs, on the grounds of the former, at Green Village, Morris County, on Saturday, March 8th, Bogardus' Patent Explosive Target Balls being used, and thrown from a rotary trap. The Green Villagers came off victorious, breaking 36 out of 40 balls, the Madison Club 25 out of 40. This is the third public match shot by the winning club, while their opponents are an organization of several years standing, which speaks well for the accuracy of the Green Village marksmen.

Major Anderson, of Trenton, one of the most active and painstaking of the Fish Commissioners, is about to place 10,000 land-locked salmon fry in Silver Lake, Morris County, located between Green Village and New Vernon. The Lake is almost a mile long, with steep, wooded sides.

The fact that the law passed last Winter prohibiting fishing through the ice on Budd's Lake, Morris County, has been rigidly enforced should make good fishing there next season. The season opens on the first of May, when fishermen from far and near cover the pond, and not a boat is left unoccupied.

Members of the "Plainfield Gun Club" are hereby notified that there will be a meeting of the Club held at Force's Hotel, Plainfield, the evening of Tuesday, March 18th, at half past 7 o'clock. Business of importance.—Be on hand, every member who wants to shoot.

F. C. FITHIAN, Pres't.
W. L. FORCE, Sec.

It is unlawful to catch pickerel from the waters of this State during the months of March and April, and black bass during April, May and June. The law for trout and salmon trout was off the first of March.

Notice.

The annual School meeting of Dist. 38, North Plainfield, will be held at the School House, Tuesday evening, March 18th, at 7:30 o'clock, at which meeting will be submitted the question of voting a tax to maintain a free Public School the coming year. All legal voters are requested to attend.

JOINT RESOLUTION NUMBER I.

In respect to the commercial relations between the United States and other countries.

Whereas, the government relations which at present subsist between the United States and South America are mainly of a political nature; and whereas, the special arrangements of a commercial kind now existing between us and the said South American states are very limited; and whereas, a more liberal policy and practice would tend to forward and secure the commercial supremacy of the United States, and assist the more perfect enforcement of the laws of trade; and whereas, from her geographical position, New Jersey's commercial interests are paramount to all others; and whereas, it seems but consistent with the dictates of prudence that we should prepare, beforehand, to reap our share of the benefits that can be made to accrue from the revival of trade; therefore,

1. Be it resolved by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in conformity with the desirability and in view of the possibility of securing these objects, the United States senators in congress from New Jersey, be and they are hereby instructed, and our representatives are requested to urge upon the general government the appointment of suitable agents to these South American states where no such agents now are, whose duty it shall be to collect and arrange in tabular form the statistics of the various commercial articles and native products of an exportable character, together with the relative distribution of the same among the various European nations in which they find a market, and report the same to the general government at an early day, in order that measures may be taken to advance, by means of treaties, the mutual commercial interests existing between the said several South American states and the United States.

2. And be it resolved, That the governor of this state be and he is hereby requested to transmit copies of this resolution to the President and vice president of the United States, and to the governors of the several states whose legislatures are now in session, and to invite their co-operation in the method and object proposed.

Approved February 17, 1879.

Smalley's Defiance Asparagus.
NEW VARIETY.
The merits and claims of the "Defiance," are as follows: It is earlier, a larger grass, softer, more tender, free from wood, the flavor sweet and very delicate, far superior to all other varieties: It will produce double that of the "Colossal" and can cut it longer. It will continue to grow longer than any other sorts. It has been tested for the past three years. I know my roots and seeds to be strictly pure, as I am the sole originator of it; shall not cut any seed in the market this year, as I intend planting it myself. It is the best Asparagus grown, either for private use or for market. We would recommend it in preference to all others. Price $3 per 100, and $20 per 1000. No charge for boxes or packing.—Purchasers pay their express. Orders must be accompanied by a remittance, or satisfactory reference. Will be sent by express C. O. D.
ABRAHAM SMALLEY, Bound Brook, N. J.
We, the undersigned, have tested the above variety of Asparagus, and unhesitatingly recommend it as all that is claimed for it, in fact it is a marvel in the shape of this delicious vegetable:

CAUTION!
The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.:
"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Thos. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.
